Who Says This Observer Can't Pick a Winner?

Maybe now, he'll realize I can't be wrong all the time.

The boss, I mean.

Sure he knows my track record.

But did he have to become upset when I came up with calculations last week which told me Edmonton Eskimos would win in the Grey Cup Final?

How was I to know he had already put some money on Eskimos?

No doubt he'd been cleaning up by betting the opposite way I pick 'em. This time, he didn't wait long enough and it worked to his advantage.

That is it did unless he played it safe and told out some more coin of the realm on Alouettes after learning Edmonton was my choice.

I could have told him.

Once in a great while I get lucky.

There were the New York Giants in the 1956 World Series. The Pittsburgh Pirates in 1960. And darned if I didn't report here that Philadelphia Flyers would repeat as Stanley Cup champions long before the hockey showdown got started in May.

Luck?

That's all it is.

Eskimos' defensive end Ron Estay confirmed it after the game that the ball hadn't missed by much on that wide field goal attempt by Ali' Don Sweet when it appeared Edmonton once again was doomed to disappointment.

"About an inch wide" was Estay's estimate.

I said in my prognostications last week that Edmonton's Dave Cutler would make the difference. All he did was account for the champs' nine points on three field goals, one a 52-yard boomer which established a new record for Grey Cup competition.

But even so, Sweet had to miss on the big one which would have turned the tide, in order for Ray Jauch to finally nip the bobby from the mug.

But from my easy chair, it appeared Sweet might be excused for missing the mark. Didn't Jimmy Jones have trouble fielding the ball when he was attempting to spot it for his mates? The time it took Jones to find the handle on the ball and tee it up for Jones could be what cost Ali the title.

At any rate, Sweet's effort turned sour. An inch or a mile wide, the result was the same. Ali has to settle for one point instead of the three a 54 loss instead of a 10-9 victory.

The way Eskimos' offence continued to throw away glowing chances created by an excellent effort by the club's defence, perhaps there isn't any justice.

But believe me, we'll take it.

Lions Midgets Keep Championship at Home

By TOM GAVEY
Sports Staff

Ad underdog going into the Belleville Lions Major Midget hockey tournament, the Belleville Lions came out on top Saturday, taking the "A" Championship at the Memorial Arena. The final game was all Belleville's, as the team defeated Ottawa by a 7-3 score.

The big gun for the locals in the final, and throughout the tournament, was Bobby Crawford. He scored four goals including the winner to make the difference for the Belleville squad. Peter Pollard, Paul Hopkins, and Ron Bunton added the other markers.

There was no question from the beginning as to who would take the contest, as Belleville shot up a four goal lead early and looked poised throughout the game. Particularly strong on the defence were the duo of Gary Coegan and John Taylor. Coegan moved the puck up, while Taylor made it rough for opposing forwards in Belleville end.

In goal for Belleville was Bruce Hamilton, who had another fine game. A number of lions when the locals were in penalty trouble Hamilton came up with the big stop.

Crawford's four goals gave him a total of 10 goals in three games Belleville played. Another top point getter was John Jiaspopolous, who had two assists in the final, and was a classy playmaker all the way.

For the winners Mike Piquette scored twice, in the opening moments to set the pace for the rest of the contest. Also scoring for the winners were Claude Keen, Paul Marshall, Dave Ezard and Brian Fontaine.

Particularly impressive for Cornwall was Marshall, who was at least a foot shorter than most of his counterparts. Still he played a regular shift and piled penalties. Ron Ingram was also impressive, his play on the defence, especially in the late moments of the game, kept Peterborough from scoring.

For the Petes, goals came from Dale Wilson, Gerald Marney, Gerard Cowie and Wayne Mulcaney.

Cornwall led in minor penalties, with nine, while Peterborough has six men penalized.

In the "C" championship things were rougher, as a number of Ottawa players and one Belleville player were ejected from the game.

At one point, Ottawa actually removed the team from the ice, but soon realized the error in that procedure.

Keeping the game in control, especially in the final moments, was not easy. Credit should go to referees John Emerson and Lanny Hegadorn.

Coach Rob Burrowes and manager Jerry Murphy had kind words for their club.

It was this Ottawa team that defeated Belleville 12-0 earlier in the year. The Lions squad could have been psyched out by that loss, but instead, came out like gangbusters to take the early lead.

How Teams Fared in Tourney

KINGSTON 8, YARDMEN 2

After playing a fine game against Trenton on Friday evening, the Belleville Yardmen Minor Midgets were trounced by Kingston 8-2 on Saturday. The loss blocked the Yardmen out of the semi-finals, with only Jordy Rushbrook scoring for the Yardmen. Matt Murray scored three times for the winners, Reg Wallen had a two goal performance and Kingston was Tim Anderson, who played a fine game.

BURLINGTON 4, TRENTON 0

Burlington defeated Trenton 4-0 in "A" series play, with a fine effort from goalie Mitch Taylor, who registered the shutout. Scoring for the goals were Art Joyce, Glen Duncan and two goal scorer Dan Fulcanani. Although Trenton tried hard, the losers were allowed almost to a halt by the much bigger Burlington team.

DAVE CUTLER

CALGARY (CP) — The first Grey Cup game without a touchdown in 25 years was played out in sub-freezing weather Sunday as Edmonton Eskimos edged Montreal Alouettes 9-8 in a defensive struggle that left all the scoring to the two field-goal kickers.

It was the first Grey Cup since 1908 for the Eskimos, who had lost two in a row, dropping a 32-12 decision to Ottawa Rough Riders in Toronto in 1973 and losing 23-7 to the Alouettes last year in Vancouver.

The victory saved Edmonton from suffering the humiliation they had administered to the Alouettes in 1954, 55 and 56 when they defeated Montreal in three successive Grey Cup games.

The last time a Canadian Football League final was played without a touchdown was in 1927 when Toronto Argonauts defeated Winnipeg Blue Bombers 4-3.

The temperature at game time was -26-below and, with a chilling wind of seven to 12 miles an hour, it gradually dropped, causing considerable discomfort for the crowd.

Attendance was announced at 32,332 but some fans left as early as the end of the first quarter and others—their tickets arrested from getting to free-zones and kick-time shows 2:16 to go.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who attended the game with son Michael, presented the Grey Cup to Eskimo co-captains Ron Estay, Larry Highbaugh, Tom Wilkinson and Bob Howes.

It was the first Grey Cup ever held in Calgary and the Stampeders' city, celebrating its centennial, arranged big, colorful pre-game and halftime shows in spite of the bitter cold.

The game itself, in which Dave Cutler of Edmonton kicked three field goals including a Grey Cup record 50-yarder to put the Eskimos ahead 9-7 at the end of the third quarter, was not decided until the final minute.

With 45 seconds left in the fourth quarter, the Alouettes were on the Edmonton 11-yard line on third down. Don Sweet, who had kicked two field goals and a single on a wide field goal attempt, lined up to try again from the 19 on a three-pointer that would have given Montreal the victory.

But quarterback Jimmy Jones had trouble with the snap from centre and the field goal try went wide, rolling to the dead-ball line for another single that left the Alouettes one point short of tying the game.

DON SWEET

Four Grey Cup Records Fall

CALGARY (CP) — Despite the dimmed offensive success of Montreal Alouettes and Edmonton Eskimos in Sunday's low-scoring Canadian Football League final, the game ended with four new Grey Cup records.

Kicker Dave Cutler, whose three field goals prevailed all the scoring Edmonton needed to defeat Montreal 9-8, set a record for longest field goal with a 50-yard precision kick only 18 minutes after the Alouettes' Don Sweet set the previous record.

Sweet, whose single and two field goals were the total Montreal scored, had kicked a 47-yarder that surpassed the mark of 44 set by Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders in 1973. Both kicks Sunday were aided by a wind of about seven to 12 miles an hour.

The 31-year-old Montreal kicker set a record four career Grey Cup field goals tied into the game and now holds the record with six.

Cutler's three moved him into second place in the career category behind the 30-year-old schoolteacher added to the total he got in the 1973 Grey Cup. During 1975 regular play, he set a single-season CFL record of 40 field goals.

Together, the two kickers tied the record for field goals in a Grey Cup game, equalling the five scored by Winnipeg Blue Bombers and Ottawa in 1941.

The Alouettelh flamboyant superstar Johnny Rodgers, turned in what was for him a relatively modest performance, but nevertheless set a Grey Cup record for longest punt return when he ran one punt back 38 yards.

The previous record, set by Edmonton Larry Highbaugh on a 33-yard run last year, came between the rule change allowing blocking on punt returns.

Rodgers, who set a CFL single season record this year with 912 yards on punt returns, also tied a Grey Cup record in the category for most yards on punt returns to a single Grey Cup game. His 72 yards on seven returns Sunday put him behind the record he set by Winnipeg Ron Lancaster's 80.

When defensive back Lewis Cook intercepted a Bruce Lemmerman pass Sunday, he gave Montreal the team record for Grey Cup interceptions, tied in the six Grey Cup matches Alouettes have played in.

Earlier, Highbaugh had stated a Jinx—that he'd gone five his team a temporary tie with Montreal for the former record of two interceptions.

One mark that was far from being broken, however, was the record for low scoring. That was set in 1921, when Toronto Argonauts edged Sarnia Imperials 4-3. An identical score came in 1937, when Toronto defeated Winnipeg.

Other low-scoring games have included St. Hyacinthe-Donnacona Navy over Hamilton Wildcats 7-6 in 1944, Winnipeg over Ottawa 8-7 in 1939, Ottawa over Toronto Balmy Beach 8-3 in 1924, and Toronto RCAF Hurricanes over Winnipeg RCAF Bombers 8-0 in 1942.

The Eskimo victory tied Montreal and Edmonton with four Grey Cup victories each, behind Toronto Argonauts' seven, and, right, Toronto at 10 and Hamilton at 11.

Top Offensive Player Didn't Expect Award

CALGARY (CP)—Steve Ferrughelli, 26-year-old fullback of Montreal Alouettes voted the best offensive player in Sunday's Grey Cup game, did not really expect the award.

"I never thought they would give an award like that to a losing team," Ferrughelli said after the Alouettes dropped a 9-8 decision to Edmonton Eskimos.

"I always thought the winners got it, to be honest with you. OK, great, they recognized it, but hell, which I did, and

Honors For Losers

CALGARY (CP) — Dave Cutler, whose three field goals gave Edmonton Eskimos the Grey Cup with a 9-8 win Sunday over Montreal Alouettes, was named the outstanding Canadian of the game.

Steve Ferrughelli of Alouettes bruising fullback, was selected top offensive player of the game while his team-mate Lewis Cook received the top defensive player award.

Cutler receives a free trip anywhere CP Air flies Canada Bell and Cook both win $10,000 savings bonds.

Cutler kicked field goals of 41 yards, 23 yards and 51 yards to account for all the Edmonton scoring. His third kick broke the game record of 47 yards set earlier Sunday by Don Sweet of Montreal. Going into the game, the record belonged to Gerry Organ of Ottawa Rough Riders who set it in 1973 against the Eskimos.

Ferrughelli paced the Alouettes offence with 85 yards in 13 carries. He also caught two passes for 30 yards.

Sale Of Als Reported

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette quotes unnamed sources as saying that Sam Berger is about to sell Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League to French-Canadian financier Paul Desmarais.

Despite denials of a sale by Berger himself, in Calgary for the Grey Cup game, and Edmonton Eskimos 9-8 over the Alouettes in the interception, the says negotiations are near an agreement.

The Gazette quotes the sources as saying the team will be sold to Power Corp., controlled by Desmarais, for $1 million, with Berger remaining on as a "general partner," holding 10 per cent of the stock in the team he purchased in 1968.

Since then Berger has lost more than $1 million trying to make the team the winning proposition it has become, the newspaper says.

All that's holding up the deal, The Gazette says, is the insistence Berger receive an interest-free loan of seven years, at 10 years, to recover the money he's invested in the squad.

Work of Specialty Teams Gets Credit for Victory

CALGARY (CP) — Specialty teams drew most of the praise in the winners' dressing room Sunday after Edmonton Eskimos nipped Montreal Alouettes 9-8 to win their first Grey Cup championship since 1956.

"We knew what we had to do," said linebacker Dan Kepley of the often-maligned defensive unit. "The specialty teams did their jobs better than anybody."

Kepley, who arrived late in the season to replace the injured Sam Britts as middle linebacker, said the key to Edmonton narrow victory over the club control of Johnny Rodgers on punt and kickoffs.

"Sure, he broke one, but he's a superstar and superstars have quick moves like that. We did a good job on him. Don't forget, he's the best kick returner in this league and every other time we shut him down.

Kepley said much of Edmonton praise for victory belongs to was devoted to "the kind of little things it has to do to win.

"One little thing, he said, "led to the snap bobbled by Jimmy Jones in the final minute when a 19-yard field goal attempt by Don Sweet was missed.

"Give the credit to Tom Lapinski," said Kepley, praising the defensive tackle who returned to the game after bobbling off in the third quarter with an ankle injury.

"The Montreal centre (Wayne Conrad) knew Lapinski was coming over him on the play and maybe he was too cocky," said Kepley. "Lapinski's smoking a big victory cigar.

The subject of getting a man over the centre is to make him respect you. Maybe the man holding the ball didn't get it down right. I don't know, but I believed that the centre knew he was going to get hit."

Ignoring the fact that cold, windy conditions had helped prevent either team from scoring a touchdown, the Eskimos were convinced they have come back to win even if Sweets field goal had been good.

"I've got so much confidence in this team that I knew we weren't going to lose," said quarterback Bruce Lemmerman, who was forced out of the game with a sprained left ankle at the end of the third quarter.

"I knew the offence hadn't scored a touchdown but I knew we could."

The circulatory problem in Lemmermans hand was aggravated by the cold. He was able to start the third quarter with warm hands after leaving the dressing room at half-time.

"I knew I had to use him then if we wanted a change of pace, said coach Ray Jauch. "His hand was cold when he came out of the game but it got warm at the bench. If we had needed him for the last few plays he could have gone in."

Before accepting the congratulations of losing coach Marv Levy, Jauch praised the Alouettes for their conduct during the game and during their sign as Grey Cup champions.

They played a great game. We have to remember there is always a next year. So there is a little grateful and we have to continue to work.

Jauch has said the Eskimos will be strong at next year because several players, including Ron Estay, Larry Highbaugh, Tom Wilkinson and Bob Howes, will be back after a 10-game layoff.

Lemmerman and halfback Roy Bell were scheduled to see doctors this week about treatment of medical problems. Lemmerman hopes medication and rest can clear his kidney problem, and Bell is expected to undergo surgery for probable torn ligaments in his right knee. He played in the first the fourth quarter, one play after a 32-yard gain, the longest of the game.

Tom Wilkinson, who started and finished as quarterback, drew attention to himself considered the key to the championship.

"I wish you would stop talking to me and talk to the defence and the offensive line," said the specialty teams. They got us here and they won the game for us.

Kepley, the last Edmonton player to shower, padded himself in his full uniform for more than an hour after the game.

"I'm not taking off this uniform," he said. "I'm probably going to jump into the hotel pool in it. I may even sleep in it.

'Shadow' Handcuffs Dionne On His Return to Olympia

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Danny Polonich turned Marcel Dionne's return to Detroit into a nightmare Saturday night.

Polonich, an obscure Detroit Red Wing rookie, checked the high-priced Dionne to a standstill and the Wings stunned Los Angeles Kings 4-1 in a National Hockey League game.

The first Detroit appearance of Dionne in a Los Angeles uniform drew the second largest crowd of the year at the Olympia and most of the 16,500 fans who turned up expected to came to boo Dionne.

Dionne made public his distaste for the city of Detroit when he played out his option with the Wings last year, but he still managed to produce a team record 121 points despite his unhappiness.

When he signed a multi-year contract with the Kings, Los Angeles had to send Terry Harper and forward Dan Maloney to the Wings as compensation.

In Sunday's other NHL games, New York Islanders edged California Seals 3-2, Toronto Maple Leafs tied Boston Bruins 3-3 and Kansas Cities Scouts 6-2.

On Saturday, Vancouver Canucks and Chicago Black Hawks tied 1-1, St. Louis Blues whipped Detroit 5-1, Pittsburgh Penguins downed Los Angeles 6-2, Montreal Canadiens beat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2, Atlanta Flames defeated Minnesota North Stars 8-3, New York Islanders dropped Kansas City 5-2 and Philadelphia Flyers trimmed New York Rangers 4-1.

The Detroit fans saved their biggest cheers for Polonich who held Dionne scoreless and wiped out a 1-0 Los Angeles lead when he scored in the third minute of the second period.

Walt McKechnie added two goals and Al J. Arbour, also acquired from Denver Spurs of the World Hockey Association one for the Wings. Bob Berry scored for Los Angeles.

Comets Whip Lancers

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers defeated Orillia Terriers 9-3 in Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action Saturday before a crowd of 460.

On Saturday, Barrie downed Cambridge Hornets 5-3.

Meanwhile in Whitby, Howie Menard resigned his playing and player-coach's role of the Warriors but will remain with the team as a player.

Dave Nicholishen, who retired as coach last season, will assume Menard's duties immediately.

Menard said in a letter to team president Jack Simmons that he is retiring to devote more time to his playing.

Mike Keenan announced that he will quit as team player manager of the Warriors to continue as a player only. Al Arbour, strong, treasurer of the team, will become manager.

Comets 6 Lancers 5

Nepanee Comets got two goals each of 5-6 and 5-6 en route to its fourth successive win.

Haddon's goal early in the third period ended the minutes of shutout goaltending by Nepanee's Steve Rose.

John Tonelli Sets Pace As Aeros Find the Range

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Tonelli is ready to play with the grownups.

The 18-year-old rookie scored his sixth and seventh goals of season Sunday night to help Houston Aeros to an impressive 4-0 victory over Quebec Nordiques in a World Hockey Association game.

It was the third win in a row for the Aeros, who are beginning to show the patterned style of play that has given them the last two WHA championships.

Goalie Ron Grahame stopped 31 shots to shut out the Nordiques, by far the highest-scoring team in the WHA, with 224 goals in 22 games.

In Sunday's other games, Winnipeg Jets edged New England Whalers 3-2 and Phoenix Spurs downed Cincinnati Stingers 5-3.

On Saturday, Cleveland Crusaders tripped Winnipeg 6-3, Quebec stopped Cincinnati 4-1, Calgary Cowboys stopped Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-3, Edmonton Oilers edged San Diego Mariners 3-2 and New England outlasted Phoenix Roadrunners 7-6.

Tonelli came to the Aeros this season amid controversy over his defection from Toronto Marlboros while he was still eligible to play for the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A club.

The Marlboros are still fighting in the courts to get back Tonelli, who scored 46 goals himself and assisted on 86 others last season.

In Sunday's game, Gordie Howe and Jan Popiel set up both of Tonelli's goals. Glen Sharpley and Frank Hanna of Howe were the other Houston scorers.

The Aeros, who had been struggling to win more than half of their games, improved their record to 11 wins and seven defeats with their three consecutive wins.

A Hartford crowd of 9,274 saw Bobby Hull score Winnipeg's first goal, then set up the third-period goal by Ulf Nilsson that broke a 3-3 tie.

Nilsson also drew an assist on Hull's goal. Peter Sullivan was the other scorer. Ron Climie and Brad Selwood scored for New England.

Selwood scored his fifth goal of the season midway through the second period. Glen added his 12th in the last period as the Spurs stopped the Stingers before a Denver crowd of 4,231.

Gary MacGregor, Larry Bignell and Blan Lavender were Denver's other scorers. Dennis MacNeil, Dennis Sobchuck and Claude Laose scored for Cincinnati.

Americans Get Even

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Americans' decision to trade goalie Don Edwards to Buffalo Sabres for a second-round draft choice backfired Sunday as Edwards posted a 3-0 shutout and Rochester Americans' Jim Koleff scored a goal in the first period to lead Rochester to victory over the Bears, who had been the Americans two earlier encounters this season.

In other games, Nova Scotia Voyageurs and Richmond Robbins played to a 2-2 tie, Providence Reds edged New Haven Nighthawks 5-4, Saturday's other game, Richmond downed Springfield Indians 6-3.

Rochester bombed Bears' goalie Don Edwards with 18 shots in the opening period as Hershey sank to a 4-0 deficit. Hershey finally got on the scoreboard with two second-period goals from Gary McAdam and Steve Cardwell. But Murphy and Menard also scored for Rochester in the second period.

Knights Crowd Leaders

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rookie Jim McKay scored early goals and linemate Yvon Rowe had two assists, leading London Knights to a 9-1 victory over Ottawa 67s in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action Sunday.

The victory stretched London's unbeaten streak on home ice to 11 games and moved them to within two points of Hamilton Fincast, Emms Division leaders.

In other action, Sudbury Wolves battled to a 4-4 tie with St. Catharines Black Hawks and Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds defeated Oshawa Generals 7-4, Toronto Marlboros downed Peterboro Petes 6-3 and Kingston Canadians defeated Ottawa Generals 7-4, Plborough Lakers 6-4, Windsor Spitfires 5-3 and Hamilton Fincast 5-2.

League play resumes Tuesday with the Knights travelling to Windsor and Ottawa visiting Hamilton.

At St. Catharines, Rod Schutt's third goal of the game and 28th of the year gave the Wolves a draw before 1,138 spectators.

The tie extended Sudbury's unbeaten streak on the road to seven games, including six wins.

In addition to Schutt's three-goal effort, Mike Palmateer scored once for the Wolves. Ron Wilson, Doug Calnes, Kevin Kenney and Tom Rendall replied for St. Catharines.

The Hawks took a 2-1 first period lead and led 4-3 after two.

Sudbury outshot St. Catharines 45-28, with the widest margin in the first period when the Wolves peppered Hawk goaltender Kevin Wallace with shots. Jim Gardner was in the nets for Sudbury.

Greyhounds 7 Generals 4

The Greyhounds, playing their third game in as many nights, turned the tables on a third-period effort at Oshawa to register their fifth win.

The Generals held a 3-1 first-period lead but the Greyhounds came back to open up a 5-2 second-period margin.

Mike Kaszycki and John Tonelli each scored two goals for the Sault, with singles from Mike Hordy, Gord Lorimer and Dave Gardner.

Each club had 42 shots on net before a crowd of 2,077.

Marlbores 5 Greyhounds 3

Mark Murphy led Toronto to the upset Saturday with two goals. Bernie Johnston, Mike McEwen and Cary Farelli had one goal apiece.

Romano Carducci, Vince Fryia and John Tavares replied for the Greyhounds.

Goaltenders for both teams had busy afternoons with the Greyhounds outshooting the Toronto club 41-34 before a crowd of 3,167 at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Bengals Lose Ken Anderson

Cleveland Shocks Cincinnati

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS — The playoff picture in the National Football League was scrambled still further Sunday as the Cincinnati Bengals, in the middle of the tightest divisional race in the National Football League, suffered a shocking 35-31 loss at the hands of the previously winless Cleveland Browns.

Worse, Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson, who had been slicing up Cleveland's secondary the way he's cut up just about every other pass defence, was knocked out of action with a bruised chest. The extent of the injury was still in question today.

Miami Dolphins wish there was a question about the soundness of quarterback Bob Griese's injury—but there isn't. He's out for the rest of the season and scheduled to undergo surgery today to repair a torn tendon in his right big toe.

Web Griese out and Earl Morrall ineffective, Baltimore Colts rallied for a 23-17 victory, but it was a costly one for the Colts' two quarterbacks. Bert Jones suffered bruised ribs. Like Anderson, Jones' status was uncertain.

In Sunday's other games, Atlanta Falcons beat Denver Broncos 30-21, Minnesota Vikings defeated San Diego Chargers 29-13, Buffalo Bills humbled New England Patriots 45-31, St. Louis Cardinals whipped New York Jets 37-6, Oakland Raiders rousted out Washington Redskins 26-23 in overtime, Dallas Cowboys defeated Philadelphia Eagles 27-17, Los Angeles Rams routed Chicago Bears 38-10, Green Bay Packers crushed New York Giants 40-14, Kansas City Chiefs beat Detroit Lions 24-21 in overtime and San Francisco 49ers slipped past New Orleans Saints 16-13.

Tonight, Pittsburgh Steelers are at Houston Oilers with first place in the American Conference's Central Division at stake.

Mike Phipps completed 23 of 36 passes for 238 yards and two touchdowns to lend the Browns their upset win over Cincinnati.

The Colts, with their fifth successive victory, moved within a game of the Dolphins in the AFC East—and right into the playoff picture.

Marty Domres replaced Jeno and kept the Colts moving—although it was really Lydell Mitchell and Don McCauley who kept them going. Mitchell ran for 108 yards, 32 of them for a touchdown, and McCauley scored three times from one yard out.

Atlanta quarterback Steve Bartkowski, returning from four weeks of inaction due to a dislocated shoulder, plunged for three early interceptions and threw two touchdowns to Alfred Jenkins.

Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton completed 26 of 32 passes against San Diego to run his career total to 2,941, surpassing Johnny Unitas' record of 40,239.

Running back Chuck Foreman rushed 33 times for 127 yards and three touchdowns to help keep Minnesota unbeaten.

Buffalo, also a game back of Miami, rode O.J. Simpson's four touchdowns past New England.

Terry Metcalf's two touchdown runs, one on a 52-yard screen play, and Jim Hart's two scoring passes to Mel Gray, one of them a 74-yard pass, sparked the Cardinals.

Oakland's George Blanda missed a 23-yard field goal in the waning seconds of regulation play, then hit from 17 yards out in overtime to down the Redskins.

Retains Title

DURBAN, South Africa (Reuter) — Canada retained the Commonwealth Trophy amateur team golf title Saturday, beating New Zealand on the third and final day of the four-country match-play tournament. Canada and Britain finished the tournament tied at two points each but Canada retained the trophy because the Canadians had a total of 16 matches to Britain's 12. The team of Robbie Jackson, of Montreal; Ken Tanaka, Edmonton; Dave Webber, Dartmouth, N.S.; Cec Ferguson, Victoria, and Doug Rattenbury and Jim Nellard, Vancouver, beat the New Zealanders 7½-1½.

Canada's Return To World Hockey Expected by '77

TORONTO (CP) — Canada has made a commitment to return to the world hockey championships in 1977, The Sun reported Sunday.

The newspaper said the agreement was made Saturday by Canadian hockey officials in Stockholm and the news was relayed in a telephone interview with Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson who has been designated by the Canadian government to organize an invitational tournament including professional players next year in Canada.

"We have made the commitment to return to the amateur world hockey championships providing Russia, Czechoslovakia, Finland, the U.S. and Canada take part in an invitational tournament next fall in Canada," Eagleson told The Sun.

Canada pulled out of the world championships in 1970 when the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) refused Canada's request to use professional players.

The IIHF has since adopted new rules allowing the use of professionals but Canada still has hesitated in becoming involved because the timing of the world championships in April conflicts with playoffs in the North American pro leagues, meaning many of Canada's best pros would not be available to play.

Eagleson said Sunday only the Soviet Union now appears a doubtful about entering the proposed invitational tournament.

"They are very anxious that our tournament should not have an official world championship status," said Eagleson. "That is right, of course, as this is just an invitational tournament. I'm hopeful they will accept and come and play in Toronto. I think we can reach an agreement on a few other minor issues."

Ove Rainer, president of the Swedish Hockey Federation, predicted the other four countries would agree to play in the tournament.

"We have been waiting for such a tournament for several years," he said. "Now it's up to the Russians."

Quarter-finals Berth for Czechs

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Czechoslovakia became the seventh team to advance to the quarter-finals of the European soccer championships Sunday with a 3-0 victory over Cyprus.

The win gave the Czechs the Group One qualifying berth over England. The Czechs finished with nine points and England eight. Portugal and Cyprus have one game remaining but neither can overtake the Czechs.

In one other qualifying round match Sunday, Turkey beat the Soviet Union 1-0 but the Soviets had already clinched the Group Six qualifying berth.

Other countries who have qualified so far are Belgium, Spain, Wales, Yugoslavia and Holland which lost its last match Saturday 1-0 to Italy.

West Germany is almost sure of filling the eighth spot in the quarter-finals needing only a draw against Malta at home next February to qualify.

The Czechs wasted little time beating Cyprus in the match at Limassol, Cyprus, with Scherr Nehoda, Premysl Bicovsky and Marian Masny scoring in the first half.

At Ankara, the Soviets decisively scored on their own goal to give Turkey the surprise victory.

Canadian Jade Work Gaining Recognition

OTTAWA (CP)—The Chinese and Japanese have always prized jade as the most precious and mystical of gems but Canadians are only beginning to appreciate its value.

Although the existence of Canadian jade has been known for a long time, its commercial possibilities have been explored only recently.

The main source of jade in Canada is Ogden Mountain, in British Columbia, where some of the finest nephrite jade in the world is found. It is exported to the Orient, including China, the ancient centre of jade carving.

"Chinese workers used to smuggle the stuff out of the country back home; Canadians couldn't understand why they bothered because they didn't consider it of any value," said Rick Telfer of Telfer Art Promotions during a recent exhibition of Canadian jade sculpture in Ottawa.

Today's Canadian jade carvers are aware of both the esthetic and monetary value of jade.

Jade carving is a delicate and painstaking art. Intricate pieces can take many months and require specially hardened tools. Because of jade's hardness, only slightly less than that of diamond, grinding even a simple sculpture is a involved process.

Protective masks must be worn to protect the artist from jade dust, which would have the same effect on the lungs as coal mining.

To prevent burning and scarring the jade and reducing its commercial value, a stream of running water plays on the material during the grinding process.

Barring anything unforeseen, such as cracking caused by a fault in the jade, a nine-pound block will produce a sculpture weighing about three pounds.

Rhodesian Ban Book Because of Cover

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (CP) — The paperback version of the book The Taking of Pelham 123 has been declared undesirable in Rhodesia but the hard-cover version still is freely on sale.

The major reason for the treatment by the censors is the difference in price.

The book about the hijacking of a subway train has been a best-seller and the film was featured at the opening of a new cinema attended by Public Service Minister Reg Cowper.

1 Check off the items you no longer need and would like to sell and add others not listed.

3 Write up advertisement describing these items and their selling features, include phone number or address. Count the number of words used (phone number counts one word).

4 To reach most number of prospects 4 or more insertions are recommended when selecting the amount you wish to spend from the chart below.

5 Deduct the price of your advertising from the expected return of selling your don't needs.

Newman's Book Deals With Political Influence

By PAT UBBEN
The Canadian Press

The people who exercise major influence in running this country are the subjects of Peter C. Newman's book, The Canadian Establishment, Volume One, Many are in its index: short-haired, puritanical, uptight, and very proud of their arrogance and often compellingly interesting."

Then there are those exceptions.

Canada's corporate style side is and out of liberal cabinets, held down the boards of leading cultural institutions and run most of the institutions that count. Mr. Newman applies political scientist James Eayrs as saying: "Corporate power is Canadian society."

Mr. Newman finds that until well into the '60s Canada was run by a tightly knit clique that began during the Second World War by C. D. Howe. Now he concludes that these two main components are beginning to struggle for power.

The author contends there is no single monolithic establishment in Canada but rings of establishments. How the people who make up these groups exercise their influences and exert their power is outlined in considerable detail in the book.

One such method, employed by Paul Desmarais, is free enterprise takeover. Desmarais puts it this way: "What you do is you get assets at a discount and with the proceeds buy the assets that you control that is acquired yet. But what you have to do is something of substance first to sell." In this he was declared bankrupt in provincial Transport of Quebec, which in 1969 was sold to Canada Steamship Lines.

"You're never too big," says Desmarais. "... to put a limit on your growth then you're dead, the climate you reach it."

Perhaps the top man of the establishment world is John Angus (Rod) McDougall of Argus Corp. "He is ruthless, secretive, tough, chivalrous, intravirtuoso . . . his methods . . . Because he has never lost sight of anything he has tried, winning has become the only tolerable condition of life for him."

At the core of Canada's establishment are the country's bankers. "They exercise a great deal more financial authority than any other group in the country," Mr. Newman writes. "Administering more than $100 billion in assets, the men who run Canada's banks rule the nation's economy."

One of the more colorful figures of an earlier era was J. J. Carter, who was 25 when he launched a fortune estimated at millions between 1911, when his father died, and 1920, when he was declared bankrupt. He travelled whenever possible not by private railway car but by private train. He made wagers of $5,000 to $10,000 and owned eight Rolls-Royces.

Mr. Newman writes in spats and verve and of a pace that keeps the reader's interest unflagging. Instead of countless a mountain of indigestible facts, he has provided a thoroughly readable account of the workings of Canadian big business.

One of the first questions that comes to mind is to what extent the United States controls the Canadian economy. Mr. Newman, editor-in-chief of Maclean's magazine and former editor-in-chief of Toronto Star, promises to look into this in a subsequent volume.

When the Mafia joins with the bloody separatist FLQ, the American criminals have a multi-million-dollar jewel robbery in mind. But the FLQ is bent on revolution.

The idea is that the FLQ will create a diversion—a kidnapping and the bombing of the Montreal Forum in the resulting confusion, the Mafia would lift the jewels from a downlown Montreal exhibition.

As the plot and two-plots unfold, Montreal is literally splattered with gore. Even the young lawyer who looks as though he will emerge as the hero, comes in a sticky end in the book's early stages.

Dennies Thibeault, leader of the FLQ, forms an alliance, both sexual and practical, with a Mafia doll. They are beat and double-crossing each other left before their plans hatch, thanks hands of Montrealers die by bombing or fire.

For all its violence, this short novel is a gripping one and a book hard to lay down.

Author Ross, who now lives in Montreal, is working on his second novel.

Winnipeg's Pentecostal Church Grows Fast

Written for CP
By LESLIE K. TARR

The recently-completed $5 million auditorium addition to Winnipeg's Calvary Temple is a far cry from the Anna Street mission in California where Pentecostalism began in 1906. That contrast graphically depicts the phenomenal growth of the Pentecostal movement.

The 1911 census uncovered only 7,812 Canadians who claimed Pentecostal affiliation. The 1971 figure was 220,390. In each decade since that 1921 census, Pentecostals have registered well over a 50-per-cent increase, and they now account for one per cent of the population.

When Pentecostal ministers and evangelists first arrived in Canadian communities, they rented storefronts, commodity halls or fraternal lodges. The emotional meetings soon earned for them such names as "Holy Rollers" and they were dismissed as a part of a disappearing frantic fringe.

The distinctive Pentecostal experience of "speaking in tongues" made them the butt of particular scorn. Then and now their practice insisted that after a person became a Christian through personal trust in Jesus Christ, there should follow a "baptism of the Holy Spirit", evidenced by speaking in a language unknown to the speaker.

In the face of ridicule from the religious establishment, they kept "tongues-speaking" at basic to their doctrinal statements. Ironically, "speaking in tongues" has invaded main-line Protestant denominations and even the Roman Catholic church in the last decade.

Observers today are replacing terms such as "Holy Rollers" with more respectful designations. Dr. John Mackay, former president of Princeton Seminary, spoke of them as the "third force" in Christendom, in addition to Catholicism and Protestantism. He noted that in the developing countries of Latin America they were experiencing incredible growth.

The largest denominational grouping in the Canadian Pentecostal family is the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, which claims about 800 churches, located in nine provinces and the territories. Newfoundland has about 130 churches in a separate denominational organization which works closely with PAC assemblies.

The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, in common with Pentecostal groups around the world, are fervently evangelistic. Conservative theology, however, is often accompanied by imaginative programs and methods.

Aggressive evangelism and out-reach programs have built up large Sunday Schools at a time when larger Canadian denominations report alarming declines. At the end of 1974, their Sunday schools had an enrolment of 94,601.

Through visitation, promotion, and extensive bus operations, Pentecostal churches have built up some of the largest Sunday Schools in the country. Calvary Temple in Winnipeg, Kennedy Road Tabernacle in Scarborough, Ont., Central Tabernacle in Edmonton and Central Gospel Temple in St. Catharines, Ont., have memberships of 1,000 and attendance mark each week.

Extensive radio work has been extended to many ethnic groups. More than 30 French-speaking churches operate in Quebec. Italian, Korean, Finnish, Ukrainian, and Chinese congregations are found in many cities.

In addition, Pentecostal churches have been active among Canada's Indians. In Saskatchewan, Rev. William Turner, a Cree Indian, directs extension among the province's Indian people.

That sense of aggressive outreach has sent Canadian Pentecostal missionaries to all parts of the world. The present overseas missionary force of 220 serves in 15 countries with more than 200,000 members in churches which they have established.

Those first Pentecostal preachers and missionaries of 70 years ago were laymen or women from other denominations who claimed to have received "the baptism of the Holy Spirit".

Since then, five authorized Bible schools have been established to train workers. Their aim is to raise academic standards without any dilution of evangelical fervor or spiritual distinctiveness.

Canadian Pentecostals stop short of ordaining women to the ministry. In the United States and elsewhere, ordained women preachers such as Aimee Semple McPherson have worked side by side with male counterparts. The only ordained woman preacher in the Canadian assemblies is Rev. Beralee Gerard, chaplain at University of Brandon, Man., who was ordained in the United States.

A vote to ordain women passed 149 to 143 at the 1974 convention, but it failed to muster the necessary two-thirds majority.

In its 70 years in Canada, Pentecostalism has come a long way. Problems facing the denomination are problems of growth—a category which many other denominations would welcome.

French Canada Alive in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — A small piece of French Canada is alive in Toronto.

In a rambling, old, three-storey brick house in the cultural core of the city, a handful of French-Canadian artists, writers and craftsmen are working in a community centre—La Chasse Galerie.

Named after a fabulous flying canoe featured in an old Quebec folk tale, La Chasse Galerie is a community centre, a meeting centre and a preserve of French Canada in the centre of English Canada's largest city.

Founded in 1970 and eking out a precarious existence on annual grants from the federal government ($50,000) and the Ontario Arts Council ($20,000), the centre is in financial straits and may have to close.

Director Michelline St.-Cyr is upset at the prospect of losing La Galerie, as are many of the teachers, writers, artists and poets who work in the centre's workshops and programs.

"We need only $30,000," Mme. St.-Cyr said. "We don't know what we can do if we don't get it."

The prospect of closing the doors hit Mme. St.-Cyr angry at what she called the political class and their empty words.

"The words are just like balloons," she said. "Empty inside."

The operation is more than a community centre for French-Canadians, she said, and if it closes, the loss will be greater than just the loss of a minority cultural service.

The Galerie estimates that more than 20,000 people took part in the various programs last year, programs that ranged from workshops, French language discussion groups and handicraft classes to performances by French-Canadian musical artists and displays of ethnic art.

A visit to the centre is a crowded experience.

In the many rooms of the quaint, turreted old building artists work on pottery and painting, schoolchildren troop into workshops where they spend a day learning French by living, speaking it as a living, breathing language rather than the dry, scholarly vocabulary of the classroom. Other students work on handicrafts, engraving and macrame.

In the kitchen a group works on Quebecois cuisine, while a girl in a T-shirt, embroidered with the words "Frog Power" does a stack of dishes.

Upstairs, a woman works on a loom, weaving wall hangings, rugs and tapestries.

Posters advertise coming events, weekend trips to French workshops, future performances by Quebec singers, authors and poets and shows by French-Canadian artists.

In her crowded office, Mme. St.-Cyr was close to tears as she described the financial problems.

Basically, the centre has been operating with a deficit and the banks will not extend credit.

"They think of it as a deficit," said Mme. St.-Cyr. "It's not a deficit, it's an investment; it should see that. An investment in the future."

She said she was trying to raise money from the community, by public subscription, but that program was hampered by the postal strike.

She would like to see the provincial education ministry cooperate with the centre. "Do they look at us and see that deficit."

She complained that the federal government, despite a $200-million budget for multi-culturalism, won't come up with enough to keep the Galerie functioning.

The plump, cheerful director, who speaks with verve and style, said she is discouraged by the financial problems but hopes she can keep La Galerie open.

"English culture needs French-Canadian culture," she said. "This Galerie is a milieu of French-Canadian culture."

Your Horoscope

BERNICE EDEE OSOL

For Tuesday, Nov. 25, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take care of important matters early in the day. You're apt to miss connections if you let too much time slip by.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20) Don't buy anything large for the home or for yourself. Sleep on it first, then discuss the matter in a family council.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be careful today you don't overeat or overdrink that which you have to offer. The longer you talk, the less appealing your proposition becomes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Drive cautiously this evening if you're prone to careless errors you've let go till the last minute. The stores will be open again tomorrow.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) One who knows you to be the generous person you are may cunningly take advantage of you in a weak moment today. Keep your guard up.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you're in public today, someone who was willing to help you will suddenly withdraw his support, and be a little miffed, to boot.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't worry about things today that haven't happened and probably never will. Be positive. This life is a moment at a time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll have most of the day well under control, but before evening your discipline may weaken. You could commit a wrong move.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec. 21) Without realizing it you could be somewhat dictatorial today. If you are, you're apt to be dethroned abruptly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Try not to take an idea or something that is quite trivial. It won't be worth the ill feelings it could provoke.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The small print is exceptionally important today in any agreements you may enter into. Look it over carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep your priorities in proper perspective today. The end results will be profitable and productive. Don't sweep anything under the rug.

Arrest That Man

HAMBURG, Germany (CP) — To spur public concern for the environment, a telephone service to answer questions, advice on problems and process complaints was set up here. One complaint from a woman in high heels demanded the arrest of a sausage salesman for leaving samples of his wares locked in her toilet.

Man Saved From Jump

NEW YORK (AP) — Police rescue experts overpowered a man who was threatening to take a 188-foot leap into the East River from the top of the Brooklyn Bridge. Using life belts, ropes and a 30-foot ladder, three officers climbed the tower on the Manhattan end of the bridge. After a struggle, the would-be jumper was trussed, lowered in stages 30 feet below the tower and taken to a nearby hospital.

SIDE GLANCES — by Gill Fox

"How do you expect me to know the value of a dollar when it's declining daily?"

Expert Predicts Middle-age Revolt

HALIFAX (CP) — An expert on old age says the middle-aged will rise up in revolution if employers continue to retire able persons while they still are capable of producing a great deal for society.

Sister Michael Guinan, a consultant on gerontology for the Ontario ministry of community and social services, was speaking at a retirement seminar.

She said the middle-aged are the taxpayers who support the government and provide for the young and the retired.

Cystic Acne Is A Vicious Problem

By G. C. THORTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorteson: I have cystic acne on my back and face, also on the chest. It has left unsightly scars. I am under the care of a specialist, who injects the cysts in the affected areas. For the acne on my back and chest, skin medication is used.

I have been on antibiotics for two years, which did not help. Is a long time.

What are the causes of acne vicious cycle? Does the blood condition have any direct influence? Generally, I am healthy and have a balanced diet. Also, can I have dermabrasion on my face and back, or on my face?—T.

This is a rather vicious type and difficult to handle. Vicious because it is unsightly, difficult because it requires special and painstaking attention to control.

Sebum, a thick, oily substance secreted by tiny glands at the skin surface, is the fault. In cystic acne this sebum builds up and becomes such as like the core of a boil, acting as a foreign body. Infection may occur around this. In such cases, a specific kind of organism can be identified in the pustules.

You have used antibiotics for two years. Prolonged use often is necessary. Lancing of the cysts and removal of the "cores" may be necessary to prevent spread. Your blood is not a factor, nor is your diet to be. Thus attention to diet should be more than just for general balance. In some persons, for example—can worsen the condition. Fats—as those found with other foods, chocolate being a notable offender. Since iodides are often a factor, use of plain non-iodized salt is recommended. Fatty foods should be avoided, as should seafood (iodine high) and "rich" foods in basic such as pastries.

Dermabrasion is a procedure to remove the scars resulting from acne. It is not helpful in the during the active condition. Once your acne becomes inactive, then you might discuss this with your specialist. For now it seems, at least from your letter, that attempts being made to control your condition is the best program.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: You have spoken about the irreversibility of a tubal ligation and of a vasectomy.

Why wouldn't it be possible to withdraw sperm following a vasectomy by inserting some tube into the appropriate place, then using the artificial insemination when desired?

Surely, sperm still form. They but have no way of exiting, right? If they are there, why not use them if one wants to? Mrs. A.K.

I don't know of any work going on in this specific area. Your idea sounds like a possibility, but I'm not sure how practical it would be.

True, the sperm does continue to be formed in the body following a vasectomy, and true, they have no way to exit from the severed vas duct. But after that your theory may fall apart.

There are many problems. It is not clear, for example, just how productive the body is in manufacturing sperm after a vasectomy. Nor is it clear how viable such trapped sperm would be. The question is quality, not quantity.

Considering such possible drawbacks and the rather artificial technique that would be required to obtain the sperm and keep it viable in the process, the chances of successful artificial insemination such as you suggest would seem rather remote.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: Can a person have varicose veins in the hands? Mine are pretty well hidden, and I'm wondering whether they are what are commonly called.—Mrs. T. S.

Varicose veins are found in the legs because they represent the circulation problem that stems largely from the fact that the weakened vessels do not allow the blood that puddles in them to overcome the laws of gravity. Faulty valves in the vessels are a factor.

You are probably a thin person. Those veins in the hands seem more prominent than they really are. They are not varicose veins, though.

Disabled Programs

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cuyahoga Community College is pioneering a program that will help disabled patients stay enrol in courses they can learn through television and telephone.

The college got a $204,683 grant for the project that will serve three local hospitals.

Lynn Rosen, director for academic support services at the college's east campus and the designer of the program, said it will be able to participate in the college's courses through live TV transmissions and by using two-way phone hookups.

Rosen said although they have programs for patient education already, they are courses and do not permit direct classroom participation while the patients remain in hospital.

The initial offering will be a career program in accounting and business, with future basic, arts and sciences. Dr. Rosen said accounting was chosen because patients can use the skills they acquire to earn money while still in hospital.

And if one's educational goal changes, the liberal arts portion of the studies may be used toward the new goal, she said.

Gem Firm Ranks First

RAMAT GAN, Israel (AP) — Despite economic hard times, Israel's polished gem diamond industry still ranks first in the world in production and export. Israel edged out Antwerp several years ago.

Polished gem exports in 1974 amounted to $582.3 million, a record year for the Jewish state. And karat exports for the first half of 1975 are running ahead the same.

"People have less money these days," said Moshe Schicker, president of the Israel Diamond Exchange, "and consequently they are buying smaller stones."

He said Israel specializes in the production of smaller stones—industrial diamonds usually less than one-eighth of a karat—for rings and other popular jewelry pieces.

"We are since more than 90 per cent of the world's supply of these small diamonds," Schicker said.

The diamond exchange is housed in a modern 39-storey building in this Tel Aviv suburb. Offices clustered around it, like diamond chips around a central stone, are satellite plants for cutting, polishing and manufacturing jewelry.

The exchange building, however, is already too small and a sister edifice is under construction next door. It is expected to be completed in time for the 1977 conference in Israel of the World Federation of Diamond Bourses.

Library Corner

THE PLEDGLING — Elizabeth Cadell.

Vilerina's escort from Lisbon to London seems a cloak of respectability which conceals the child's father and aunts, but even before the tempestuous girl had made her discovering discovery of his theft from the rich private chapel of his host she was in begin to take his measure. How the gold objects of St. Christopher had been stolen and how it reached Portugal again, is interwoven into a delightful story.

HEAVEN ON EARTH — Janice Elliot.

It is a winter night in London 1908. In the Underground, Olive Wilmer sees someone she once knew, suffer a near-fatal accident. This chance re-appearance of a ghost from the past drives Olive — for so long an apparently contented woman — to question the nature of her life, her work and fifteen year old marriage. Heaven on Earth is the final part of Janice Elliott's trilogy which opened with A State of Peace and was continued in Private Life.

WHITTON'S FOLLY — Pamela Hill.

This is the story of Edmund Whitton, who arrives back from India in 1860 to claim the Manse in the Scottish Highlands. In India he had been a close friend of Robert Clive, Clive's folly and his glory and his subsequent fall provide an engrossing contrast in the life of Simon.

JACK MERCYBRIGHT — Mary E. Pearce.

This new novel by Mary Pearce shows the same warm and deep understanding of country life and people as her earlier books. Almost penniless, Jack Mercybright comes to Brown Elms Farm just before the turn of the century. He starts to work for Philippa Gulf, the owner. The farm is badly run-down, but slowly, working as Philippa's underpaid bailiff, he brings it back to life. It isn't easy to impose his will on her, nor are matters made easier when Philippa's newly-widowed sister, Nenna, falls in love with him.

LORD OF THE FAR ISLAND — Victoria Holt.

Ellen Talfa-vay was orphaned when she was five, taken in by wealthy cousins and raised as a companion to their daughter. But the life of the despised poor-relation changed completely when the son of a wealthy London family asked for her hand in marriage. Victoria Holt's new novel is full of romance, suspense and terror. It is set in London and County of Cornwall.

THE WALLACE — Nigel Balchin.

William Wallace was a Scot of humble birth, who, driven from India by ill health, multiplies perpetuated upon his fellow countrymen and women by Edward Planiagenet, took himself to Australia where the might of the greatest military machine in Christendom. This is the story of what an ordinary man can achieve, unaided by the finger of God.

White Rule in Church Council Challenged

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — While domination of the World Council of Churches is being challenged for the first time at the Christian organization's fifth ecumenical assembly.

The assembly, which began an 18-day meeting Sunday, represents 271 Protestant, Eastern Orthodox, Anglican and Old Catholic denominations with nearly 400 million members in 90 countries. For the first time, delegates from the underdeveloped nations of the Third World hold a slight voting edge in the intradenominational organization founded and long dominated by white churchmen from Europe and the United States.

"It's quite wholesome," said the Archbishop of Canterbury, Most Rev. Donald Coggan, the spiritual leader of the Anglican Church. "We don't think in terms of domination or empire here but of brotherhood and the wider empire of Christ."

Bishop Alfhaestes, a Copt, prelate from Egypt, said he doubts the shift will "make a big difference."

"When the Westerners were a majority, we all worked in the ecumenical spirit. This time, with the increase of non-Westerners, if the process of learning continues, we will still help each other."

However, Lutheran Bishop Shenda Msoki of Tanzania said: "One will have to wait and see. "Our white friends may choose not to support decisions that are made by not making the money available for them," he said. "That's another way of domination—to have by not implementing them, despite the votes. I m could happen."

The showdown is expected on proposals for the application of Christian teachings to advance social justice and combat poverty and racism, and to support liberation movements in the so-called Rhodesia and South Africa. Another issue before the council to African liberation movements stirred up considerable controversy.

Meeting for the first time in a World Wide area, the assembly opened Sunday night with a service of scripture, prayers and hymns accompanied at times by African drumbeats and the singing of a barefoot, bearded Maasai chorus.

The 2,500 delegates mingled their languages to sing God's will on earth be done, new lampoe be lit, new tasks be set, and His whole world at last be one."

The service was interrupted briefly by a group of protesters led by Rev. Jack Glass of Glasnow, Scotland. They shouted that the assembly was "anti-Christ" and demanded that it condemn communism and the Cuban Catholicism.

Delegates from churches in Eastern Europe as well as observer-delegates from the Roman Catholic Church are attending the assembly.

The Canadian delegation has more than 30 persons—including Rev. Dr. Norman Berner of Kitchener, Ont., president of the Canadian Council of Churches; Rev. Dr. T. E. Floyd Honey of Toronto, the council's secretary-general; Ada Moore of Tillsonburg, Ont., representing the Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada; and 13 voting delegates, representing Anglican, Christian Church Disciples of Christ, Lutheran, Presbyterian and United Churches.

Judge Accuses Lawyers Of No Interest in Retarded

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice Eñaon Haines of the Ontario Supreme Court said Saturday that lawyers are not involved enough with the legal problems of mentally-ill persons.

Mr. Justice Haines said at a seminar in medicine and the law that lawyers and doctors should work together to provide good treatment and protection for the mentally ill.

He said Ontario's legal aid plan now has provisions to allow lawyers to visit patients in mental hospitals twice a month, adding that a lawyer's involvement may be beneficial to the treatment process.

Dr. Barry Boyd, medical director of the Mental Health Centre at Penetanguishene, Ont., said only about half the patients considered for release from the centre by the province's review board are represented by lawyers.

Mr. Justice Haines, chairman of the advisory review board which recommends release dates for the criminally insane, said part of the problem is that Ontario's law school do not teach students about the legal problems of the mentally ill.

Brawl Leads to Fight Charges in Wallaceburg

WALLACEBURG, Ont. (CP) — Police laid charges against eight persons after a brawl involving more than 100 persons early Saturday in this community about 15 miles north of Chatham.

Police said the fight started after a policeman removed an unruly patron from a hotel and the patron returned with about six other persons.

Police Chief Ross Cushman said about 20 local and provincial policemen broke up the disturbance and involved about 125 persons. Damage to the hotel was extensive.

John Hooper, 46, and Stephen Flein, 21, both of Wallaceburg, Kevin Debot, 18, of Port Lambton, Ont., Richard Bulckaert, 22, of Vancouver, and Gary Lawrence Wilder, 25, of Squamish, B.C. were charged with toting a gun and held in custody.

Richard Wilder, 19, of Squamish, B.C., charged with assaulting a police officer, also was held in custody. Police said the six were to appear in court Monday for a bail hearing.

Donald Desaurult of Wallaceburg, charged with assaulting a police officer, and Merle Harris of Wallaceburg, charged with creating a disturbance in a public place, were released on their own recognizance. They are scheduled to appear in court Dec. 2.

Sailors Trapped In Boat Collision

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — "An explosion exploded; there were terrible fires," said a sailor injured in the collision of the United States aircraft, carrier John F. Kennedy and the cruiser Belknap.

David Vollmer was below decks aboard the cruiser about 10 p.m. Saturday when the collision set off explosions aboard the Belknap and fires aboard both ships.

"We were trapped below decks, but fought our way to the deck," said Vollmer after he was flown to a navy hospital near Naples.

The headquarters of the 6th Fleet said four men were killed, four were missing and 16 were injured, five of them seriously. Three of the dead and all of the missing were members of the Belknap crew; 53 of the cruiser's 330 crew members were thrown overboard.

The fire aboard the 1,647-foot carrier, one of the largest navy ships in the world, was put out in 10 minutes, and damage was slight, the navy said. It added that capability for flight operation was not impaired, and the ship joined in the search for the missing men.

But the 547-foot cruiser was badly damaged. There were numerous fires that were put out and then started up again. It was 2½ hours before the fires were brought under control.

A reporter who flew over the Belknap said its superstructure was "a twisted mass of steel and all charred." The destroyer Berdeion was towing the ship to Augusta, Sicily.

Mourners Praise Franco

MADRID (AP) — More than 100,000 rightists shouted support for Francisco Franco's dictatorship as their leader was buried in the grandiose funeral mound he built to himself and Spain's civil war dead.

"Long live Franco!" the throng thundered Sunday as they packed the huge plaza outside the vast basilica of the Valley of the Fallen cut into a mountainside 35 miles from Madrid.

Civil war veterans and young militants gave the straight-arm Fascist salute and sang the Falange anthem Face to the Sun as King Juan Carlos I followed the coffin into the basilica.

Foreign representatives included U.S. Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller, the head of the Chilean military dictatorship, Augusto Pinochet, Imelda Marcos, the wife of the Philippine dictator; King Hussein of Jordan and Prince Rainier of Monaco.

Most other governments were represented by their ambassadors or lower-ranking cabinet members to signify their dislike of Franco's dictatorship.

Only a single cry of "Long live the King!" was heard, but the voice was raised against the new 37-year-old king. He was installed Saturday, becoming Spain's first monarch in 44 years, and many expect him to guide the nation away from Franco's authoritarian system.

The dictator who ruled Spain for 36 years died Thursday at the age of 82. His body lay in state at the National Palace until the funeral Sunday. Officials said 400,000 people filed past the body.

After the coffin was sealed, it was taken to the Plaza de Oriente in front of the palace for a requiem mass celebrated by the primate of Spain, Marcelo-Cardinal Gonzalez Martin. An estimated 200,000 people filled the square, and many of them gave the Fascist salute and shouted the Falange anthem after the mass.

Talks Begin Over Chrysler Firm Here

DETROIT (AP) — The top management of Chrysler Corp. returns to London this week to resume talks with the government over what to do with the firm's financially-troubled British subsidiary.

Chrysler officials refuse to discuss the fate of Chrysler United Kingdom Ltd. until accord is reached with Prime Minister Harold Wilsons Labor government.

Chairman John Riccardo is anxious to rid his company of the UK operation as soon as possible. He acknowledges Chrysler is not strong enough to provide additional funds. The parent firm has amassed losses of $313 million since July 1974.

If it is unlikely Riccardo will close Chrysler UK and walk away, leaving an estimated $250 million worth of plant and equipment and 27,000 employees.

High Oil Prices Will Not Hurt U.S. in Long Run

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the increase in world oil prices dealt the United States and other industrialized countries a severe blow in 1974 and 1975, the long-run impact will be small, a new study published by the Brookings Institution said Sunday.

"In the long run, paying today's high oil prices owed not prevent these countries from resuming a healthy rate of economic expansion and should have only a modest effect on the growth of living standards," said the study from Brookings, a private research organization.

Union Will Obey Order to Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal union president Joe Davidson said Monday striking members of his union would obey a back-to-work order from Parliament.

He said in an interview he thinks the 23,000 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) would be unhappy about a forced return to their jobs. But they would respect the law.

Until now, the government has resisted suggestions that Parliament take action to end the strike which began Oct. 28. Indeed, Mr. Davidson said he has been told by Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey the government will not take the union "off the hook."

Mr. Mackasey has steadfastly refused to increase the monetary package being offered to the union, whose leaders in turn have rejected proposals that the last government offer be put to a membership vote.

The result is that there has been no progress in recent weeks in the dispute.

Mr. Mackasey said Monday there will be no more for the union beyond the $1.70 pay raise in a 30-month contract offered by the government. He also said the workers will have to accept a 40-hour work-week.

The union wants a $1.75-an-hour raise in a 25-month contract added to their present top rate of $4.99 an hour. They also want a 35-hour week without pay reductions and a paid meal-hour each day.

As Christmas approaches, the government is likely to come under increased pressure by businessmen and the public to terminate the dispute, Mr. Mackasey was warm applause Monday when delivering a speech to an Ottawa luncheon attended by a largely-business audience.

Mr. Davidson termed the right to strike as a "hard-earned right" that, the union would not like to lose. Postal workers, along with other federal employees, were given the right to strike by Parliament in 1967.

Government officials feel Parliament is intervening too often in labor disputes. Since 1972, Parliament has stepped in six times to end strikes. Before that there were only three interventions.

The last time Parliament passed a law ending a strike — by Quebec longshoremen last spring — the government had to begin tough legal action against union leaders before the employees would go back to their jobs.

The danger, some officials say, is that, in many interventions, leaders Parliament just another step in the collective bargaining process.

Ottawa May Tighten Controls On Construction Industry

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Monday the government is considering tightening its anti-inflation controls over the construction industry because the current ceiling exempts about 40 per cent of the industry.

As a result, a Liberal backbench board spokesman says this could be done by making some of the smaller construction companies subject to mandatory controls.

The current program calls for direct controls only on the construction companies employing 20 workers or more.

This limit will be changed to apply direct controls to companies that employ some number of employees fewer than 20. The board has not yet decided what size of company it wants to regulate directly or the number of companies it expects to be affected by changes in the controls program.

Mr. Danson said Monday with officials of the Canadian Construction Association and its provincial affiliates, the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada and Urbanex. He said the meeting was part of a "continuing effort to improve" over the federal controls.

Mr. Danson refused to say specifically what was discussed, but he said the possibility of making speculation by introducing controls on land prices was one issue.

HUDAC President Bernard Dansereau said he fears that controls might slow housing construction because construction costs are climbed. It might also affect the government's announced plans to get one million new housing starts over the next five years. He generally was in favor of the federal-provincial program.

Changes in the anti-inflation program will raise the number of companies now estimated at 7,000 that will have their operations and employees subject to mandatory controls. All salaries have been asked to comply voluntarily with the guidelines for acceptable incomes and price increases.

The estimated number of directly regulated companies was given significantly since the controls were imposed Oct. 14.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the Liberal anti-inflation program applied directly to the 1,000 largest companies that employ 500 or more employees each, and to construction companies employing over 20. That would have covered about 1,000 construction firms.

The anti-inflation board now admits it underestimated the number of large companies affected. As a result, it has since increased its estimate to 2,300 from 1,500 and says that is still "a rough estimate."

In the Commons today, thirdreading debate on legislation to put the anti-inflation program into full operation is under way. Some government members have said they may want some changes.

Serge Joyal (L—Maisonneuve-Rosemont) said he will introduce an amendment to make federal marketing boards subject to mandatory controls if it appears Quebec intends to control full marketing boards within its own boundaries. Quebec is establishing its own prices and income commissions.

News Briefs

No More Federal Funds

OTTAWA (CP) — No more federal funds will go directly to the $1-billion Montreal Olympic Games than already announced, the government reiterated Monday in the Commons.

Concerned Over Expansion

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt (Leeds) said Monday a planned $30 million expansion of St. Lawrence Islands National Park in his eastern Ontario riding could become "another Pickering fiasco." Mr. Cossitt said hundreds of property owners in the riding "feel their homes and businesses are threatened" by government plans for enlarging the park located in the Thousand Island tourist region along the St. Lawrence River.

Gains Independence

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (Reuter) — Surinam became the world's newest independent state today, ending 325 years of Dutch colonial rule.

Won't Order Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has no intention of legislating Toronto secondary school teachers back to work at this time, Education Minister Thomas Wells said outside the legislature Monday. He also said the government will not legislate them back to work on the basis of a fact-finder's report.

Divorce Rate Jumps

OTTAWA (CP) — The national divorce rate last year was up 20.6 per cent from 1973, Statistics Canada reported Monday. There were 41,018 divorces in 1974, resulting in a rate of 200.2 divorces per 100,000 population. This was up from 36,704 divorces and a rate of 168.1 per 100,000 in 1973.

Offers Lower Mortgages

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Trust and Montreal Trust companies now are offering one-year renewable mortgages at the Ottawa area. The interest rate for the one year mortgage is one-half of a percentage point lower than the rates for the now-common five-year mortgage. The rate is re-negotiated annually and the companies are writing the one year-term mortgages with amortization periods up to 25 years.

Provinces to Be Asked To Cut Speed to 55

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces will be asked at a federal-provincial conference here next month to cut maximum speed limits to 55 miles an hour.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie told the Commons Monday he will press for the change at a meeting of provincial energy ministers Dec. 12.

"It is probably the most important single move that can be taken to drive home the importance of energy conservation," he said during a day-long Commons debate.

"Our goal is to try and get a national 55-mile-an-hour speed limit . . ."

Speed limits throughout the United States have been cut to 55 but, so far, only a few provinces have acted.

British Columbia has a 55-mile-an-hour limit and Nova Scotia is in the process of adopting the same. Ontario plans to reduce its maximum speed to 80 km. h.

Mr. Gillespie said he shares the concerns of those who worry that Canadians are wasting energy.

45,000-acre Brush Fire Threatens Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An enclosed orange sky hung over the Los Angeles area today as fire fighters with their backs at the city's edge battled to keep the biggest brush fire in the United States from spreading.

More than 30 homes on the northeast edge of the Los Angeles area were burned to the ground with another 30 damaged. About 5,000 residents were evacuated as the blaze roared over 45,000 acres of the Angeles National Forest.

At least 70 fire fighters suffered from smoke inhalation or minor burns, but no civilians were reported injured.

Almost no rain has fallen for six months in the area about 25 miles from downtown Los Angeles, and the flames were being fanned sporadically by 30-mile Santa Ana winds, which originate in the high desert east of here.

Gov. Edmond Brown declared a state emergency, and local officials sent a telegram to President Ford requesting federal assistance.

Smoke from the big fire rose to 10,000 feet and spread 100 miles out to sea, a weather satellite photograph showed. Health officials warned persons with respiratory diseases to stay inside as ashes rained down in a 200-mile area along the coast.

A second major fire was raging out of control only 30 miles to the east and has scorched 12,000 acres in Mount Baldy winter recreation area. People were evacuated from about 100 homes in the foothill city of Claremont, plus 45 to 50 resort cabins in San Dimas Canyon along the fire's southwest front.

A Forest Service spokesman said the blazes were probably going to stay out of control until it got a little help from the weather."

He said that the Angeles National Forest fire was nearly 50 per cent surrounded late Monday, but that forecasts of 40 mile-an-hour winds Tuesday might reverse any optimistic predictions for the fire.

Residents armed with water hoses guarded their homes as the Angeles Forest fire broke. Police urged evacuation as the flames drew nearer, but Gene Mason stood on the roof of his Glendale home and wet down the garden hose defiantly for three hours, sprinkling his house, his backyard and himself.

The Weather

Synopsis: The first snowfall to blanket southern Ontario, which began in western counties Monday night, is spreading eastward and should encompass eastern counties by afternoon. Only a few centimetres are expected before the snow ends in eastern counties tonight, however. Cold winds out of the northwest will keep temperatures well below freezing in most areas.

Board of Education Launches Credit Course in Driver Education

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

MADOC — Backed by some staggering statistics the Hastings County Board of Education on Monday night took a dramatic step into driver and roads directed education with the approval of education a full-fledged high school credit course.

In the past the board has offered a non-credit course in driver education but an educational task force, studying the subject for the two years, recommended the program become an optional high school course, and one of 27 needed for a Grade 12 diploma or one of 32 credits needed for a Grade 13 diploma.

Trustee Don Williams, the board's voice on the task force, said the new course is more than just driver training. In outlining the curriculum he said students will explore all aspects of driving including human behavior, effects of alcohol and drugs on driving, car maintenance, car insurance, legal aspects of driving and even how to purchase new or used cars.

The new credit course will involve 115½ hours in the classroom over 140 with 25 hours behind the wheel.

Mr. Williams said the equivalent of an entire high school class is killed each week in Canada in car accidents. He said 56 per cent of all fatal accidents involve young people between the ages of 16 and 25, who represent only 19 per cent of the nation's drivers.

He pointed out that Canada is far behind many European countries in driver education. To date only 18 per cent of Canadian students have taken formal driving education.

The task force prepared a massive curriculum guideline for teachers and students. This curriculum must now go to Kingston for approval from the ministry of education.

The task force also recommended that the charge to students be increased to $25 from $20. This figure also applies to the non-credit driving course, which requires eight hours of driving lessons after school hours. This course will still be available to students who don't want to take the credit course.

It is estimated that of 459,000 Canadians who will reach driving age this year, only 19 per cent will have received formal driving education.

Last year in Hastings county the task force discovered that 50 per cent of those students who applied for the non-credit driving course were turned away.

The board, with the help of the ministry, hopes to run a teacher course for driving education this summer in Belleville.

Most task force members agreed more time in the classroom was needed to teach the subject. They argued better trained teachers and equipment could be used in a credit course.

Only one trustee, Earl Rowley, voted against the credit program on the basis that many parents would view the program as one more scheme to rob students of valuable academic time.

Bill MacKay, principal of Centennial Secondary School, supported the new credit course and told trustees the secondary school principal association in the county was 100 per cent behind the idea. Mr MacKay said the program would not rob students of academic subjects since several options were open to students at all levels. The course will be implemented next September.

Driving education in Ontario began in 1938. Fifteen years later the first course appeared in a high school in the province.

Trial Continues Into Case Involving Missing Aircraft

A 52-year-old Trenton man admitted to Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) officers in April that he flew a missing Cessna Skyhawk 172 airplane from the Belleville area to Cuba in 1971, it was revealed through testimony in his Hastings County Court trial here Monday.

Herve Joseph Cassel has pleaded not guilty to theft over $50 in connection with the disappearance of the light aircraft from Oak Hills Flying Club at Stirling Airport, located 15 miles north of here, in September, 1971.

Crown attorney Glenn Holine of Belleville closed his case on the fifth day of the session on Monday. Defence lawyer Robert Furniss of Belleville was to begin his case today at 10 a.m. at the Hastings County Courthouse before Judge Russell C. Honey and a 12-member jury.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Deline, Constable Robert George Burkholder of Belleville OPP testified he notified the RCMP detachment at Toronto International Airport that Cassel would arrive on a flight on April 16.

Constable Burkholder said he and Cpl. Alan Frederick Cockburn drove to Toronto early on April 11 to take Cassel from the RCMP holding cell to the Belleville OPP detachment for an interview.

He said with Constable Morris Douglas as a witness, Cassel stated voluntarily that he took off from Stirling Airport on Sept. 2, 1971 with permission from the aircraft's owner; Desiline Lariviere of Brighton then of Glen Ross on the Trent River, just north of here.

Constable Burkholder said Cassel told him he flew east for Mount Joliette, Que. but had to stop several times for fuel.

There was fog in the morning, so he took off for Ogdensburg, N.Y. and proceeded south to Jersey City, N.J., Norfolk, Va., St. Mary's Ga., a Cessna field near Miami, Fl. and finally landed at Havana, Cuba, the OPP officer said he was told.

Constable Burkholder said Cassel stated, "I saw the aircraft six weeks later flying overhead but I did not see it again."

Lariviere testified that on Sept. 1, 1971, Cassel requested permission to fly the airplane for a three-day trip to the Gaspe Peninsula where he would visit his brothers and pick up some seafood for transport to Trenton "and tell to restaurateurs and make us both some money."

He said he did not give Cassel permission to fly the aircraft anywhere else and would not have done so even if asked because of a legal version which makes the owner responsible if an aircraft is involved in an illegal act.

Lariviere said Cassel was a friend who carried sets of keys for two airplanes he (Lariviere) owned, including the Cessna so the aircraft could be flown for short distances frequently to keep them in running order.

He said when Cassel did not return he telephoned and then one week later, he called the police. There was also a several-week air-sea rescue search conducted by both the U.S Coast Guard and Canadian Forces Base at Trenton, he added.

Lariviere said, "I don't worry much about his (Cassel's) absence" due to marginal weather along the flight path at the time.

He said the aircraft, which was not insured, has never been returned.

Hadley Richardson of RR 3, Prankford, airport custodian at the time, testified he observed Cassel and another male person between 16-18 years of age, at the airport at about 9 a.m. on Sept. 2 1971. But the Cessna had not taken off before he left for work, he added.

Trustee Questions Need For Metric Change Now

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward County public school students are learning to think metric said Monday night a teacher's demonstrated methods of instruction to county school trustees.

Two teachers from Queen Elizabeth school in Picton, Jerry Lindsay and Les Young outlined the curriculum now in progress there through a presentation titled "What Has Been Done in Metric."

Mr. Lindsay observed children learn the metric system readily as it is, not necessary for them to forget all of the cringely ingrained measurements of the imperial system that adults must discard.

He said that a metric stick is used as a teaching aid and the language of metric is built up as a first step. Words such as millimetre and centimetre become familiar to students.

He added that the actual computation of the metric system is "very easy" once the vocabulary has been mastered.

At Queen Elizabeth school five metric kits are used in the classroom, each containing special equipment to convey the basics of metric measure.

Mr. Lindsay noted that some of the equipment is expensive because it is new.

Among the items contained in the kits are metric sticks and balance scales with plastic weights.

The metric curriculum for students from a kindergarten through Grade 8 is a general because it is new.

"I think it will be quite awhile before we get to the stage where children do not refer to the imperial system," observed Mr. Lindsay.

In answer to trustees' questions he said that all schools in Prince Edward are not likely to be at the same level in teaching the metric system.

He predicted that it may be "a number of years" before no variations exist.

Prince Edward education director John McNeil observed that the ministry has set 1982 as the target date for a complete change to the metric system.

He added that it will be doing children "a disfavor" if they are taught to think only in metric.

He suggested that there will be "a final thing" for some items before the switch to the imperial system is complete.

Athol Township school trustee Hutton Martin observed the United States will become a foreign country to Canadian students because it has remained with the imperial system.

"How can the ministry be naive enough to do this?" he asked referring to the Canadian switch to the metric system.

He added that the ministry has "jumped the gun" in implementing the change when the U.S. remains on the imperial system.

Mr. Martin noted that the majority of Canada's trade is with the U.S. yet there will be conflicting standards of measurement.

Principal of Queen Elizabeth school Alvin Hill predicted that some target dates for conversion to the metric system will be modified.

Greetings from India

Shamsher Singh, economic counsellor at the High Commission of India in Ottawa was in Trenton Monday night to address the weekly meeting of the Rotary club. Mr. Singh introduced the group, including some of the wives of Rotary members, to a little history and background of the country before answering questions from the floor.

Two Hurt In Crash

OUTLET PARK — A Trenton motorist and his passenger were treated at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital Monday afternoon following a single-car collision on County Rd. 13 at the entrance to the Outlet Provincial Park.

Injured were driver of the car, Richard Hughes, 14, of Front St., Trenton, who received fractures, and his passenger, Terrence Campbell, 18, who was treated for cuts and bruises.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the accident occured when the car failed to negotiate a curve and struck a tree. The 1966 vehicle, owned by Florence Hughes of 71 Bay St., Trenton, is described as a write-off.

Costs Under Review

TRENTON — Town council will have to review its priorities and prepare a new set of standards for deciding which people are eligible for the Trenton Day Nursery after the project is in full operation at its new home says the director of Hastings social services.

Reg Tucker, told council Monday during presentation of revised estimates for the renovation of the old North Trenton School it would probably serve its best interests to revise the current daily charge for the nursery, raising the $4 per diem rate to a more realistic figure.

The issue was raised by councilman Ed Todd who questioned the director about whether the town was supplying services for well-to-do people who could afford baby sitter or for families that were really in need of the nursery.

Principal of Queen Elizabeth school Alvin Hill (L) and teacher Jerry Lindsay Monday night demonstrated to Prince Edward school trustees how students are learning to measure with a metric stick. The stick is just one item in a special kit introduced as a teaching aid in the school.

Trenton Council Finally Approves Day Nursery

TRENTON — Town council Monday finally approved plans for the renovation of the old North Trenton school, the proposed new home for the Trenton Day Nursery, after rejecting the project as too costly two weeks ago.

The revised estimate of $39,327 for the conversion of the building, owned and operated by the Hastings County Board of Education, was 30 per cent lower than the cost package previously presented to council by the Hastings County social services department. Council also approved the extension of the lease for the building, rented at $500 month, from five to eight years.

Reg Tucker, director of the county social service department joined Trenton Mayor Robert Patrick in voicing his displeasure about the handling of the project by the ministry of community and social services that has delayed its completion for more than two years.

"It is a shame what the children and staff of the school have had to endure while this was being drawn out," said Mr. Tucker. "The school has moved three times in the last five months, lock stock and barrel, into facilities that are generally less acceptable than previous sites," said the director.

The town is responsible for 20 per cent of the operating and renovating costs for the nursery with the ministry picking up the remaining 80 per cent of the cost. Currently, the day nursery is housed in the basement of the Dufferin Street school where the facilities are inadequate and costly, said the director.

"There is no kitchen available at the school for the nursery and consequently all the meals are made in the cooks home and ferried to the building in taxis, 20 per cent of which the council is paying for," Mr. Tucker told the council.

Reg McCurdy, the consulting engineer preparing the estimates, told council the revised estimates were not reflective of lower prices but were based on the elimination of surface improvements, such as plastering the walls, installation of rugs extensive outside landscaping and other renovations

Driver Faces 4 Charges

MADOC — A 20-year-old Eldorado man is facing four charges following a two-car collision Monday about 4:35 p.m. on Russell St.

Calvin John Andrews is charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident, careless driving, impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08, said Madoc OPP.

Andrews was charged after a vehicle travelling westbound on St. Lawrence St., was in collision with a vehicle driven northbound on Russell St., by James Arthur Coles, 45, of Kingston.

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — If Parliament had a "Private Eye," Elmer MacKinnon MacKay would be that shamus.

He is the Conservative superstudent who has spotted every Liberal closet door on three government shindigs in recent months.

He was largely instrumental in breaking the Hamilton Harbor dredging scandal.

He exposed the Air Canada affair.

He disclosed details of how Liberal Senator Louis de G. Giguere, a party bagman, spun $6,000 into $100,000 through a government land deal.

And now, while these various inquiries, investigations and prosecutions are proceeding, he's got what he calls "something else in view about six months down the road."

That makes it around next MAY.

And on his parliamentary track record, it's not to be another one-shot affair, scandal call it what you will — to further embarrass the already harassed government.

Rep Elmer MacKinnon MacKay doesn't care to refer to any of these strange government goings-on as scandals.

The way he sees it, government is "a big business, and just this one" — grow careless and arrogant with time.

They pick up "bad habits," he says, and assume an uncaring attitude towards the taxpayers — the darling to think that his money belongs to them for their own private political purposes and sometimes profit, rather than to the people who paid it.

So to keep the government on the straight and narrow, he "digs around behind the scenes to see what it's up to."

Digging, believes lawyer MP MacKay, comes naturally to an Opposition parliamentarian as a big part of the job.

So he did.

And every time he rises in his place in the House of Commons with a fat file of documents on his desk, the question on his desk, he pulled out another revealing item of authorized payment of $100,000 by a former Air Canada vice-president to a Montreal travel agent.

There were other odd executive investments, all leading to last election campaign, panicked Labor Minister John Munro, Hamilton Liberal MP, to admit that he guessed he would have to resign.

He didn't. For he called out of the RCMP any other investigations, he figured, that were fortunate, and there have been criminal charges and prosecutions involving millions of dollars of public funds.

Next time he's up in the Commons most that he dug up.

From the heavy file of documentation on his desk, he pulled out another revealing item of authorized payment of $100,000 by a former Air Canada vice-president to a Montreal travel agent.

There were other odd executive investments, all leading to last-minute investigation into the airline's management.

In that case, Elmer MacKay "just put together the financial pieces I knew the airline was in with the refusal of the chairman and his executive to answer questions in the Commons committee. Added up, it was a big deficit — so I began to dig."

And there he was digging again recently, and what did he find? That in the year ending 1975, 900,000 profit Senator Giguere made in five months on an investment of $9,000 in the boring of 31 and the capping of 4 oil wells in Alberta's Pine Shore, the duty-free liquor concession at Dorval Airport, operated as a branch from the federal Department of Transport.

The lease was renewed — after Prime Minister Trudeau's office nudged the Transport Deputy Gerry Stoner to a little action on the file — the shares appreciated and the senatorial windfall resulted.

Currently, the RCMP are digging alongside Elmer Macintosh MacKay to see what part, if any, Senator Giguere played in the dealing beyond the initial deposit of $6,000 into the $100,000 pot.

And Elmer MacKay's got in view six months down the road to be the phrase fit.

Whatever it turns out to be, it already has the Liberals still twitchy. For they know, from experience, that the New Brunswick Tory "digger" does his spadework with deadly thoroughness.

He never makes a move until he has done his research, assembled his documentation and prepared his case.

Then boom!

Mail and Democracy

Some mail is trickling in and it is not without irony that it contains a preponderance of bills.

Before the system cranked itself into life though, even if only on a very limited basis, there was the personal visit to one household by a plumber. He had come to collect his money, but at least he had allowed a couple of weeks' grace! Perhaps plumbers are among the few in our working society who can afford to do that. It's arriving then, and with it a bundle of out-of-town newspapers which this office has been without since the start of the mail strike.

From Oshawa, Brantford, Trenton, Madoc, Cornwall, Cambridge, Kingston, Brockville, Montreal, even Boston.

The unions may look askance at this — at the fact that inside workers have returned to their tasks in a number of places, including Belleville — and that mail is rolling again.

Union members who break ranks like this are called "scabs." Yet if they are defined thus by their fellows, how should we view the latter? Heroes . . . slackers . . . or what?

A prolonged strike of members of a public service, or what once passed for that, is of no advantage to anyone. If some workers prefer to return to work, that is their democratic right. It also shows they are reaching their own decisions and are not afraid of what borders on mob psychology. The mob, as Irish author St. John Ervine once observed, is a "weak and brainless thing . . . easily dominated by empty eloquence."

If Lester Pearson were alive today it is doubtful he would observe with equanimity the divisions that have ensued from his government's decision to broaden the concept of the right to strike to the public service. It's a bad scene.

Monarchy in Spain Unique Development

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It is hard to believe in a world of democracies, socialist states and so-called Marxist peoples democracies, that a monarchy is being restored in Europe; the first such event since the 1930 century.

But the proclamation of Juan Carlos as King of Spain, in succession to his grandfather, Alfonso XIII who abdicated in 1931 and fled the country, is such a reality.

Moreover it brings back the historic Borbon family of Spain, expunged by the Republic, the first in 44 years in Spain. In France, a Borbon succession to the throne still exists where this royal family has not ruled since 1830.

The formula now made an official act of restoring monarchy to Spain was that of the one dead choice of Francisco Franco who saw it as the best way to continue his brand of rule after he had gone.

The Spanish have called it "Francoism without Franco." But it may not be that at all, because the new king is free to remove himself from the cabinet he had to share to Franco's stern principles when he was proclaimed head of state in 1966.

In terms of proper legitimacy the title to the throne of Spain is Don Juan de Borbon, the father of Juke Juan Carlos, son of the late Alfonso XIII, but he lost the claim to succession to the Franco formula of declaring Spain a monarchy. Juan personally criticized the dead Spanish leader for his authoritarian ways.

The break between Don Juan and Franco took place a long time ago, in late 1945, when the Allies had fought Hitler, Mussolini and Benito Fascism to a finish. Juan anticipated Francisco Franco would either slap down or modify his tough rule.

He did neither and intended to do neither. And it was at this point that Juan offered unconditional advice to Franco to liberalize his regime before the victorious Allies forced him to do so.

And now a Borbon is back on the Spanish throne and Spain is among the few power powers of Western Europe has reverted to a constitutional monarchy with a traditional ruling family.

The Borbon strain in Spanish history did not produce exemplary or enlightened monarchs, although Juan Carlos as king, given the pressures which have built up under Franco's authoritarianism, might become one in his own right.

It is entirely within the realm of possibility of how the crystal ball of a French Borbon that "after me the deluge" and let it be a gentle one at that.

To prove that he truly wants to be a constitutional monarch which was the dream of his father, the new Spanish monarch will have to open the jails, reduce the oppression of political opponents, announce governments in the Basque and Catalonian areas, and in northern Spain.

But above all, he will have to give a place to the many legitimate political parties now restless for a place in Spanish politics which were declared illegal by Franco.

Such was not the case when tried Spain in 1931 and before that in the 1870s.

Oil Running Short

The Shah of Iran has an air about him, as befits one of aristocratic birth. It borders at times on arrogance, but then aside from considerations of birth, he has reason enough, as one who holds ace cards over oil, to remind the western nations of just where they stand.

The Shah is also realistic enough to admit the prospect of oil drying up within 25 years would be as bad for the producing nations as it would be for the western nations which consume the stuff in such vast quantities.

Just stop to think for a moment of the consumption, not to mention the wastage, involved in the running of millions of cars and other mechanical vehicles, as well as aircraft and ships at sea, every day of the year. It is not difficult to appreciate that the usage must be staggering.

Car drivers doubtless consume the most overall, but how many drivers look upon oil as a noble product?" That's how the Iranian monarch describes it, noting there are no fewer than 70,000 by-products.

Canadians are going to feel the pinch still further in future, where oil is concerned. Ottawa has just announced it is cutting exports to the United States by the second year in a row, and will eliminate them entirely by the end of 1981, two years earlier than had been anticipated.

The lowering of speed limits in Ontario, and with Prince Edward Island announcing a similar move, is further recognition of the need to save fuel as well as lives.

And this while steps are taken to find other sources of supply, such as in the Arctic and the far sands of Alberta.

One way or another, either at the personal level, or by government edict, the message of conservation is going to be hammered home. It's either that or, as the Shah predicts, national ruin, and reduction to what he calls fifth-rate power status.

A Future for Solar Energy

The Picton Gazette

Scientists are predicting that by the end of this century as much as 40 per cent of Canada's energy needs will be produced by solar energy from the sun.

It's reserves in Canada, compared with the burgeoning needs of our technological society would face us with serious supplies were not found. Conservation of energy is more than just good stewardship of resources it is now a serious social necessity.

Solar energy, then, would be of enormous value if the world is to find viable alternatives to the natural gas before and coal. At the moment, however, its costs are unbelievable. Energy from this source today costs in excess of $20.00 a watt and scientists predict that it will be nearly the year 2000 before it can be produced at the economically feasible rate of 25 cents a watt.

Government agencies, private industry and universities in Ontario are now engaged in a major push to exploit solar power cheaply within a decade and a half, a major production by the year 2000.

It is like the major push back in the early 1900's to put a man on the moon. The analogy is apt, because while man had the ability to reach the moon before 1961 it required vast, expenditures of government funds and millions of dollars — to come up with a feasible scheme.

The same dedication and expenditure must be forthcoming if solar energy is to be viable. Governments must be urged to spend this money and that pressure on our frontiers for petroleum can be eased, pollution lessened and stewardship of resources practised for the right reasons.

Professional Semantics

Sarah Dolly Star

Prof. Peter Nash, of the University of Waterloo, recognizes that professors will have a way with words. And Prof. Nash illustrates this by suggesting how some professors more will be more likely if they wrote them the same way they write titles for research papers.

Some examples:

"Economic Emotional Disorders in Psychiatric Asymptomatical Environment.

"Towering Inferno" — Pyrogenic Stress Factors in a Psychiatric Setting.

"The Godfather" — Analysis of the Extreme Case of Semantic Confusion Resulting from Ambiguity in the Concept of the Holy Roman Empire.

Anyone who has taken courses in the humanities will recognize how well Prof. Nash has captured the talents of some university professors.

Fortunately, no one feel only professors can use such palatial prose. Lawyers and politicians also have ways of performing their own kinds of verbalistics with simply English and turning understandable terms into mind-boggling language exercises.

. . . And Maxwell Henderson Fingers Ontario Extravagance

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs
Analyst
Thomson News Service

To paraphrase Mark Twain, everybody talks about inflation but nobody does anything about it.

One or two people who have been talking about it, however, have the credentials that ought to ensure them a hearing by those who can do something about it—the leaders of governments that spend politicians, as Lenin said.

Maxwell Henderson, for one, has spent much time sensibly and authoritatively about the evil in governmental spending.

When he was auditor-general for Canada, Mr. Henderson investigated and p... ... countless examples of irresponsible spending in federal government programs.

For his efforts, he found himself harassed by the politicians and the bureaucrats.

Now, at the invitation of the Ontario government, he and a few private citizens have studied the province's spending, and come up with a list of reductions, improvements and cancellations that could save $1.5 billion during the next few years.

Most of the Henderson proposals could apply just as effectively to other governments from coast to coast—if the public service people in the other provinces could only be persuaded that they themselves, not politicians pale in any austerity program to bring inflation under control.

Robert Kaplan, a Liberal, organized several years ago, and small, with its federal government counterpart, reduce its spending, when he talked recently to the Montreal Society of Financial Analysts.

Unlike the Ontario committee in Ontario, Mr. Kaplan could put no dollar figure on the savings that could result from his proposals.

As he sees it, though, the dollar savings may be less significant than the example that Ottawa could set for the rest of the country—if it would.

For instance, he would change the present system under which a cabinet minister's political future is determined by the amount of money his department can manage to spend.

Another example: Abolition of Information Canada. Mr. Kaplan considers this body could save "only" $5-million a year. But the symbolic value of such an economy would be very high.

So, too, would that of much smaller savings, such as the elimination of luxury departmental publications (that are really designed to build prestige rather than to impart information) and reducing the international g... ernment entertainment travel, to reasonable levels.

The case for cost-cutting has been put forward repeatedly since long before Mr. Henderson's term as auditor-general.

But it has never produced any results. Some critics have argued that the real problem in Ottawa—a city that knows about cost-cutting, productivity and recession only from hearsay—is Parliament's own tendency to be prudent in spending.

Even the chairman of the anti-inflation board seems unaware of the advantage of setting an example.

Mr. Kaplan is puzzled and displeased at Jean Wadds's recent $50,000 salary. He considers his job equivalent to that of a deputy minister, and none of them are paid even more strictly honorary.

The simple point that escapes Mr. Kaplan is that Mr. Wadds apparently feels that senior civil service salaries which go as high as $98,000, are just too extravagant. He is the United States, the ceiling is $42,000).

Restraint is a prerequisite to spending, by itself won't stop inflation. Anyone making statements about restraint should set an example.

Guards Win Promises

MKW YORK (AP) — Angry guards staged a protest and won their own promises from city officials on behalf of 3,000 prisoners at Rikers Island city prison were given amnesty and pledges of improved conditions in return for the release of five hostages.

The nearly 1,200 prisoners at the institution released the hostages unharmed Monday following a 77-hour uprising.

About 200 tired guards, angered at what they saw as unwarranted leniency toward the prisoners and fearful for their own future safety, promptly walked off the job after the truce.

"They've given them the damn gun," shouted one disgruntled correction officer.

But Correction Commissioner Benjamin Malcolm said the conclusion of the disturbance without bloodshed made him "one of the happiest men in the world."

The uprising at the overcrowded jail in the East River ended Monday after a meeting with correction officials who assured the officers their demands will be met. They were scheduled to meet today with Mayor Abraham Beame.

The guards were promised that 39 correction officers laid off because of the city's fiscal problems will be promptly rehired; that the Bronx house of detention for men, which was scheduled to be closed, will remain open, and that all prisoners transferred from the Bronx will be sent back there.

As the agreement ended, maintenance crews went into the cellblock to survey the damage and begin cleaning up debris.

A spokesman estimated that tens of thousands of dollars worth of damage was caused by the rebellious prisoners. He said damage described broken toilet fixtures, holes punched through walls, mattresses burned and elbow rooms and corridors damaged.

The uprising at the jail, which houses prisoners awaiting trial, serving sentences or scheduled for transfer to state prisons, began about 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

Demands of the prisoners included improved visiting hours, longer and more frequent telephone calls, more regularly-scheduled time outside cells, better medical care, a full-scale system of rules and regulations, an end to overcrowding, hiring of more correction officers and improved jail housekeeping.

Complex Opens

CALGARY (CP) — MacCobham Van Lines, the largest Canadian-owned moving company, is expanding. The company has opened a new distribution and office complex which has 36,000 square feet of floor space in Calgary. Robert Peppin, company spokesman said, is the capital city's newest area for storage of household goods in individual pallet containers. Repacking from pieces to golf clubs will be stored there.

Season's Over

Marking the end of the boating season, floating debris is removed from Belleville harbor before cold weather causes freeze-up. The operation was carried out by Ald. Stu Meeks, chairman of the city's harbor improvement committee, and volunteer help.

Area Fairboards Reminded Of Procedure for Grants

Area fair boards were reminded last week that responsibility for its role in senior government and agricultural societies must meticulously follow regulations when seeking provincial grants on major projects.

The warning came from Arthur J. Peppin, assistant director, agricultural and horticultural societies branch of the agriculture and food ministry.

Grant applications must adhere to legislation covering each allocation, he told the annual convention of District 4, Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies (OAAS) at the Quinte Club.

Later, Mr. Peppin said his warning did not mean there were any restraints on grants.

Although the ministry was under tight financial constraint, the grants remain exactly the same with funds already allocated.

But, he told the convention, applications for government subsidies on major fair-grounds projects, must strictly formulate the legislated formula.

Before embarking on any major undertaking eligible for grants, local agricultural societies must: (1) Obtain permission from the provincial official responsible; (2) Set down the costs, and (3) Furnish a sketch or specifications of the project.

"We've just as happy to give it (the grant) to you. But you won't get it if you don't write in (in the ministry)," he said.

Failure to furnish prior information to the ministry, may sometimes be the result of changeovers in fair board executives which results in organizations not being familiar with legislation, he indicated.

Mr. Peppin spoke to some 90 men and women from the OAAS District 2 — which involves 17 agricultural societies from Kingston to Roosevelt, north of Cobourg.

The annual meeting hears reports from member fair boards, sets dates for next year's exhibitions, and elects new officers.

Selected as secretary-treasurer of the meet's division was Albert Vader of Cox Hill. Ray McCracken, of Roslesch, has another year of his two-year term to serve as district director.

The women's division chose Doris Campsall, of Parham, as president and district representative. Other executive members named were: Norma Thompson, Campbellford; Rosella Clancy, Stirling, vice-president; Thelma Calnan, Picton, secretary-treasurer and Lily LaFart, Tyendinaga Mohawk fair board, junior convener.

Giguere Resigns

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Louis Giguere resigned as a director of Campeau Corp., a major developer in Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal, Nov. 3 as his relations with Sky Shops Export Ltd. were made public in the Commons, Robert Campeau said Monday.

Mr. Giguere, president and chief executive officer of the corporation, said in an interview the resignation was "by mutual agreement" and was related to the Sky Shops affair.

The 'Scrounger' Keeps Committee Under Budget

Volunteers should be used in as many civic departments as possible, says City Ald. Stu Meeks — leader of the Belleville's tightest financial ships, the Harbor Improvement Committee.

Affectionately called "the scrounging gang" — a moniker by his committee members, Ald. Meeks likes to point to the fact that in all the works completed by his committee, no payment has never been made for labor charges.

"Them ... um, I said volunteer programs could save dollars for the municipality," says the alderman. "My committees never pays for labor."

A lot more could be done and a lot more dollars saved through volunteer efforts, Ald. Meeks says.

At this week's meeting Ald. Meeks announced the committee has been donated an "old dream cars from the Belleville Crematorium — now owned by the Moira River Conservation Authority — which the alderman is a member. The alderman said cars would be used for...Victoria Park flower planters.

"That's what we get for having a scrounger as a chairman," commended committee member Bert Frink.

A budget report shows the committee with a balance remaining in the account of approximately $6,000 — the end product of most committees' projects coming in at costs less than estimated. The committee's total budget for the year is about $15,000.

"And we only have you to blame for keeping it under budget," said Doug Rowe.

Wants Code Revised

OTTAWA (CP) — The time has come for Canadians to review their attitudes toward the drug problem and consider removing possession of marijuana from the Criminal Code, says a Liberal senator.

Senator Frederick Howe (Newfoundland) said in the Senate Monday night that 11 U.S. states already are imposing lower penalties for possession of marijuana.

The liberalization of marijuana laws in these states has not resulted in increased use of marijuana and a cause may occur, he said.

The situation was reminiscent of the early 1920s, when liberals in Great Britain pressed for abolition of hanging for offences such as poaching and robbery, he said.

Despite fears of increased crime, abolition of the death penalty for these offences actually resulted in a lower rate of crime, Senator Howe said.

He was speaking on a Senate motion urging establishment of a special committee to study crime and violence in Canadian society.

His cited the case of two women arrested — at Dundas, N.B., and sentenced to seven years for importing marijuana.

A short time later, a man arrested for drunken driving, after hearing that children down on a St. John's, Nfld., street was given a two-year prison sentence.

Multiple Sclerosis Chapter Re-activated

The Quinte Multiple Sclerosis Society is looking for a medical adviser for its chapter and a qualified nurse to attend monthly social evenings it plans in an effort to end the "start-in" nature of life of many sufferers.

Darrell Sabean, secretary of the re-activated Quinte society, says such medical help is necessary because "we have to play it safe, just in case problems develop."

The search for medical professionals is part of a move to re-activate the local chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Canada. It was first formed in 1966.

Now, says Mr. Sabean, the chapter has 65 members, and only four weeks have been spent by the society's executive in recruiting members.

Efforts are still continuing to reach people in the Belleville-Trenton-Picton area who might need help from the society, he said.

Some 363 sufferers are forced, because of the serious stage in which the disease is in, to remain bed-bound. These people, Mr. Sabean says, could be visited by society volunteers.

Other people, whose disease does not as seriously cripple them, can be more mobile. It is these people the society is attempting to reach now.

To give the more mobile the opportunity to attend the monthly social evenings, the chapter executive is also looking for drivers who would volunteer their time and vehicles once a month.

Mr. Sabean said the society, which gets no funds from the provincial organization and tries to be self-sufficient financially, can be reached through him (968-9416) or treasurer Bernard Fox in Trenton (392-2390).

Cabinet Approves Uranium Sale

BELJOU, LAKE, Ont. (CP) — The federal cabinet has given its approval to the export of 24,000 tons of uranium oxide to seven countries, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie announced today.

The shipments to Belgium, Finland, Germany, Japan, Spain, Switzerland and the United States would be the first to be made until safeguard agreements are signed by the countries with nuclear power plants, he said.

Mr. Gillespie said: he anticipates the safeguards, guarantees by importing countries against arms use, will be in the agreements before any shipments of explosives, would be agreed to.

Exports of nuclear material to Canada's customers since the 1974 Nuclear India explosion — Britain, Germany, Japan, Switzerland and the United States — have been suspended by mutual agreement until safeguards are signed by the countries with nuclear power plants, he said.

Mr. Gillespie said: he anticipates pressure from Canadian nuclear experts are not used in the production of explosives, would be agreed to.

Egg Marketing Board Will Follow Guidelines

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) has promised to voluntarily follow provisions of the anti-inflation program.

The pledge is contained in a letter defending a recent cost-of-production increase — one that was delivered Monday to the anti-inflation board chairman, Jean-Luc Pepin.

Copies of the letter, signed by CEMA general manager M. M. Boyntenyn, were made public. It says the letter is in answer to a board request.

Last Wednesday, the anti-inflation board ordered chairman Beryl Plumptre, said the price rises appeared unjustified and said she would demand explanations accordingly. She said egg prices should have declined because chicken feed prices were dropping.

Mr. Boyntenbyn says that on Oct. 13 the weighted average cost of producing a dozen Grade A eggs stood at 69.3 cents.

According to CEMA's monitoring of costs, but producers were allowed to charge 69.6 cents.

He said CEMA would have been justified in authorizing a one-cent-a-dozen price rise then. But it said of December feed prices were declining.

"A decision was delayed to permit further verification with the source of feed prices — the Canadian Livestock Feed Board."

Mr. Boyntenbyn says CEMA found by Oct. 31 there had been changes upward in feed prices in a major province, which was not identified.

Postal Strike Hampers Olympic Ceremonies

MONTREAL (CP) — The final drawing of tickets for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Summer Olympics will be postponed until early next year unless Canada's postal strike ends soon, an Olympic official said Monday.

"If the strike goes on for another week or so we will have to postpone the deadline until after Christmas," Kenneth Farmer, director-general of spectator services, said in an interview.

The organizers want to ensure that general postcard used for the draw would not be caught in a flood of Christmas mail.

The strike also has caused problems for the Quebec Lodging Bureau, which is preparing accommodation for visitors during the two-week Olympic period. The bureau has opened an office at Rosses Point, N.Y., to receive mail and is receiving accommodation request by telephone, Telex and TWX.

Mr. Farmer reported heavy demand around the world for tickets for the July 17 opening ceremonies, at which Queen Elizabeth will preside. Tickets for the 24 sporting events, ranging from archery to yachting, and for the ceremonies, are being sold in 20 countries.

For the Aug. 1 closing ceremonies and swimming, gymnastics, equestrian and cycling events also are in demand.

Meanwhile, Roger Rousseau, president of the Olympic organizing committee, sidestepped questions about whether the organizing committee had asked the Quebec government to take over the Olympic facilities.

Rousseau, speaking at the committee's weekly news briefing, suggested that decisions would be taken in the future of the Games rather than dwell on the past. The new board last Friday took ownership and control of the facilities away from the City of Montreal.

Bumps Studied

WINNIPEG (CP) — Motorists who dislike speed bumps used by some shopping centres to slow parking lot traffic may see them banned soon on city streets. The city works and operations committee is considering stiff fines for those who bring supermarket with speed bumps in about a year.

Scientists Discourage Loch Ness Myth

LONDON (Reuter) — British scientists Monday put a damper on ideas that a monster is alive in the murky waters of Loch Ness.

Underwater sites by United Kingdom scientists fuelled speculation that a colony of such creatures, left over from a prehistoric age, were swimming in the Scottish lake.

Other experts who have studied the photograph, however, say the picture is genuine.

A statement from the scientific staff of London's Natural History Museum said: "None of the photographs is sufficiently informative to establish the existence, for the present, of any large living animal in the lochs."

Highlanders, bookmakers, and tourist organizations are taking bets on the scientific verdict on the Loch Ness monster, a source of myth, amusement, and profit for generations.

MPP Criticizes Government For Land Profiteering

TORONTO (CP) — Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) said Monday during a meeting of the legislative committee studying housing estimates that the government has failed to come to grips with profiteering in the field of private ownership of land.

He also said the time has come for the government to make it too difficult and expensive for industry to settle in Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Cassidy said the government might have to compel industry in an effort to encourage its moving away. He said Toronto attracts industry like a magnet.

Mr. Cassidy, NDP housing critics, said the Conservative government's program of incentives to get people to move north and east in the province has failed.

Housing Minister John Rhodes agreed with Mr. Cassidy that the principal need for housing in Ontario is for persons of middle to low income. He also agreed he would favor one housing plan and not "a hand-aid program."

Asked by Mr. Cassidy whether he was a target for the number of housing starts in the province fell, Mr. Rhodes said he does not see that kind of target.

Alcohol Abused

TORONTO (CP) — Combined use of soft drugs and alcohol by young adults has led to alcoholism in about two years, Dr. Ronald R. Laing, formerly in charge of the Addiction Research Foundation, said at a recent conference. He said alcoholism normally takes about 15 to 20 years to develop but can be reduced to 10 years if drinkers begin at an early age, he said his view is supported by experience working with young in Northern and southern Ontario, British Columbia and Colorado.

REIGNED LONGEST

The longest reign of any of the 263 Popes has been that of St. Peter, the original, for 31 years, 236 days, from 1846 to 1978.

Barrett Says NDP Underdogs In British Columbia Election

VANCOUVER (CP) — They still fight British Columbia elections over what former premier W. A. C. Bennett called free enterprise and the socialist menace.

But this time the battle lines weren't sharply drawn. They were stained into greyness.

Premier Dave Barrett says the New Democratic party is not underdog against a group of Liberals, Conservatives and formerly Social Credit which, he says, is barnstormed by big business.

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett says the NDP has ruined the economy and it is his party against big government. Neither is certain in terms of civil servants and is responsible for spending waste.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace are trying to prevent their middle ground from being taken by the "other" preacher of the political persuasion.

This is not likely to be so easy as it was in 1975, when the NDP took 39 seats with 39.5 per cent of the vote, Social Credit got 31.5 per cent of the vote for 35 seats, the Liberals got 18.8 per cent for five seats and the Conservatives 12.7 per cent for two seats.

The three Liberals were returned to the legislature and have since disappeared from view.

By today, the Liberals, who have Democratic principles of underdog against a group of big business opponents, are in fourth position behind Social Credit, which, by inheritance of big business, is the underdog

For St. Andrew's Day

Haggis Is Easier to Find This Year

Belleville folks celebrating St. Andrew's Day Sunday, November 30, don't have far to go for their haggis this year.

In the past, haggis served was usually brought in under the trunk in Stoney Creek, whose Royal dish from out-of-town specialty Rams had to be ordered well in advance.

But since last summer, McVitae foods are for sale at Hamilton's Lucky Dollar store in Rossmore, so that the festive dishes that accompany St. Andrew's Day can be purchased all year long.

Haggis is available either whole or sliced, arriving at Hamilton's store fresh on Saturday. "We freeze everything at the end of the weekend," says Shirley Hamilton, "so that shoppers can get what they want either fresh or frozen."

Since they started stocking Bill McVitae's products, the Hamiltons have increased their orders from once every two weeks to twice a week. Word-of-mouth has made the store a popular place for Scots homesick for their homeland.

Besides a wide variety of Scottish foods — Ayrshire bacon, bridies, steak and kidney pies, blood pudding, Scots buns, scrassid kippers and lemon sole — the store now carries several Scottish newspapers and magazines. Recently The Stanley Post ran buy day-old copies of the paper along with recent issues of The Beano and The Dandy comics.

"We have 70 regular subscribers now," says Mrs. Hamilton. "More people are coming in all the time, asking especially for Scottish items. We're happy about it, because all these new customers are such pleasant people."

Shirley Hamilton, at Hamilton's Lucky Dollar Store in Rossmore, removes a haggis from the freezer for a Scottish customer getting ready delicacy, combines sauteed oatmeal and suet with the minced heart, lung and liver of a sheep.

Today's Child

By Helen Allen

BLAIR

Blair is a tall, slim 14-year-old with light brown hair, blue-grey eyes and fair skin.

He is deeply friendly and interesting to talk to.

When you meet him, it's hard to imagine that Blair used to be aloof and withdrawn, unwilling to play with other children or to join in any activities of a regular school.

Through a special school for children with emotional problems, and the encouragement of his foster parents, Blair has become much more outgoing, though still self-confident. He is now back at a regular school, in the two-year vocational course, vocational service is fostered and Doug is absorbed in it.

Instead of spending all his time indoors watching television, Blair has developed many outdoor interests. He likes camping and is keen on swimming. His foster family, with whom he spent many happy weekends in the country, have now moved to a farm. He is enjoying everything about the rural life. He is especially fond of the animals.

Blair enjoys sports and is good at most. Though he'd feel as much play with the other boys in his foster home as on organized team.

But Blair knows his foster home is and permanent and he wants very much to have parents of his own and a home where he will stay. Where it is doesn't really matter.

His need is for parents both to love him and like him, to encourage him to keep on developing new interests and not to be concerned about academic achievement.

To inquire about adopting Blair, please write to Today's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 3E2. In your letter tell something of your present family and your way of life.

During the trial disruption, consult your local Children's Aid Society.

Ann Landers

'Feeling Rotten' Needs Counselling

Dear Ann Landers: The adv vice you gave "Feeling Rotten in Denver" was pretty rotten it self. She was the woman who was mad at her husband because he "ticked her into it." Actually he argued with her for an hour and she became so upset with her second child when the first was only eight months old.

The woman was in her seventh month, having a terrible pregnancy — full of anger and resentment. She didn't want the baby, when she would get over her hostility. You said, "The minute the new baby" is placed in your arms."

Well, I've been there, Ann, and it didn't work that way for me. I stayed mad at my husband for nearly a year. I also disliked the second child almost I viewed as an "intruder" and a lot of extra work. My existence with the older child was short. I was surly and unpleasant to everyone. When my husband left me for work in the morning I viewed it as "escaping" from the mess he had created. I would sit at the breakfast table and boil inside, not wanting to do any housework or look after the children.

Finally I realized I was sick with repressed anger and wounded vanity. It took a solid year of pain and hard work but I made it.

So, please, Ann, don't label such a very picture for "feeling Rotten in Denver." Tell her — and others who are trapped in nonsensical pregnancies — that they may be licked with a psychiatrist's help. Believe me, if they didn't have their husbands and bothered.

I hope the P.G. lady who is "Feeling Rotten in Denver" will see this and if she doesn't get over her resentment when the new baby is placed in her arms, I recommend counseling.

Here's another letter on the same subject — with a little different twist:

Dear Ann: What kind of dumbbell is she — that resentful wife who is "Feeling Rotten in Denver"?

No woman need have an unwanted pregnancy these days. Every child has the right to be wanted.

Why didn't you tell her about Planned Parenthood? There are several devices a woman can use to protect herself against a pregnancy (or husband) — free.

Since the female of the species is the one who must nurse and care for the child, she should be free to decide how many children she wants, and when she wants to have them. Planned Parenthood will help her. All she has to do is look in the phone book or write to the national headquarters for the store. The address is: Planned Parenthood Federation of America, 810 Seventh Avenue, New York, New York 10019.

Dear Wonderful: Thanks for writing. While it's too late for the lady in Denver this time, your advice is good for most folks. It's also useful for others who are still feeling good — elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Homer Leavitt

Leavitt — Vance

Wooler United Church was the scene of the November 6 wedding of Lana Lorraine Vance, Belleville, and Thomas Homer Leavitt, Wooler.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Vance, Shannonville, Ont. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Leavitt, Wooler, Ont.

Rev. Charles Carpenter officiated at the late afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length white sequin style gown of crystalene over taffeta with wedding band collar. The bodice and skirt front were accented with contrasting lace. A petal headdress held the full length lace trimmed veil of sheer silk illusion. She carried cascade bouquet of red roses, lily of the valley and carnations.

Mrs. Mark Short, matron of honor, wore a full length dress of coral matte knit with cape effect sleeves with a v-neckline.

Marnie Leavitt and Betty Bevard attended the bride in a matte silk jersey in wedwood blue with high cowl neckline falling in a V to the waistline. Full flowing sleeves were gathered in a four button tapered cuff.

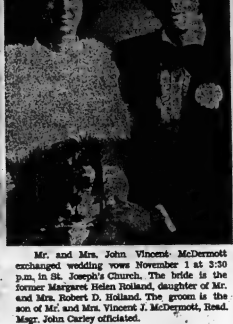
After a wedding reception and buffet supper at the Hillcrest Community Centre, the couple left for a wedding trip to points north.

They reside at RR 1, Trenton.



Mr. and Mrs. John Vincent McDermott exchanged wedding vows November 1 at 3:30 p.m. in St. Joseph's Church. The bride is the former Margaret Helen Rolland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Holland. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent J. McDermott. Read Msgr. John Carley officiated.

Social Information For Brides-to-Be

Engagement announcements should be brought to the main desk of The Intelligencer from 8.30 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays. Those without photographs cost $6.50, and those with photographs cost $8.70.

Wedding notices should be brought to the women's department upstairs at The Intelligencer, between 8.30 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays, or from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays. Information about weddings should be set down on wedding forms available from either the main desk or the women's desk. here is no charge for the inscription of the wedding, but a charge of $6.70 is made for reproduction of a photograph.

Black and white glossy photographs are recommended for the best reproduction in the newspaper. If, however, you have only color photos, bring the negative so that it can be used to make a black and white print.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN

Peter Hay, vice-president in charge of marketing for Carter's, defined marketing as "satisfying or anticipating needs at a profit. Speaking to the Canadian Federation of University Women he pointed out that in recent years his firm has been aiming its advertising at the female market.

Markets are anticipated by statistics showing sizes of income groups, and by demographics indicating the numbers in different age groups. Product development starts with feasibility studies, which leads to manufacturing, wholesale distribution, retail distribution, then the consumer.

Packaging is designed to keep the cost as low as possible while keeping the product quality high for the required period. During the question period the matter of overpackaging was raised, as well as problems arising from Quebec's requirement that labels be bilingual were discussed.

Mrs. Hay was introduced by Jan Bellstedt and thanked by Marylen Burtt.

Ski Fashions

Racing Suit

Racing suit with bibbed pants is one of the most popular looks in men's skiwear. This suit, in navy with red and white accents, is made of nylon and polyester. Goggles and leather gloves in navy, red and white complete the look.

Layered Look

Layered look is the newest trend in ski fashions. Pink nylon jacket (left) has matching overall pants and a pink, blue and white striped sweater over a polyester turtleneck. Ribbed overalls (right) are made of nylon and rayon. A red jacket with navy and white trim and a white turtleneck complete the outfit.

Super look in downhill skiing is nylon and polyester-filled ski suit in navy and bright yellow. Navy cap matches scarf and leather stitched mitts.

Cross-country skiing outfit for the man consists of nylon knit suit with yellow and black trim, yellow sweater and navy knee socks. The lady wears orange cotton corduroy knickers and acrylic sweater in yellow, rust, orange and red.

Harmony Diamonds
Our rings become heirlooms

It's a man's world

Surprise, ladies! For the first 2,000 years diamonds were known to exist, they were the exclusive property of men! And, suddenly, thanks largely to smart masculine designs as in our Harmony collection, diamonds are returning to men's fashion. Diamond's for men. What an unusual idea!

Poll Shows Majority Prefer Simple Life Instead of Luxury

OSLO (Reuter) — A poll showing that Norwegians are more interested in the quality of life and improving the environment than in material gain has taken people here by surprise and touched off a major public debate.

The basic thrust of the poll, based on interviews with 800 people from all walks of life, is that Norwegians feel things that money can't buy are most important. They are tired of preoccupation with material improvement and long-for a simpler life.

The report from the Gallup Institute said 78 per cent of those asked said the standard of living was too high, only one per cent found it too low, 74 per cent said they would prefer "a quiet and simple life with only the essential things, a limited income and limited possibilities for a career."

The poll was taken for a consumer research institute, an institute for nutrition research and a movement which campaigns for a simpler life and simpler eating.

Thirty-three per cent said the thought increased production, higher wages and increased consumption would result in "more materialism," a madder rush for higher status, unnecessary luxury goods, more pressure, stress, pollution and health injuries as the pleasure of work."

What surprised commentators most was the fact that the high-est percentage of anti-luxury answers were found among the lower income brackets. Thirty-five per cent of those earning less than 40,000 crowns (27,000) a year said they preferred a simpler way of life compared with 66 per cent for those earning more than 80,000 crowns, which means those in the middle-income bracket.

Hafs. Beckstroem, an official of the institute, stressed that the answers represented a clear-cut opinion, based on interviews with 800 persons. Doubling of this number would not have changed the picture. The trend was consistent and unequivocal, he said.

Politicians and the average person are asking themselves how to interpret the poll. The logical consequence should be that a Norwegian worker wants less money and that the trade-union fight, for higher real income should be called 'off.'

Though the standard of living in Norway is among the highest in the world, there is reason to believe—despite the poll—that most wage-earners would like more money.

As one labor politician put it, "it is hard to imagine inverted wage talks whose aim should be to try to solve the problems resulting from desired wage cuts and reduced purchase power."

'On Toe' Ballet Dancing May Harm Child's Feet

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP) — "A parent who insists on having her child 'on toe' before age 10 can do permanent damage to the child's feet," says Desiree Arnoco, Marin County ballet and jazz dance teacher.

"I showed x-rays of a child's feet to a mother who insisted her eight-year-old learn to dance on toe. I explained that the joints might be damaged by the pressure, ending her child's dancing hopes permanently.

She said she also warned the mother of many stresses in the graceful art of ballet.

The mother decided to enroll the child in another school.

"We call them 'stage mothers'" said Mrs. Arnoco, herself a mother of two.

Mrs. Arnone's approach to the five-to eight-year-olds in her classes is to relax the kid and restrict the lesson to simple positions, correct posture and turns with no dancing "on toe."

Top Cheeses Get Scrutiny in 48th British Empire Exhibition

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A whiskey-coated trio has been sniffing and squeezing through tables laden with cheese in downtown Belleville this week.

The three men went about their task intently — for it's a serious business.

On their decisions hings reputation.

The three are judges of entries in the British Empire Dairy Show now in its 48th year in Belleville and still a top event of its kind in Canada.

The three men, wise in the ways of choosing champion ship cheese, are members of the federal agriculture industry — Tom Aitcheson, Belleville; Vern VanBuren, Guelph; and Tom Smith, Kemptville.

They started judging Monday and were expected to complete their assignment some time today.

Judging cheese can be a "pretty tough job" and presents "quite a challenge," says Terry Baxter, provincial agriculture and food industry representative who helped organize the exhibition.

Meticulously working through tables stocked with an estimated 135 cheeses of various sizes, the three judges grade entries.

"The job is done by scooping a sample from each cheese. The three judges sniff it for flavor, knead it between their fingers to determine texture, then closely scrutinize the product for color and finish.

Maximum points allowed for grading is 100. But top quality cheese will usually achieve something over 96, says Mr. Baxter.

The grading task becomes harder in case of a tie. This means going back to the first cheese already given the same points for further tasting.

The show has drawn entries from as far away as New Brunswick and Wisconsin.

There are numerous prizes, both in cash and trophies, spread over 16 classifications.

But the most coveted prize is the British Empire Award emblematic of the show's championship.

The judges' decisions — and the awards — will be made known Thursday night at the annual banquet of the Canadian Ontario Cheese Makers Association which sponsors the cheese show.

EMO Revival Stalls At Committee Stage

BY COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A decision on the future of the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization (EMO) was stalled Monday night — allowing an administrative committee more time to clarify what federal aid is available and what sort of volunteer program can be arranged locally.

The EMO, until last June, had been in charge of disaster planning for Hastings and Prince Edward Counties and the municipalities of Belleville and Trenton.

The program folded, save for its name, early this summer when both senior governments withdrew support and local county councils refused to pick up the extra along with Belleville and Trenton.

Despite a recent announcement that the federal government is offering 75 per cent funding for renewed EMO operations, Prince Edward County formally withdrew support at its last council meeting and a Hastings County official said Monday his council is likely to follow suit.

"To be frank, I think Hastings County will say 'no' to further funding," County Warden Bill McCrea said Tuesday during the EMO committee meeting.

In an attempt to rejuvinate it — at least part of the organization, a meeting will be held as soon as possible among all area volunteer organizations where a tentative program and "modest" budget will be formulated.

Once that committee has agreed on some form of continued program, the EMO committee will call a meeting to which any interested municipality in the area will be invited.

Though the parent councils of both counties are not in support of the organization, perhaps individual municipalities would like to be involved," suggested city Ald. Stu Meeks.

Belleville Mayor Ben Corke said "I don't think we can ask the municipalities a $40,000 budget — something more modest in the $4,000 to $7,000 range."

"All emergency measures organization is a good thing to sell," said Mayor Corke. "Such an organization is lower than Richard Nixon in the popularity poll."

"But, before we go to the municipalities for support, we must have 'something to sell' them," he said.

In the federal government's proposal is pick up the tab legal. It is also stated that EMO groups have only until the end of December to notify the government that funding is desired.

"Considering we can't reach the civil servant in question on three different days to gain information on the program, I'm sure we'll be able to arrange an extension of the time limit," said Mayor Corke. "Government is never in that much of a rush."

Mayor Corke said following the meeting he believes the necessary meeting can be arranged quickly and that a meeting of representatives of area councils — particularly the Townships of Sidney, Thurlow and Ameliasburg Townships, Belleville and Trenton could be called before the end of the year.

Sesame Street

Lucy Stokmans, a registered nursing assistant at Belleville General Hospital, will imitate Big Bird from the TV program Sesame Street for the annual Christmas Santa Claus parade Saturday morning. She is helped into her costume by Kim Carleton, one of the many volunteers helping to construct the floats.

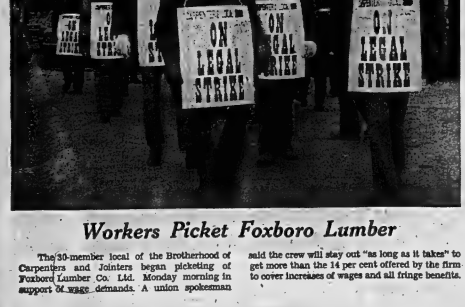
Presentation Date Set For New Zoning Bylaw

Belleville's new zoning bylaw will be presented to the municipality's planning advisory committee for the first time Wednesday, Dec. 3 in council chambers at 7:30 p.m.

The bylaw forms the teeth of the official plan — legislating what type of structure may be erected or what use might be applied to any portion of the city.

Representatives of Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd. consultants, will present the plan to the committee.

Frank Stokmans, deputy planning director of the Quinte Planning Board, said the 77-page document is more sophisticated than any planning bylaws previously held by the city.



Workers Picket Foxboro Lumber

The 30-member local of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Jointers began picketing of Foxboro Lumber Co. Ltd. Monday morning in support of wage demands. A union spokesman said the crew will stay out "as long as it takes" to get more than the 14 per cent offered by the firm to cover increases of wages and all fringe benefits.

Committee Selection Upgraded

Interested in civic service?

If so, ask member of city council about upcoming vacancies on various boards, committees and commissions which play advisory roles in the local government process.

To date, city hall advertisers such vacancies, with them interested writing to council.

But now Mayor Ben Corke said Monday, such citizens should also contact himself or other members of council.

One reason is that written requests don't always reveal enough information on which council can base a decision when making civic appointments for the new year, he said.

Through personal contact the mayor or aldermen can gather more personal background from an individual, he added.

The current postal strike also makes written letters inconvenient, said the mayor.

Appointments to various city boards committees must be drafted in time for the first session of council in 1976.

Haggarty Wants Action On 'Gyspy' Truckers

TORONTO — Ontario Trucking Association president Max Haggarty of Belleville said Monday anyone engaged in an illegal trucking operation should be fined $300 to $10,000 and imprisoned a maximum of 30 days.

Mr. Haggarty, president of Lafferty-Smith Express Lines Ltd. in Belleville, said these private trucking firms are a "frankenstein that threatens our very existence" — taking about $60-million a year away from regulated trucking operations.

Mr. Haggarty was speaking to the opening session of the association's 42th annual convention in Toronto.

He called upon the provincial government for stronger enforcement and stiffer fines.

"As government has imposed more constraints on regulated carriers, unscrupulous arrangements with gypsy operators have become more and more prevalent," he said.

Sometimes, he said, when court action is taken against a pirate trucker, the case is prolonged, and the illegal operator remains functioning.

Mr. Haggarty said that often, "they merely switch the next day under a new name."

Board Plans Seminar To Explain New Bill

MADOC — In an effort to avoid unnecessary conflict Hastings County Board of Education is planning a one-day seminar on the implications of Bill 100 between the board's administrators and representatives of teaching federations.

Trustees learned of the meeting Monday night at Madoc Public School. The board holds meeting periodically throughout the county.

Board officials have expressed concern that misunderstanding of the controversial legislation, governing teacher-board relations, could affect the board of conflict during negotiations expected to begin in January.

An expert on Bill 100 from the ministry of education will attend the day-long meeting Dec. 3 at the Ann St. Education Centre.

L. F. Reid, deputy director of education, in a letter to county federations, said implications of the new bill will have far reaching effects on contract talks across the province.

Plaza Construction Continues

Workmen Tuesday began lifting air conditioning and heating units to the roof of the East End Plaza, preparing for the centre's transformation into a fully climatized, enclosed mall. Work is expected to halt during the Christmas rush and resume at the first of the new year.

Petition Asks Township To Get Water Piped In

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

Close to 40 property owners along Hastings County Rd. 5 west of Frankford want Sidney Township to restrict the village to extend water lines to their rural lots.

Their desires were officially made known to the township Monday in a petition circulated by Rose Obuszsky, one of nine homeowners clustered around Pitcher's Sideroad who have been complaining about unobtainable well water for several months.

Mrs. Obuszsky said about 87 per cent of the property along the approximate one-mile stretch of road is represented by signatures on the petition.

Last week, when the nine homeowners with polluted wells went to Sidney council, councillors requested a petition to indicate the feeling among road residents over extension of what could be expensive water mains to their homes.

An extension of services as far as Pitcher's Sideroad is seen by the nine homeowners as a solution to the problem of polluted wells.

Their water, they say has become unobtainable as a result of contamination.

As a result, residents turned to extensive use of bottled water — temporary at first, and then permanent as a solution.

But a problem may arise: Sidney council must ask Frankford council to okay an extension and then the village must in turn ask the environment ministry to okay the extension from the provincial water treatment plant, being built to supply Frankford.

Gordon Thom, environment ministry industrial abatement officer, said Monday the ministry would look favorably on extension of water provided there are no objections, from Frankford.

But Frankford itself, said Mr. Thom, has its own problems with water — which we don't enough. The ministry is making a wel west of Frankford to alleviate a shortage in the village.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Monday, Nov. 24, 2:33 p.m. — alarm pulled from station at Superior Electric on Centre St.

Urban Student Busing Estimated at $64,000

MADOC — Faced with mounting pressure from parents Hastings County Board of Education here Monday night moved into a new area of school transportation that will cost taxpayers $64,800 — urban busing.

It will provide transportation for students within urban municipal boundaries who walk long distances to schools. However, it will apply to elementary students who live more than one mile from school or secondary school students who live more than two miles away.

The board's transportation committee estimates it would include about 624 students in Rawdon, Belleville, Frankford, Stirling and Trenton, and about 525 secondary school students in Trenton.

About $57,000 of the estimated cost would be covered by provincial grants and the rest the board would be $7,843.

The board's superintendent of business, Ken Wormald, said Monday three factors led to the decision: distance, time and safety.

The board's chairman, Jean Hutchison, said she has received several verbal complaints from parents in Trenton whose children had to walk over three miles to school.

Foxboro Lumber Workers Picket Yard

Rollins Lumber Co. Ltd. employees officially struck the Foxboro plant Monday morning — stopping lumber materials from leaving the yard.

Some 20 members of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Jointers, Local 2056, were on picket duty during the morning and Union steward Alfred Lawrence said shifts are being arranged to allow round-the-clock picketing.

The union's 30-members will draw a weekly strike pay of $40, less than $30, said Mr. Lawrence.

He said strike action was taken because employees have been offered if three-per-cent increase plus a cost-of-living clause. "The cost of living clause was negotiated last contract so all we're really getting is three per cent," he said.

A company release last week stated the total offer — including salary, cost of living and fringe benefits — amounts to 14 per cent.

"We'll go back for the cost of living clause and 10 per cent," said Mr. Lawrence.

Ron Murray, vice-president of the lumber company said Monday he believes the company has made a fair offer.

"We took a sampling of lumber yards in the city and surrounding area and made our offer comparative to other wages," he said.

He said the federal wage limits do not affect the plant.

Rollins Construction Co. Ltd., whose president is also president of the lumber yard, has stated alternate building material suppliers will be used until the dispute is settled.

Two Men Remanded

Two Tweedie men will appear in provincial court here on Dec. 1 to have a date set for trial on a total of five charges.

Dennis Craig Meeks, 24, and Michael John Pennebaker, 21, both of 67 West Lingwood Ave., were remanded when they appeared in provincial court here on Monday.

Both men have been charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking and possession of stolen goods. Meeks has also been charged with possession.

Police say the two men were arrested on Oct. 16 during a routine traffic check on Highway 2 at Bayside.

Trenton Man Fined $300

Roger LeBlanc of Trenton has been fined $300 in provincial court after being found guilty of three offences against the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

A spokesman for the Belleville Office of the UIC said Mr. LeBlanc had given incorrect particulars of his employment and had also failed to declare his earnings.

He was fined $100 for each of three offences.

20-year-old In Court

A 20-year-old Belleville man will appear in provincial court here on Jan. 8 to have a date set for trial on a charge of robbery with violence.

Randall Gordon Foster of 38 College St. was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here on Monday.

Police say Deetta was charged Oct. 12 following an investigation into an incident on North Front St. here in which a man demanded money from 69-year-old Oswald Bell of Coleman St., who was walking along the street.

Bell was approached by a man and woman, struck him and later fled when several people stopped at the scene, police say.

Suspect Remanded

A 36-year-old Alnwick man will appear in provincial court here on Jan. 8 for trial on charges of criminal negligence causing death and careless driving.

William Bernard Malone of 10 Edward St. was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here on Monday for the first time.

Police say Malone was charged on Nov. 15 following an investigation into a car-truck collision on Highway 401 east of Brighton and two miles east of Brighton.

Killed was Mrs. Mona Mae Neal family, passengers in the car, died when the fuel tank of their vehicle ignited, engulfing the car in flames, police say after the accident, police say.

Arson Suspect In Court

A 36-year-old Belleville man will appear in provincial court here on Dec. 5 for trial on three counts of arson.

Ernest Higgins of 117B Victoria Ave. was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here Monday to have a date set for trial.

Police say Higgins was charged on Nov. 14 following an investigation into three fires which occurred in the city during the past four months.

The fires were a two-alarm blaze at an apartment block at 90-92 Victoria Ave. on Oct. 17 a 1½ hour fire at a two-storey house on Clarendon Rd. on Nov. 3 and a blaze in a garage near Victoria Ave., police say.

This Defender Does His Job

TORONTO (CP) — Cleveland Crusaders may be struggling to win half of their World Hockey Association games, but with defenceman Fred Stanfield on the ice they're tough to beat.

The 29-year-old defenceman has the most impressive plus/minus goals record in the league, the latest WHA statistics show.

Counting only those goals scored when both teams are at full strength, the statistics show Stanfield has been on the ice while the Crusaders have scored 23 goals and given up nine, a plus 14 record in 17 games.

More impressively, he has been on the ice for 54 per cent of Cleveland's goals scored per cent of the opposition's for a league-leading plus 28 per cent record.

Last year Shmyr, who played with California Seals and Chicago Black Hawks of the NHL before switching to Cleveland, had plus records of 11 goals and nine per cent.

Two former NHL defencemen, J.C. Tremblay and Ted Green, coaching impact Anders Hedberg, Lars-Erik Sjoberg and Ulf Nilsson and second-year defenceman Tom Edur also had outstanding records.

Tremblay has been on the ice for 45 of the 72 goals scored by

PAUL SHMYR
Quebec Nordiques when both teams were at full strength. He's plus 18 in goals but only plus 11 per cent.

Green, Hedberg, Sjoberg and Nilsson all have plus records of more than 20 with Winnipeg Jets with Hedberg tops at 25 plus.

Bobby Hull, Jets' year's scoring champion, has a plus mark of only 10 goals, but the opposition has scored only twice while he was on the ice with both teams at full strength.

Seals and Leafs Show Improvement

MONTREAL (CP) — Sound goaltending and better overall defensive play today have provided California Golden Seals and Toronto Maple Leafs with more respectable National Hockey League records than the two teams enjoyed in the early going of previous seasons.

The Seals, who failed to reach the playoffs for three straight years, today sport a record of eight wins, 11 losses and two ties in 24 games so far. And while they are still last in the four-team Charles F. Adams division, the 18 points they have accumulated give the Seals only one fewer than their best ever start—in 1971-72 when they were 9-13-2 after 24 games.

The Seals goaltending combination of Gilles Meloche and Gary Simmons has alternated for every game so far. The combo has reduced California's goals-against by 29—40 to 69 from 98 one year ago.

Meloche has the better average 2.93, and he has recorded the club's only shutout.

Also greatly improved is California's penalty-killing. During four

The Seals goaltending combination of Gilles Meloche and Gary Simmons has alternated for every game so far. The combo has reduced California's goals-against by 29—40 to 69 from 98 one year ago.

Meloche has the better average 2.93, and he has recorded the club's only shutout.

Also greatly improved is California's penalty-killing. During four-to-last 24 games, the Seals have killed off 87 power-play goals. That's 11 fewer than they allowed in an identical number of short-handed situations one year ago.

Another club enjoying a brighter season is Toronto. With a 9-9-5 record after 23 games, the Leafs are off to their best start since 1961-62.

That season they were 15-6-1 in 23 games. In the same span last season Toronto won only five games, lost 11 and tied six.

Like the Seals the Leafs have trimmed 29 goals from the total allowed one year ago at this point in the schedule—to 80.

The off-season acquisition of goaltender Wayne Thomas from Montreal Canadiens is one of the reasons for the improvement. Thomas was in goal for Toronto's nine wins and four of the club's five ties.

He has one shutout and a 2.89 goals-against average, despite the fact he gave up eight goals to Buffalo Sabres Oct. 12 and then 31 minutes to the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers, Oct. 26.

But in his other 13 starts Thomas has allowed only 21 goals or slightly more than two per game.

In the individual scoring race, right winger Guy Lafleur of Montreal leads in goals with 16 and in points with 27. Bobby Clarke, Philadelphia's all-star centre and captain, is second in the race with 26 points, followed by centre Pete Mahovlich of the Canadiens with 24.

Canadian Teams Packing a Punch

TORONTO (CP) — Players on Canadian division teams are dominating the World Hockey Association scoring race after seven weeks of the regular-season schedule.

Statistics released Monday by the league show that 15 of the players in the scoring race are from Canadian division teams. Six of the players are from Quebec Nordiques, three from Winnipeg Jets, two from Edmonton Oilers and one each from Toronto and Calgary.

Marc Tardif of the Nordiques leads the pack with a league-leading 34 goals in 22 games, combined with 16 assists for 50 points.

Line-mate Chris Bordeleau, with a league-leading 27 assists, is second with 23 points, followed by yet another Nordique, Serge Bernier, with 22 points.

Joe Daley of Winnipeg has the best goals against average in the league with a 1.82 mark. He also leads the league in shutouts with four and in shutout periods with 31.

Daley is also tops in the league in another department—goals against frequency. The Winnipeg goalie has allowed one goal for every 15.17 shots he's handled.

J.C. Tremblay, perennial all-star defenceman with Quebec, has been named the club to lead the league in scoring last week with eight points.

Namath Doesn't Need Frustrations That Are Part of a Losing Season

NEW YORK (AP) — Namath is a proud man. He is loaded. He has people standing in line bidding for his services in television, the movies and public relations.

He has been playing football on match-stick knees and tired, 32-year-old throwing arm this season, not because he gets $450,000 a year—the highest salary of any football player in history—but because he thought it would be fun to play with a winner one more year.

The 1975 season has been neither. It hasn't been fun. It hasn't been a winner for New York Jets. It has been a disaster.

Broadway Joe doesn't need to go down with a disaster. So, he said today and sometime next summer, he will sit down with Jets' president Phil Iselin.

The odds are Joe will retire. Iselin can have a $400,000 the next year—all of it.

Joe can't afford to commit himself now. The Jets have four more games to play and he wouldn't pull the rug from under his team-mates like that.

But he does say: "There will be some heavy thinking about it—no my part and my associates'—before next season."

He adds: "Anything can happen."

But there was something significant in what Namath said last summer, just prior to signing a two-year, $900,000 contract to play a couple more years with the Jets.

"There are a lot of frustrations playing with a losing team," he said over a beer at a small pub near the team's Hofstra University training quarters. "It's tough coming up with failures week in and week out, some of them my fault.

"It gets to be a drag."

Namath acknowledged at the time that the only thing that could lure him to stay in the game was the prospect of a winning team.

"I play football because I like it," he said, indicating that when it ceased to be fun he would quit.

Hotspur Needs Extra Time To Turn Back West Ham

LONDON (Reuter) — Two goals in extra time gave Tottenham Hotspur a 3-2 victory over fellow Londoners West Ham United in their English Football League Cup fourth round replay Monday night.

The goals came from John Duncan and Willie Young after a scoreless deadlock at the end of the regulation 90 minutes.

The floodlights failed in the first half and there was a delay of nearly half an hour before they got back in action.

Extra time failed to resolve two English Football Association Cup first round replays, with non-league clubs Bedford and Wycombe Wanderers drawing 2-2 and Third Division clubs Wrexham and Mansfield Town ending level at 1-1.

Citizens' Committee Looking for Answers

HAMILTON (CP) — An independent citizens' committee will be appointed to investigate the proposed $3-million investment in a 20,000-seat arena, city council's arena committee decided Monday.

The arena committee said the citizens' group, expected to be composed of 12 members, will report its findings to city council.

The council committee also agreed with Mayor Vic Copps' suggestion of holding public meetings to explain the city's proposed participation before the field city council vote.

The first of the four or five public meetings will be held Wednesday.

The project involves the city investing $2 million in the $14 million arena, p ported by Ted Tobias, a Tor nto promoter.

Mr. Tobias told the council this season, but because he gets a year—the biggest salary of any football player in history—but because he thought it would be fun to play with a winner one more year.

Napanee Comets Shade Lindsay

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP) — Napanee Comets edged Lindsay Lancers 4-3 in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game scheduled Monday.

The Lancers scored one goal in each period while the Comets scored four goals in 'the second.

Scoring for Napanee were Rick Gerow, Peter Fleming, Wayne McConnell and Ron Gain.

Rick Purdy opened the scoring for Lindsay in the first period. John Kimble scored in the second and Wayne Manchuk in the third.

Napanee picked up 15 minor penalties, Lindsay 11 minors, one major and a game misconduct.

Galt is at Whitby on Thursday.

Captain Traded

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Team captain Mark Perrys was traded Monday by Windsor Spitfires of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A circuit for two players from Hamilton Fincups.

The Spitfires also included what they described as future considerations in return for second-year winger Jack Anderson and rookie centre Frank Logue.

Chuckwagon Back on Track

Chuckwagon Foods broke out of a two-game slump Monday night when they buried Bob's Lumber a 5-4 setback in Gas House Hockey League action at the Memorial Arena. The win enabled Chuckwagon to remain tied for first place with Belleville Yardmen, who also won their Monday encounter, with 14 points.

In the other two GHHL games, BTBF blanked Proctor and Gamble 3 and Sayler Orchards held Bob's Girls to a 3-3 draw.

Chuckwagon had won their first seven consecutive games before bowing to the Yardmen two weeks ago. Last week, Bob's shut them out, but Monday the caterers came right back, spearheaded by a three goal outburst from Tom Pierce. Don Donaldson and Fred Sickle added singles. Donaldson also drew three assists.

Vic McKenzie fired all four Bob's markers, but his efforts were in vain.

Chuckwagon scored more goals than any other team has against Bob's in a single game this year, but settled for a tie. It was the fourth consecutive game without a loss for Bob's. Despite being beaten three times once by Bill Van Sooten, Bill Minaker and Steve Trenholm — Vern Wheaton's goals against average still remains less than 1.00.

Pat Mallice collected his first hat trick of the season in leading the Yardmen to their lonesome victory. Dave Taylor, Dave Hamilton and Rob Brown were the other scorers.

Jim's Earns Weekend Split

Keith Kaine's Belleville Jim's Pizzeria continues to produce top efforts in Ontario Minor Hockey Association Juvenile action.

The squad dropped a close 3-1 decision in Peterborough, Sunday after picking up a hard earned road win by a 5-3 score against Brooklin-Whitby, in Whitby, Saturday.

Sunday's match in Peterborough developed into a keen goaltender's duel between the winners' Mike Bond and Belleville's Mark Meehan. Both came up with solid displays to thwart would-be goal scorers.

Jim's took the lead with the first period's only goal when Paul Hayman finished off a three-way move with Roger Chapman and Brian Hamilton.

Peterborough equalized early in the second and then scored the winner late in the third. Marksmen for the home team were Tom Heigh and Sid McKenzie.

In Saturday's win, Jim's didn't let a player shortage keep them from applying the pressure on Whitby-Brooklin all the way through, outshooting the home side 23-19 enroute to the victory.

Jim's had only 10 players available for the trip to Whitby and that complement included goalies Allan Park and John Merrill. Work committed kept other regulars out of the lineup.

Belleville overcame a 3-1 deficit with four consecutive counters to pull it out.

Gord Male accounted for most of the Jim's production with a sparkling four-goal effort. Ross MacLeod had the other goal for the winners.

In bantam action, Belleville Kinsmen scored a pair of wins, topping Kingston Town-ship 9-1 in a league game and doubling the score on Stanley Stratford Midget Selects in an exhibition encounter.

Belleville McIlvoy-Maines minor bantams were not as fortunate. They dropped a 13-4 decision to Peterborough.

Mark Crawford and Shawn Mulroney each fired a brace of goals in Kingston's defeat of Kingston Township. Other goal scorers were Bill Rowe, Clarence Henderson, Barry Dales, Steve Murphy, and Steve Mofina. The only Kingston shooter to get the puck past Belleville's Bobby Heigs was Steve Stewart.

Stanley Structures got a standout performance from Steve Graham who supplied all its goals in the 13-4 loss to Kinsmen. Crawford had four, Brookema, two, Rowe, two, Brad Miller, one, and Merlau, a single, to account for the winners' total.

Sharing the McIlvoy-Maines goal in the loss to Peterborough were Robert Seale, Tom Quesnel, Greg Horwood, Dan Hunsinger and Joe Collins.

Bradshaw Picks Oilers Apart

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers, down to their third quarterback of the season, might under the aerial assault of progame-great Terry Bradshaw and Pittsburgh's steel curtain defense.

Bradshaw flawlessly threaded 13 of 16 passes through the nerves Houston defense to give the Steelers a 32-9 victory in a National Football League game Sunday.

The win gives Pittsburgh a 10-1 record and a two-game lead over Cincinnati Bengals in the Central Division of the American Football Conference.

Coach Chuck Noll was so impressed with his Steelers' hostwork that he pronounced them playoff ready.

"Our offence is where it was in the end of last season, moving the ball well and getting the points," said Noll. "Our defence, I would say, was flawless."

Bradshaw whipped scores in 1:38 span of the second quarter for a commanding 18-0 halftime lead.

Despite the motto of "hold the rope" many fans cheering them on, the Oilers untied the knot of the pimpled passing of Bradshaw and the running of Franco Harris, who gained 100 yards and scored two touchdowns.

The Oilers, whose record dropped to 7-5, slipped to third place in the AFC's Central Division.

Houston took a 3-2 lead in the second quarter on a 30-yard field goal by Skip Butler but Bradshaw wiped out that advantage.

The Steelers got a safety in the first quarter when Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini was tackled in the end zone after losing the ball from a shotgun formation.

Bradshaw set up the first of two touchdowns, runs by Harris with passes of 18 and 16 yards to Lynn Swann in the second quarter. Harris, the first receiver to gain 100 yards against Houston's defence this season, bulled four yard for a touchdown with 2:23 to go in the half for a 9-3 Steeler lead.

Cornerback J. T. Thomas returned an interception 11 yards on Houston's next series and Bradshaw again went to the air with four successive completions, the last one 18 yards to Swann for a touchdown and the 18-3 halftime lead.

Bradshaw hoked out up a 36-yard field goal by Roy Gerela in the third quarter with scrambling runs and a flip to pass to John Stallworth, Harris and Frenchy Fuqua wrapped the win it with fourth quarter touchdowns, both for 13 yards.

Mauch Expects to Guide A Contender in Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Veteran manager Gene Mauch has signed a three-year contract with Minnesota Twins and says he's confident the American League baseball team will be a contender in its division race to 1976.

"I promised myself four or five years ago, that if I ever took another job it would be with a club that had a chance to win," Mauch said at a Monday news conference. "It's pretty sweet to know you've got the best hitter (Rod Carew) in the world going to bat for you every day and potentially one of the best pitching staffs in the game."

The Twins went outside their own organization in signing Mauch, who has managed for 16 years in the National League with Philadelphia's Phillies, Montreal Expos.

"Baseball is baseball, but perhaps I'll notice some difference handling the pitchers," the 50-year-old Mauch said in reference to the designated-hitter rule in the American League. "We won't be able to manipulate around and make opposing managers take their pitchers out of the lineup."

Twins' president Calvin Griffith said there are very few managers in baseball who can match Mauch's experience and knowledge of the game.

"I had to concede that to get him I'd have to do something differently than I've done in the past," Griffith said. "I normally offers his managers one-year contracts. "I felt by giving him a three-year contract, he'd have more confidence in himself and our organization."

Mauch, who signed for an estimated $70,000 a year, is regarded as a disciplinarian by Griffith, who has gone outside his system only one other time. That was when he signed Bill Rigney to a two-year contract in 1969 after Billy Martin was fired.

Mauch is familiar to Minnesota fans. He played minor league baseball in the American Association at St. Paul in 1946 and at Minneapolis Millers from 1947 to 1950 seasons.

"Discipline is absolutely necessary and it will be in effect," said Mauch. "Intelligent people know that it's necessary, and many times they are able to capitalize on it so it's actually beneficial to them."

Mauch became the Twins' seventh manager since the franchise moved to Minnesota from Washington in 1961. Frank Quinn set was fired after 56 years as the Minnesota manager following the conclusion of the 1975 season.

Mauch managed at Philadelphia for nine years and spent seven more at Montreal. His highest finish was second place in 1964 when the Phillies collapsed down the stretch drive and finished one game behind St. Louis Cardinals.

300 on Hand To Greet Als

MONTREAL (CP) — More national Airport Monday night than 300 die-hard supporters to greet the Alouettes as th turned out at Dorval Inter-squad returned from Calgary following their defeat at the hands of Edmonton Eskimos in Sunday's Grey Cup game.

The crowd cheered the players who stopped to shake hands and chat with many of the people who turned out for the homecoming.

Two young fans appeared to startle a good-humored coach Marv Levy by asking him if he expected to return as Montreal coach next season.

"Yes," said Levy to their question. Then after reflecting a moment, he added: "At least I have two I am."

Levy was the subject of rumours during Grey Cup week to the effect he would leave the Alouettes to become head coach of either New Orleans Saints or New York Jets of the National Football League.

Hanson's Record Stands

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fritz Hanson's Grey Cup punt-return record still stands.

Hanson returned a punt 76 yards for a touchdown in 1935 to propel the Winnipeg Rugby Football Club to an 18-15 win over Hamilton Tigers and bring the Grey Cup to Western Canada for the first time.

The Canadian Press announced reported Sunday that Johnny Rodgers of Montreal got a Grey Cup record by returning a punt 36 yards in the Alouettes' 9-8 loss to Edmonton Eskimos Sunday.

PLAYERS HONORED

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Baltimore Orioles and Cincinnati Reds have placed four players each on The Sporting News' All-Star fielding teams. Winning Gold Gloves awards for the more on the American League team were second baseman Bobby Grich, third baseman Brooks Robinson, shortstop Mark Belanger and outfielder Paul Blair. Representing Cincinnati on the National League all-star team are second baseman Joe Morgan, shortstop Dave Concepcion, outfielder Cesar Geronimo and catcher Johnny Bench.

For Wednesday, Nov. 26, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You're somewhat of a loner today. It will take extra effort to perform at your usual level of productivity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Don't bet on anything today, sight unseen. The cards are stacked against a bet. Lady Luck is kindly to treat you capriciously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Avoid putting too much stock in promises made by others today. Undependability is a factor that has broken her word before.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Some information passed on to you today by a co-worker may not be completely valid. Check things out first-hand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — This is another of those days when your charm and easy talk is a real beating because of impulsive deeds. Be calm and well poised.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Don't take on anything you have serious doubts about today. Your intuition is trying to tell you something.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Keep faith with one who has placed her confidence in you. If she wanted others to know, she would have told them herself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Be careful what you lend to a friend today, she-is not likely to trust your possessions with the same respect you do.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — You're likely to do something today in opposition to your normal behavior. Knowing full well it's chances of success are slim.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Don't be embarrassed to ask questions today if you're involved in something you feel you should know, but still don't understand.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You're not likely to be as calm as you should be today in the way you handle things that belong to others. Try not to intrude.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Don't let others do your thinking for you. They aren't likely to have your best interests at heart. Be your own man or woman.

Experts Examine Crates

MONTREAL (CP) — Two art experts began Monday to examine about 50 crates marked "personal effects" which were shipped from Vietnam to a Vietnamese woman now living in suburban Mount Royal.

The examination, being conducted in Canada Customs warehouse, is expected to determine whether the crates contain personal effects or treasured and historical documents allegedly stolen from Vietnamese museums and archives.

The government of the Republic of South Vietnam claims they do and has filed a petition in Federal Court to recover the objects.

Mrs. Dao Ngoc Khanh, to whom the crates were addressed, has claimed through her lawyers that the cases contain only personal effects, including possibly some family heirlooms.

Rent Control Standards To Be Discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — The question of national standards for rent controls will be a top item at a federal-provincial housing conference today.

The impact of the governments anti-inflation program and recent housing proposals on residential construction also are expected to be discussed.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Monday he will press once again for swift approval of a national housing warranty plan to protect buyers of new houses against faulty construction.

If you perspire excessively, you may be deficient in salt, so you should probably add a bit of it to your regular diet, say Drs. Reed and Gobbing. Take a cool drink along about mid-afternoon; one with a bit of sugar in it.

A small air-conditioning unit can turn a sweltering room into a pleasant one on a hot afternoon and climates, should try to utilize. Mom oldsters such as yourself, living in an area with some of these modern conveniences, have one of your children visits, drop a heavy hint that you'd like one. Chances are they have one themselves. Congratulations on your observant good health.

Land Price Control May Be Dangerous

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's considering controls on land prices but a top house builder say this might have a disastrous impact on housing construction.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said Monday the Finance and Urban Affairs departments are looking at the issue and officials agree on the need to accept some control to prevent speculation in land prices.

But Bernard Denault, president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC), said:

"If land is controlled, we are frightened this may be a detrimental effect in not providing enough land for the housing target that the federal government came up with."

Mr. Danson was meeting with Mr. Denault, Henri de Puyjalon, president of the Canada Construction Association, and other builders to discuss the impact of the federal anti-inflation program on the construction industry.

After the anti-inflation program was announced in October, Mr. Danson announced new housing measures designed to help produce one million new housing units in the next four years.

Mr. Denault said that if land prices are controlled "we fear that developer bidding a lot of land might wait until the guidelines are finished before they bid for land on the market."

Mr. Danson said the land question would be discussed with the provinces at the federal-provincial housing conference today. The provinces were primarily responsible for getting sub-division and building permit approvals through earlier.

Short Trips Risky

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald B. Stebler, president of the Auto Safety Foundation Program, says most automobile accidents occur within 10 miles of the home and at speeds under 30 miles an hour. He also says that almost half of the 2.5 million miles of local roads and streets in the United States are deficient because of potholes, narrow lanes and broken pavement.

Can't Brew Coffee

TORONTO (CP) — Employees of Ontario Hydro moving into the publicly-owned utility's new headquarters in midtown Toronto have been told they must not brew their own coffee or tea. The building is privately owned and an exclusive concession for restaurants has been granted a catering firm.

Failure to Talk Emotional Based

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We have a three-year-old grandson (2 years, 9 months) who can't talk. He is our daughter's child. Her husband is very strict with the boy. Do you think cause of emotional problem? It is an unhappy marriage.

The father threatens the boy to make him eat. He gets up at 5:30 each morning. Otherwise, he is a very bright little fellow who seems to understand what everyone says to him. But he just grunts.—E. A.

You have reason for concern, no matter what the cause of his silence. A child this age should be using words to make helpful phrases, however brief.

An emotional problem could well cause his failure to talk, but so could a hearing disorder. From your description of the father and the home environment, I have to suspect an emotional factor. You and I know that sycophancies do tend to be times to color accounts of such things as the status of home environments. Hence, I would like to take your description at face value.

The father scolds the child and badgers him into eating at the table. He should be made to understand what food is for, doing to the boy. The inability to talk for unwillingness to should be investigated. If it is not corrected, it could lead to serious problems ahead.

I suggest that the boy be seen by a speech therapist to evaluate matters.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read a lot about the importance of early detection of arthritis. How can one know the early signs? I have a sister who is 42 and who has developed rheumatoid arthritis.—Mrs. V. D.

About three-fourths of arthritis victims have an onset before age 40 or 45 years. It is difficult to detect these early symptoms, because they may be minimal. They include stiffness, tingling sensations in fingers and toes, stiffness, weight loss. They may be present in any one or combination and degree.

Feet are often the first joints to present signs. The onset can be more severe, be abrupt, with fever and hot, painful joints.

The symptoms are usually symmetrical, that is occurring in the same joints on opposite limbs.

X-ray is of little use in diagnosing arthritis in early stages, but it can be helpful in diagnosis as the disease becomes a bit more established. Certain blood tests are helpful in confirming rheumatoid arthritis (not osteoarthritis). Examination of the fluid that typically accumulates in the swollen joints is another means. I will discuss this in a later detail in some future column.

It takes a skilled rheumatologist to identify arthritis, especially in the early stages. Early detection, when possible, is a boon, because there are ways to deal with it rather effectively.

But any sort of severe pain is arthritis. It can be muscle strain from overuse. So it's not a simple thing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a woman 81 years old, in good health, according to my check-ups. No anemia, no high blood pressure, no heart problems. But for so many years I can't remember I have been in a state of complete exhaustion during our long, hot summers. In cooler weather no problem. Lots of pep for my age and I keep busy. Would vitamins with iron help me?—Mrs. E. S.

It might, but perhaps not in your case, unless you change your diet dramatically for the worse because of the heat.

Some folks do not tolerate hot weather. But the area you live in is noted for hot humid

Consultant Says Bell Must Prove Its Needs

OTTAWA (CP) — Bell Canada should be denied a $113-million rate increase until the Canadian Radio-television and Telephone Commission is satisfied the company proves it needs the money, a U.S. communications consultant told the Canadian Transport commission Monday.

Arthur Hall of Baltimore, Md., told the commission he is not in a position to comment on the merits of Bell's request for a package of higher rates, but would call $113 million in company revenue next year "inflated" on a 6.8-per-cent increases in basic monthly residential and business subscriber rates and a variety of higher long distance tolls.

Mr. Hall said four weeks of evidence presented by top Bell officials was "extremely general" superficial and inadequate. He called for denial of the rate application until the company provides detailed information on how it arrived at the proposed new rate structure.

Oil Industry Asks For Top Consideration

OTTAWA (CP) — The chemical industry asked Monday that it be given "the highest priority" in obtaining oil and natural gas in the event of future shortages.

In a letter to federal and provincial governments as well as all members of Parliament, the Canadian Chemical Producers Association said it needs six per cent of oil and gas supplies as raw materials.

The association, representing 75 major chemical companies, added that if shortages occur, "we believe it is in Canada's best interest to assign the highest priority to the requirements for chemicals."

The government has said that the situation for natural gas is needed, highest priority will go to domestic heating followed by commercial and industrial customers.

But an association spokesman confirmed that they are seeking to get a first call on the oil and gas supplies, a priority above all others including heating.

Natural gas supplies are running low and the government has said allocation may become necessary by next winter.

Basque Terrorists Resume Assassination Campaign

MADRID (AP) — Basque terrorists have resumed their assassination campaign in Spain after a month's delay during Generalissimo Francisco Franco's last illness.

Two more arrests with cyanide-gas bombs Monday at the door of the mayor of the village of Cyrarsa, 12 miles from San Sebastian, the Basque capital. They opposed fires when the mayor, a 39-year-old civil servant named Alfredo Echevarria, opened the door. The killers escaped in a car, and the mayor died in a hospital.

Police said the gunmen were members of ETA, the underground movement fighting for independence for the three Basque provinces in northwest Spain. The getaway car was found abandoned in a nearby town, and the police closed the border between the Spanish and French Basque provinces.

It was the first political murder since Oct. 18, the day after the last five executions by firing squad, and the first in the reign of King Juan Carlos I, which is on Saturday.

Echevarria recently fired two village schoolboys who joined a protest against the executions on Sept. 27 of five young terrorists and two Basques. The executions set off a wave of protest at home and abroad against the Franco dictatorship. ETA announced it would kill Spanish targets in the Basque provinces unless they released.

ETA, the acronym for Basque Land and Liberty in the Basque tongue, launched an assassination campaign last March against the Franco police. The bloodshed preceded with a law making the death penalty mandatory for anyone convicted of killing or maiming security officers.

The executions on Sept. 27 were the first since promulgation of the anti-terrorism decree, and since then a total of eight persons have been killed, three in Madrid and five in the Basque country. The last was a member of the Civil Guard who was shot in the town of Zarauz on Oct. 18.

Political violence has resulted in the deaths of 27 policemen and 26 civilians since January, 1973.

In his inaugural address to Parliament, Juan Carlos pledged to act as "moderator, arbitrator and the supreme constitutional system and promoter of justice." But he also said he considers himself "the first soldier of the nation" and will be "loyally guard the principles that formed the national Movement." Spain's only legal political organization and the help to the Fascist Falange that helped Franco win the Civil War.

New York State Legislature May Approve Funds for City

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — After a week of political haggling, the New York state legislature appears ready to approve a $260-million New York City tax increase if Governor will impress President Ford and try loops federal aid for the city.

Democratic Gov. Hugh Carey secured what he called "a broad understanding" on the tax package Monday night, with largely symbolic concessions to minority-group legislators and Republicans who had been withholding their support from it.

Legislative staffs worked through the night drafting the specific legal language of the compromise deal. The bill is expected to be presented to party conferences today and, barring any last-minute hitch, the formal vote late this afternoon or tonight.

New Carey must try to convince the White House that the tax increase—and a companion bill requiring New York City employees to contribute to their pensions—are the kind of "tough steps towards fiscal responsibility" which Ford said he wants to see before reconsidering his opposition to federal aid to help the city avert default.

Meanwhile, in New York City, a crowd estimated by police at more than 8,000 to 10,000 persons rallied in support for the city in its fiscal crisis.

The thousands who attended the rally—which stood for more than two hours to hear the politicians' speeches and watch a combined performance by student orchestra in a rendition of his own composition, New York, New York, It's a Wonderful Town.

The tax package in the legislature is a crucial part of Carey's $4.8-billion plan to avert default by the end of the year. It is designed to impress Washington and secure about $2.3 billion in loan assistance or other federal aid.

If the New York Carey a full week to negotiate agreement on the tax bill.

First the lawmakers deadlocked, with Republicans leading on a one-cent increase in the city sales tax and Democrats favoring increases in income and commuter taxes. That was settled with agreement on a compromise package of increased levies on income, banks, automobile use, cigarettes, estates and various services.

The tax package includes an increase in bank taxes to raise $36 million; an increase to raise from $15 in the automobile use tax to raise $16 million; an increase of four cents a pack in the tax on low-tar and nicotine cigarettes to raise $12 million; imposition of a four-per-cent sales tax on such "personal services" as barber shops, massage parlors and sauna baths; a 40-per-cent surcharge on the estate tax to raise $35 million; a $75-million increase in the personal income tax, and a minimum personal and corporate income tax to raise $55 million.

In addition to impressing Washington, those taxes are intended to help close this year's admitted city budget gap of $784 million.

Fromme Case Before Jury

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — With her own lawyer conceding she is guilty of assault for pointing a gun at President Ford, jurors weighing the fate of Lynette Fromme must decide what she intended by that act.

Did she intend to kill the president, as federal prosecutors say, or simply grabbing a platform to express her views, as her defense lawyer contends?

The eight-woman, four-man jury enters its second day of deliberations today. They deliberated three hours Monday before retiring for the night.

Transair Ltd. Faces Losses This Year

WINNIPEG (CP) — Transair, Ltd., one of Canada's largest regional airlines, is taking a hard look at its operations in anticipation of its first loss in recent years, during 1975.

Hit by labor difficulties, soaring fuel prices, a reduction in regular traffic and the closing of several northern airstrips, the Winnipeg-based carrier is considering trimming scheduled service in free more aircraft for the lucrative charter business.

Transair reported a loss of more than $800,000 for the first nine months of 1973, compared with a profit of $256,000 in a similar period a year earlier.

The company's difficulties are shared by CP Air and Air Canada, but are a sharp contrast to prospects for two Quebec-based regional airlines, Quebecair and Nordair, which expect to earn profits, Mr. Mauro says both Quebec carriers enjoy a larger volume of charter flights.

The bulk of Transair's bulk of its regular service is to small communities in the North. Traffic in northern Manitoba has been adversely affected by a reduction in mining activity and by the federal ministry of transport's closing of several airstrips.

Mr. Mauro says the only long-term hope for regional airlines with the federal policy announced in 1966 but never put into effect—transferring shorter runs to regional carriers from the two national carriers.

Paper Strike Talks Break Off Again

MONTREAL (CP) — A proposed resumption of contract talks between the striking Canadian Paperworkers Union and the Ontario Paper Co. at Thorold, Ont., has fallen through, a union spokesman said Monday.

He said the company insisted on meeting jointly for contract negotiations with all nine unions boats at the mill, although only four are on strike. The non-striking unions refused to bargain jointly.

Two paperworker union locals representing 760 men, the Canadian Union of Operating Engineers' with 40 workers and the Association with 30 workers have been on strike at Thorold since Sept. 13.

About 25,000 paperworker members in Ontario Quebec and the Atlantic provinces went on strike this fall seeking a 32-an-hour wage increase to a base hourly rate of $4.83 and average hourly earnings of $5.70. About 60 per cent of Canada's newsprint production has been shut down.

Indian Council Considers Tactics

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Andrew Rickard of Grand Council Treaty Number Nine, a political organization which "represents the Indian communities in Northern Ontario, said Monday that native people are being forced to consider militant tactics to achieve economic and social independence.

Chief Rickard said he met provincial government representatives here Nov. 20 to discuss the educational needs of native people and told them the Ontario and federal governments often are insensitive and racist in their dealings with Canada's Indians.

In a news release Monday, Chief Rickard said an example of the attitude is a plan by two mining companies and a forest products firm for major developments near the Indian community of Osnaburgh, 259 miles north of Thunder Bay.

The residents of Osnaburgh fear these developments may deprive them of their livelihood of fishing, hunting and trapping, but neither the government nor the companies have consulted them about the plans, he said.

Minimum Wage Here Expected to Jump

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's minimum wage is expected to be raised in the near future, Dr. Bette Stephenson, labor minister, told the Toronto Board of Trade Monday.

Dr. Stephenson said the minimum standards constantly are under review. The government increased the minimum wage to $3.40 an hour in May.

The minister also told the meeting the work-stoppage picture in Ontario was much improved during the first nine months of 1974 compared with a year ago. There have been 260 strikes so far this year while in the same period last year there were 324 work stoppages.

Dr. Stephenson said her ministry wants to explore all aspects of the collective-bargaining process.

"It is my sincere hope that in the not too distant future, we will find both the means and the will to secure true labor-management-government co-operation toward a goal of satisfactory harmonious industrial climate."

Dr. Stephenson said the government will continue to attempt to eliminate risk in plants where asbestos and other dangerous materials are made or used.

Loan Approved

CALGARY (CP) — Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. has approved a $325,000 loan to the Society of Physically Handicapped Young Adults. The money will be used for construction of a group home in the city specifically designed for handicapped persons. The home is the first of its kind here.

Proposes Program to Protect Buyers from Faulty Construction

OTTAWA (CP) — Home-buyers were offered more hope Tuesday that they still get a national plan providing them against faulty construction and fly-by-night builders.

Urban Affairs Minister Ramon Danson said the long-delayed plan has enough provincial support to go ahead with details of a program that would apply in most provinces.

Some provinces already have their own home warranty programs or plan to set them up and [illegible]ply will wait until they see whether the federal program works before joining, he said.

The home warranty plan was the one area where Mr. Danson appeared to make headway in discussions with provincial housing ministers Tuesday.

The fifth federal-provincial housing conference this year wound up without assurance that there will be uniformity in rent control laws across Canada. The federal government has been seeking consistency in rent control rules.

But Mr. Danson indicated he is satisfied with the assurance that all provinces will implement rent control laws.

He said he will not seek further discussion of rent controls at later meetings with the provincial housing ministers.

Some items such as the proposed $1,000 federal grant to municipalities must be discussed further with the provinces, he said. The grant, for every new low-or moderate-cost housing unit approved by communities, was part of the new federal housing package announced Nov. 3.

The housing measures also would broaden the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP) and provide higher payments to help developers to build apartments at rents fixed with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC).

Some provincial ministers expressed doubts that the new program would help much in meeting the federal target of one million new housing units in the next four years.

Both Manitoba Urban Affairs Minister Saul Miller and Alberta Housing Minister William Yurko said they are concerned the initial assistance proposals may not be enough to significantly increase rental construction.

Mr. Yurko said that even with the new incentives, investors could get as good a rate of return on their investment elsewhere without the headaches of apartment ownership.

Mr. Miller said the new program seems to rely heavily on private investment. The federal government should introduce legislation giving it the power to compel private investors to put a certain portion of their funds into housing.

On the national home warranty program, Mr. Danson said most provinces now back the national plan. Alberta already has its own program operated by the building industry while British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec have indicated they will set up their own.

The national advisory council with federal, provincial, builder and consumer representatives will meet within the next two weeks to work on a draft national plan developed earlier this year, an aide to Mr. Danson said.

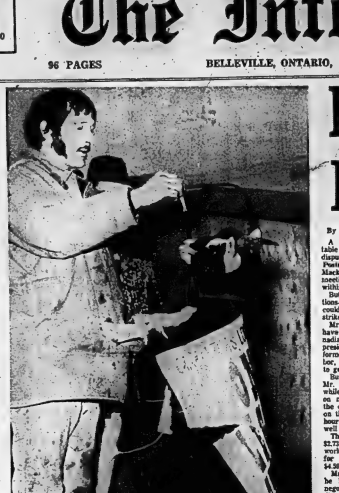
Winds Hamper Fire Fighting



Colen Wood

Fierce winds swirled flames across more than 68,500 acres of brushland in two separate fires near Los Angeles early today, threatening at least 100 homes and forcing evacuation of more than 600 people.

The Mount Baldy fire 35 miles east of downtown Los Angeles spread over about 10,000 acres in a few hours late Tuesday as 50 mile-an-hour winds off the deserts raked the slopes. Two ranger stations and four pensi[illegible] camps were abandoned as the blaze grew to 25,000 acres, making it the second-biggest brush fire in the U.S. this year.

Meanwhile, the biggest, a fire twice that size flared up again in spots in the Big Tujunga Canyon on the northeast edge of Los Angeles and forced residents to flee several houses. Fire has already destroyed at least 20 homes and damaged 30 others there.

Firemen on both fronts said the new flare-ups were contained, meaner fire lines were established, but the fires were not yet under control. The Santa Ana wind conditions—hot, strong and dry—subsided early today, aiding abatement efforts.

There were no new reports of injuries or property damage.

Weather forecasters said they expect a break in the wind conditions today, but fire fighters aren't sure what effect it will have.

"If the wind turns around on us, all the unprotected flanks we'd thought were safe will be in danger," said one Forest Service spokesman. "It could be a whole new ball game."

About 50 men and more than a dozen bull[illegible] held in county work camps were moved to jails and juvenile facilities as flames roared within several yards of their barbed-wire fences.

The Weather

Synopsis: It will be cloudy with a few snowflurries in southern Ontario today. More snow is expected overnight and Thursday. Highs both days will be near 0 C.

Postal Talks May Re-open Today

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A return to the bargaining table in the dragged-out postal dispute appears imminent after Postmaster-General Jean Marchand predicted Tuesday a meeting could come about within 24 hours.

But whether resumed negotiations—broken off about Nov. 6—could lead to a quick end to the strike remains in doubt.

Mr. Mackasey is reported to have met with Shirley Carr, Canadian Labor Congress vice-president, and Bernard Wilson, former deputy minister of labor, who have been attempting to get the two sides together.

But a post office source said Mr. Mackasey told them that, while he is willing to negotiate on minor outstanding issues in the dispute, he is standing firm on his wage offer of a $1.70-an-hour increase over 30 months as well as the 40-hour work week.

The union has been seeking a $2.75 increase and a shorter work week to 35 hours. Top rate for the postal workers now is $4.50.

Mr. Mackasey told reporters he held out little hope for a negotiated settlement and predicted that any talks would be of short duration.

He added that the strikers were falsely being led to believe by some union officials that a major breakthrough was about to occur.

Union officials had no comment on the statement other than to say the public would know when the talks resumed.

Joe Davidson, Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) president, said Tuesday night that he had not lowered his demands in any specific way "but we always said we are willing to be flexible."

"We don't want to say that we are going to lower the demand or that," he said. "We don't want to negotiate in the media."

Mr. Mackasey referred in the Commons to the possibility of legislation to force the postal union to hold a secret ballot on the government's wage offer. This, he said, was preferable to back-to-work legislation, which he described as reprehensible.

The government has never legislated its own employees back to work.

Meanwhile, the effects on businesses and the general public continued to grow and the government was pressed by opposition MPs again Tuesday to take steps to alleviate them.

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) asked if the government was planning steps to help charitable organizations who rely on postal service.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde said no special measures are planned.

In Montreal, people who have not received November's family allowances cheques because of the strike are reported short of food and fuel. Churches, welfare and social service agencies are being deluged with requests for food

Leaders Meet

Joe Davidson, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, and Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey (l) are side-by-side during Channel 19's On the Line show in Toronto — but they made it clear they're as far apart as ever. Mackasey challenged the union once more to take a vote on his pay offer, promising to ask for a cabinet transfer if the rank-and-file turn down the offer. (CP Photo)

Fromme Jury Deadlocked

SACREMENTO, Calif. (AP) — An apparently deadlocked jury in the Lynette (Squeaky) Fromme trial had the judge's approval today to consider the lesser charge of assault rather than attempted assassination of a president. U.S. District Judge Thomas MacBride told the jurors they could decide whether Miss Fromme merely committed assault rather than tried to kill President Ford during his visit here Sept. 5.

France Explodes Bomb

PARIS (AP) — A French nuclear device was exploded today at the underground testing area on the Mururoa atoll in the South Pacific, the defence ministry announced. The announcement said the results were fully satisfactory. The explosion is believed to be the first in a new series of French nuclear tests. Another device was set off at the atoll in June, marking the changeover in French from tests in the atmosphere to testing underground.

Won't Resume Talks

TORONTO (CP) — William Ross, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto school board, said Tuesday trustees are not prepared to resume negotiations with striking secondary school teachers until the Ontario education relations commission receives a teachers' complaint.

2 Belleville Youths Charged In Sunday Stabbing Death

THUNDER BAY —Two Belleville youths are in custody here charged with the Sunday morning stabbing death of a service station attendant.

Michael Paul Kavkbeck, 17, of Cloverleaf Drive, and Frederick Charles Rees, 19, who gave 88 Bertrand Boulevard as his home address appeared in court here Tuesday charged in the murder of Amadeo Plante, 46, at a service station at Pearl Lake, 25, miles northeast of Thunder Bay.

The pair, who were arrested Monday night by Thunder Bay OPP, were remanded in custody until a Dec. 3 court appearance.

According to police, Plante was working in the service station between 8 and 6 a.m. Sunday when he was stabbed. He was able to awaken his partner in the service station, Camille Dumont, before collapsing.

Plante was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital.

Police are still seeking a murder weapon.

Highway Signs to Be Changed Twice by 1977

TORONTO (CP) — Highway signs to be converted when Ontario soon switches to a lower speed limit will have to be changed again in 1977, a spokesman for the ministry of transportation and communications said Tuesday.

The government announced recently that it intends to lower speed limits to 80 miles an hour from 70 on provincial freeways and to 60 from 60 on other highways.

It will cost between $50,000 and $60,000 to convert the 8,000 highway signs to the lower limit.

In 1977, the signs will have to be converted again when Ontario is scheduled to switch to kilometres an hour for highway speed limits, the spokesman said.

The speed limit in kilometres is expected to be 100 an hour or 62 miles an hour. Fifty miles an hour will become 80 kilometres an hour under the metric system.

The spokesman said it will be charged with exceeding the lower limits until the signs are changed. Signs will be converted, even if an order-in-council lowering the limits is in effect.

Employers May Have to List Job Openings with CMC

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is studying the possibility of requiring employers to list job openings with Canada Manpower, Manpower Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

"It is a major step to take and it is one of the options that is being considered in the thorough review of manpower policy," Mr. Andras told the Commons manpower committee, which is studying proposed amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Such a move would "make the job of Canada Manpower much easier."

He said later in an interview that the government has not made a final decision on the issue. Currently it is not mandatory to list job openings with the government-run national employment service.

A manpower department spokesman said Canada Manpower "does not get listings for anywhere near the number of available jobs" because many employers hire through classified advertisements in newspapers or use private employment agencies.

Mr. Andras made the comment after Ursula Appollonia (L—York South) said sometimes there is little point to referring unemployed to Canada Manpower centres "because very often the cupboard is bare; the employers do not register jobs."

The manpower minister said his department also is examining ways to relate Canada Manpower services more closely to the unemployment insurance program.

Quinte Exhibition Now Multi-million Business

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The Quinte Exhibition and Raceway is now an annual multi-million dollar operation.

In the past year it handled and out — totalling $3,329,987, auditor Kerry Scott told exhibition sponsor — Belleville Agricultural Society — Tuesday night.

When its cash profit and grants to be received were totalled, the exhibition ended the year with a $14,523 surplus after tax deductions.

Horse races were the major attraction and — expense.

Racing receipts were $1,238,844 compared with $882,841 in 1974. Disbursements for racing were $1,186,695, compared with $987,911.

Fair admissions were down — $22,350, from $20,968 in 1974 when a spring and fall fair were held.

Fair prizes cost $20,135, up from $15,913.

The society spent more than $40,000 on grounds, buildings and equipment.

Amnesty Gesture May Set 1,000 Prisoners Free

MADRID (AP) — King Juan Carlos is beginning his reign with a liberal gesture of a general amnesty that government sources say may free about 1,000 political prisoners and shorten the terms of about 700 others.

In a move predicted several weeks ago, more than 13,000 common criminals also are expected to be released or to get shorter sentences.

The amnesty will not apply to about 220 persons held on charges of terrorist activity, the sources said. Most of these are urban anarchists or members of ETA, the Basque guerrilla organization fighting for the independence of the three Basque provinces in northwest Spain.

A source close to Juan Carlos said the decision was that the amnesty would be one of the 77-year-old prince's first acts after Francisco Franco died and he became king. Angry reaction was expected from the Civil Guard, the paramilitary national police, and the dictatorship's right-wing supporters. But the source said Juan Carlos believes the threat from the right is less than the threat from the left.

Since those charged with terrorism are excluded from the clemency, it is not likely to have a deterrent effect on future terrorism. ETA assassinated a village mayor on Monday, saying that he was a police informer, and a spokesman for the organization in Paris said there will be more terrorism "because the Spanish state has not changed."

Future of County Ski Slope in Doubt

PICTON — Prince Edward County skiers may be dreaming of a while Christmas but unless they show strong interest in the slopes at Macaulay Mountain the tow may not be running there this winter.
The Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority (PERCA) owner of the Macaulay Mountain ski site, has displayed interest in keeping the slopes open following a decision by the Picton Lions Ski Club to shut down operations there.
If the equipment originally purchased by the ski club for the slopes is not available it would be necessary for PERCA to buy or rent new equipment.
Resources manager for PERCA, Tom Prout, this week said it is difficult to decide if the purchase of any new equipment is warranted. A deciding factor might be the number of persons interested in using the slopes this winter.
He said PERCA is making every effort to keep the ski hills open.

Students To Build Dome

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward school trustees this week approved student construction of a geodyic dome at Wellington Consolidated School.
Board business administrator Ernest Short said Tuesday trustees will not approve heating for the dome, however. Only lights and lighting will be provided.
The dome will be constructed by students who plan to pay for it from their own funds. There will be no cost to the board of education for erection of the structure.

Candidates Take Issue With Native Income Tax

TYENDINAGA — The first salvo has been fired in the upcoming election for this Mohawk reserve's council.

One of the reserve's two political parties has charged that the present council did not include Mohawks about changes in government policy affecting Indians. It also is protesting sections of the Indian Act and Income Tax legislation.

A statement has been circulated through the reserve by the People's Party, commonly known as the Long Hairs. Claiming to represent preservation of Indian traditions, they are opposed to the Progressives — or Short Hairs — led by Chief William Brant.

The statement — signed by Willard Hill campaigning for the chieftainship and four party members seeking to join the remaining council seats — comes with copies of a 1973 government interpretation bulletin on income tax involving Indians.

The bulletin points out: That income earned off a reserve — including bank interest — is not exempt from taxation; that there is no exemption for a corporation even if its shareholds are Indians and its physical assets are on a reserve.

The candidates claim this violates Indian treaties and rights. A proclamation of 1850 — among other agreements — states Indians are not subject to fines or levies they say.

The group takes issue with Indain Act sections which authorize local councils to pass bylaws — enforceable with penalties — and bylaws for land taxation, business and trade licences.

The policy statements at issue are federal circulars identified as DI-Ds.

These include, say the candidates, statements that solicit suggestions for improving procedure but state the policies outlined remain "mandatory."

This means regulations are "non-negotiable," say the candidates.

The circulars also state that a district council be incorporated under appropriate federal, provincial or territorial legislation, they say.

"It is our contention — that the present council should have informed you of these policies many months ago. Why haven't they?" say the candidates.

They add that they oppose provincialization of the reserve and taxes "of any form."

Toys Sought

PICTON — The Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society is seeking donations of clothing, toys, games and money to contribute to Christmas celebrations in a number of families here this year.

All contributions are required promptly and interested donors can contact the local CAS by calling 476-2700 or 476-2025.

Swerved to Miss Deer

HALLOWELL — A Picton area man was treated for minor injuries in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital early today following a single-car collision on Hallowell Township Road about a half-mile west of County Rd. 18.

Injured was Edgar Norman Black, 44, of RR 1 Picton driver of a car owned by Donald McKinnon, also of RR 1 Picton.

A spokesman for the Picton OPP said the car was westbound about 3 a.m. when the driver swerved to miss a deer, entered the ditch, came back to the road and struck a tree.

Damage to the vehicle is estimated at $2,500.

Woman Escapes Injury

PICTON — A Picton woman escaped injury early this morning in a single-car accident on County Rd. 1 about 1¼ miles west of Hillsway St.

Police say Linda Wight, 23, of 112 Bridge St., eastbound on County Rd. 1 about 4:10 a.m. when an unidentified westbound car approached her in the traffic lane. She attempted to miss the vehicle, struck a fence and entered the ditch.

Damage to the Wight car is estimated at $350 in the collision.

Three Trails Added

BATAWA — A major development program at the Batawa, ski club has added three new trails including a professionally designed run, Long John, that doubles the length of the previously longest slope, a club spokesman said.

The new run has been graded to allow use by — novice and intermediate skiers and will be almost 1,000 feet wide in some parts. The trail will have underground lighting for night skiing.

Two additional trails have been added to the opposite side of the hill and will be maintained by the club, a non-profit, volunteer group which provides winter recreation facilities for the Quinte area. All trails have been hand raked, seeded and covered with a layer of straw to allow a smooth base. They may be used with even a thin snow base.

Reduced season rates are available at the ski lodge to area residents until Nov. 30 when normal season and daily rates will apply.

Holiday Lights

The cheerfulness of the holiday season is beginning to permeate the air and talk about gift purchases is starting to be heard in conversations throughout Trenton. Holiday lighting displays, like these on light poles, are being sighted throughout the town as residents prepare for the good times ahead.

District at a Glance

Walk-a-thon Nets $327.

MARMORA — An official receipt for $327.00 from the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Bible Society has been received by Marion Barrons.

This amount represents the proceeds of a walk-a-thon carried out by the young people's group of Marmora Free Methodist Church Oct. 5.

The young people, said Mrs. Barrons, hope to make this an annual event.

Gas Bar Opens

MARMORA — Marmora's first self-serve gas bar opened here recently at the Beckers Milk Store on Forsyth St.

The gas supplier is Texaco Oil Com The Marmora operation is the first in the Becker chain of 500 grocery stores to be equipped with the self-serve gas pumps. Manager Eleanor Wells predicts that some of the other stores will follow with installations of their own if the Marmora operation is successful.

Art on View

TRENTON — An art show featuring the work of Gordon Reache of Halifax and Jackie Algee of Ottawa will be held Dec. 14 from 1 p.m. until 9 at the CFB Trenton in the Yacht Club. The show is now on tour in Toronto.

Cubs Request Donations

TRENTON — The Fourth Trenton Wolf Cubs of St. Peters will be holding a bake and flea/magpie sale in December to help raise funds for a christmas party. Donations of items or home made baking will be appreciated.

There is also an urgent need for leaders and helpers to work with the cubs. For further information please phone cubmaster N. Webster at 392-2963.

Pet of the Week

This five-month-old tri-colored female kitten is only one of many that are available for adoption at the Belleville Humane Society. The society is located north on Avonlough Rd.

Suspect Held In Death

WARKWORTH — Campbellford detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police are investigating the stabbing death of an 81-year-old pensioner whose body was discovered early Tuesday morning.

Howard Edward Campbell was discovered dead in his apartment at 7 Main Street.

An autopsy, performed in Peterborough later in the day, indicates Mr. Campbell died as a result of a knife wound to his right chest, police said.

Police have not released the name of a man held for questioning in connection with the incident.

The name of the deceased was withheld for more than 18 hours until notification of next of kin and to allow Toronto members of the criminal investigations branch of the OPP to conduct the inquiry.

Savings and Retirement Plans Offer Way Around Income-Tax System

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs
Analyst
Thomson News Service

Want to beat the income-tax system?

That's a game that more and more Canadians are playing, as the possibilities for fancy footwork under the Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan and the Registered Retirement Savings Plan become more widely known.

The winners in the game are the family that shaves a few hundred dollars off the tax bill, the tax professionals who point the way through the ,labyrinth, and the trust companies that have the franchise to hold and invest other people's money—and get paid for doing so.

The losers? The federal treasury—but its deficit is so huge that it's virtually out of control anyway. Other taxpayers, who carry a bigger load because they don't know about the loopholes. And, perhaps, the family that genuinely needs to buy a house but sees prices snarling out of reach as more buyers are lured into the market.

The actual engineers who devised such plans as RHOSP no doubt had the best of intentions—to help people save for their first house.

But now that the tax professionals have shown what can be done by sophisticated taxpayers with RHOSP and similar programs, the bureaucrats come out looking a little naive.

In a nutshell, RHOSP allows you to invest up to $1,000 of your annual income—which would otherwise be taxed at your highest rate—with trustee each year until the total reaches $10,000, on condition that you don't already own a house.

Ultimately, you are supposed to use that money to buy a house or furniture, although there are ways around that rule).

There's nothing to prevent a husband from accumulating $10,000 tax-free to "buy" the family home from his wife, if she holds title to it.

Then she can start her own 10-year plan of tax-saving to buy it back eventually.

Then there are the schemes to get around the danger of a taxable capital gain on the family cottage.

Since a gain on the sale of a taxpayer's "principal residence" is not taxable, the trick is to register the real principal residence in the name of the spouse and the cottage in the name of the other.

There seems to be plenty of room under paragraph 42 of Interpretation Bulletin IT-30 of Sept. 14, 1971, for such spouse to "qualify" a different residence, says Toronto chartered accountant Donald J. Beach in his Tax Guide For The Real Estate Investor (recently published by Methuen Co. under sponsorship of the Canadian Real Estate Association).

Even if the cottage were occasionally rented out, it could still be treated by the tax people as the usual principal residence of, say, the wife.

Her is there any problem if a property is at present owned jointly by husband and wife. Mr. Beach says it is a simple matter for one spouse to sell his interest to the other.

The transfer need not be registered formally, although it would be prudent to do so—it that would require the services of a lawyer.

Mr. Beach offers some additional tips on personal tax planning:

—Arrange your borrowing to take advantage of the rule that interest is deductible if the borrowed funds went to earn income. If possible, don't use it for your house, car and anything for personal consumption, but borrow thy mortgage on your house, for example, for business and investment purposes.

—Make full use of the $1,000 exemption for Canadian interest and dividend income and pension income.

—If you have children who will be going to university at your expense, consider setting up an education trust. They, not you or their parents, will be taxed on the income from it.

—Stay clear of plans using off-shore tax havens such as Bermuda and the Bahamas unless you intend to live in the jurisdiction concerned.

In Mr. Beach's view, the best investment that most families can make is a principal residence—or preferably two.

Such properties offer a long-term hedge against inflation, and the capital gain on their sale is not subject to income tax.

If property ownership is too bothersome, you can still reap tax advantages through registered pension plans, group profit-sharing plans and retirement savings plans.

In essence, says Mr. Beach, deferred tax plans are interest-free loans from the government—and that beats paying tax.

Exhibition's Future

The problems of the Quinte Exhibition as outlined by general manager E. C. Gowsell should evoke a sympathetic response.

Problems ranging from the squeeze on housing space in Belleville to the initiatives of other groups operating independently of the big fair.

Clearly the Exhibition is facing the prospect of changes, possibly as to location as well as format. Yet it is to be hoped that the basic character of an agricultural presentation plus various commercial enterprises will remain. At the same time one wonders if the Exhibition could not attract, not only exhibits such as those to be seen at the CNE in Toronto but perhaps some big name stars, music groups or whatever as well.

Picture Anne Murray say, of Tommy Hunter and his fine supporting cast (they presented several of their shows in Belleville a few years ago, and some of them were back independently more recently). The Exhibition here could take on new life with backing such as that.

There's the possibility of the Fair moving out of Belleville, to make way for housing here, and this is another consideration. It's just possible its days within the confines of the city are numbered. There will always be a place for it, but events are moving swiftly in overall city development, so that the question of location is a prime consideration.

Whichever the course of events, the Quinte Exhibition is worthy of our continuing support. Let's ensure that citizens get behind the event and help maintain it as a prime attraction in the Quinte calendar.

Bus Revenues

"We're going to have to do some sort of campaign to increase passenger use, especially at night."

That's the view of Belleville transit commission chairman Marylea Burt after contemplation of an additional $30,000 in costs beyond the commission's projected 1975 deficit of $185,000.

It's a perennial problem and one which has been exercising the commission for some time. Lowering the fares, according to manager Lewis McMullin is not the answer, for while it did attract more passengers when tried three years ago it also resulted in a sharp drop in revenue.

Short of gimmicks like providing a coffee machine (imagine pouring a cup as the bus is moving into, or pulling out from, the curb), or hiring a uniformed hostess who would ride a different route each day (there would be a lot of enough money for more than one), it's difficult to determine what more can be done.

And one last thought, what about the Rail-a-Bus service that was initiated in Kingston for example? Any chance of it working here? As it is, what is there to entice people to ride the buses at night?

Entertainment Scene

Belleville has had an interesting blend of contemporary entertainment in recent weeks, from the country western stylings of Hank Snow to blues singer John Lee Hooker and white soul exponent Mark Lucas.

Also in town was a group called, somewhat enigmatically, The Morning Show. They appeared at the Sun Valley and we have a letter from Mrs. Ethel Smith noting they are a Canadian group which many enjoyed while in the city of Isle.

Mrs. Smith emphasizes the need to encourage the growing commitment to Canadian content in entertainment and when we have a group as talented as this it is all the easier to do so.

The Morning Show provided a link with Canada's country history in its number entitled "The Half Breed," in which a young woman vocalist appeared in Indian costume. It won her a bouquet of roses from an appreciative audience which had been singing along with the group and tapping feet to the beat of the Indian rhythms. To short Belleville audiences enjoyed this group and it will not be surprising if we hear more of them.

POSTAL UNION NEGOTIATOR

Critical Eye on Ontario Spending

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — It will be interesting to see what happens to this report by the provincial spending review committee—becoming known as the Henderson committee.

The committee has a couple of hundred recommendations.

And as can be expected from anything with former federal auditor Maxwell Henderson touches, most of them are pithy and don't particularly spare feelings.

Some of the prime recommendations, for example, was that there should be a considerable cut in the number of government employees.

Immediately the Civil Service Association began to cry.

Then there was a proposal that a deterrent fee should be imposed for medical and hospital treatment.

This is an old proposition that has never found favor here, though it has demonstrated it would result in substantial savings to health costs.

And it hasn't been given any ready acceptance this time.

The Globe and Mail, of all sources, came out promptly against it.

It took the traditional line of saying that the only people who would really be hit by it were those in the lower-income categories, and that these were the last people that should be hit.

This ignores the fact that lower income groups receive either free or subsidized health care and that it would be inconceivable if this didn't continue.

But the likelihood of the government publicly recognizing this and publicly adopting this recommendation is remote.

For it knows there would be some howl.

And the government doesn't like howls. Particularly today when it is trying to win back popularity.

Teenager Shares Big Win With a Fellow Worker

Cambridge Reporter

Pull up the ladder Jack, I'm alright.

As a TV newscaster is fond of saying, that's not news, but it is really.

In today's materialistic society, the Biblical admonishion to love thy neighbor as thyself can be difficult for others as you would be done by have often been forgotten in the scramble to get the most tangible rewards of life, and get them first.

Thus the news recently that a young North Bay schoolgirl had decided to give half her $20,000 Wintario draw winnings to a friend was more than a heartwarming story. It was a reaffirmation of these noble, but difficult-to-follow precepts, and a demonstration that some people still believe life's greatest rewards can be found in what you give, not receive.

Christine Barnes, 16, decided to give the $50,000 to a friend she had met while working part-time in a fish and chip shop. Bob Turgeon worked there as one of the three jobs he'd taken to support his child and pregnant wife.

In other draws, Bob and Christine had shared the prize of draws tickets but this time Bob couldn't afford to buy a chance.

When she heard of her good fortune, Christine decided to give her friend half the winnings anyway.

Union Executive's View

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Upon reading the comments of "an observer" in today's editorial page, I felt I must reply.

My principles and those of my brothers and sisters cannot be bought with money.

The C.U.P.W. is the union belonging to the postal workers. I pay dues for it is in my own interest. I fought for the right to have this union formed — and will again if I must to protect it.

If I were to quit and run away from my employer rather than face him, I would indeed be the cowardice and lack of convictions shown by "an observer" and the "scabs" who crossed our picket lines.

The dues paid to our Union are $8.00 per month for fulltime workers and $6.00 per month for part-time workers. Of these amounts $3.00 and $2.00 respectively, are returned to the Local. Our entire annual national C.U.P.W. does would hardly pay the the executive of some of the larger corporations and certainly not the pensions the Members of Parliament gave themselves plus salary increases.

The Union does not do the thinking for me or my brothers and sisters, and decisions will not be done by someone who hides behind a pseudonym like that of "an observer".

Mandate for By-law?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I have watched with great interest the furor which has been created by the proposed use of the "Minimum Building Standards By Law."

I have listened to some vociferous voices which have thundered their opinions and have read such captions as "The Public Speaks Out."

I do not really want to get into the town and area of this thing but do feel that all who have spoken out have failed to totally involve the public they are trying to protect. They are speaking as specific individuals or for recognized groups and about the lonely ordinary citizen there has been little heard? Then can we really believe the public has spoken?

I fully realize that this bylaw could be a form of catalyst to disrupt the peaceful way of life in the Friendly City of Belleville and I would suggest our city fathers use some of their time and bring this bylaw before the people in the form of a mandate.

ALEX MANJURIS

In 1812 a P.M. Was Slain

Letter in The Montreal Gazette

Excerpts: "The cure of instability" asserted that no prime minister of Canada or England has been assassinated.

Long forgotten, but prime minister for three years during the Napoleonic wars, Spencer Perceval was assassinated by "at the door of the House of Commons in the lobby" by one Bellingham who declared he had slain him "to revenge the Lord Leverich Gower, with whom he had a grievance" (Encyclopedia Britannica). The same error occurred in a recent Toronto edition of the New York Times.

I remember reading that Spencer Wood, former vice-regal residence and for many years the home of Quebec lieutenant-governors, was named after the ill-fated prime minister. Spencer Wood was, of course, briefly Canada's first capital before destroyed by fire several years ago.

Invitation to Maverick PC Axed by Party Executive

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Who runs Conservative riding associations, the constituency executive or the party's national headquarters?

Less than three months before a new Conservative leader takes over and reorganizes the party's national office, putting in his own team, the question of who controls what continues causing friction.

This friction can be isolated as antagonism between the appointed bureaucrats of the headquarters office here — little more than a branch plant of the Tories' Establishment — and the Conservative caucus, the politicians who won election as Members of Parliament.

The Toronto Tory organization which publicly ridicules a large segment of the Conservative parliamentary caucus as "neo-fascists" is fresh off calling the party's shots since it conspired to help destroy former Prime Minister Diefenbaker as leader and has since had successive elections under Robert Stanfield.

Its front-men in the party's national headquarters here in the Capital like to exercise their bureaucratic muscle by pushing around executives in the riding associations.

They did it in Moncton. They have just finished doing it in Ottawa West. And they could do it in your constituency, ordering you how to run your own riding association.

Case in point is Ottawa West.

At an October riding executive meeting, there was an all but unanimous vote to invite Leonard Jones, independent MP, of Moncton, to speak at the constituency association's annual meeting.

Some flak was expected from party headquarters, but the decision was firm.

Leonard Jones won the official Conservative nomination in Moncton in the last election and then was stripped of it by Mr. Stanfield who objected to his views on bilingualism.

Regardless of his past views, Mr. Jones has emphasized that he does not oppose bilingualism but only what he terms the government's "unfair and rough-handed application" of the language program.

Disowned by the party leader, Leonard Jones went on to win re-election as an "independent," and since has made frequent overtures to the Conservative caucus in Parliament but has been rebuffed.

His reputation by the party cost the Conservatives not only the Moncton seat, but was blamed for the loss of Saint John-Lancaster by veteran Tory MP Tom Bell who had held it through seven general elections.

The "Jones Affair" also cost the Conservatives votes in other Maritime and especially Ontario seats — and it was the Ontario losses that did the party the heaviest election damage.

So here were the Ottawa West Conservatives, more than a year after the election, asking Mr. Jones to be their keynote speaker.

They felt, they said, that he would be "a good contentious speaker." They saw a big crowd.

Mr. Jones, a Conservative at heart, was pleased to be of help and said he would be happy to accept the invitation.

Then word of it got to the Tory National Headquarters office.

The Jones invitation, decided Headquarters, was still a no-no. And so there began a terrible of arms of the Ottawa West executive.

After some "agonizing reconsideration," the executive discovered that, lo and behold, the invitation to Mr. Jones never really had been formally extended.

Some cautious soul, apparently expecting the flak that flew in hot and heavy from party Headquarters, had been a little slow with it — mail strike, and all that, you know.

So with some embarrassment, the executive called another meeting and invited — by phone — a bombshell to the Jones decision, Elmer MacKay, the investigative Conservative MP from Central Nova.

But there is really only one big riding population left in the riding population all but exclusively public servants, and that's bilingualism.

Ottawa West is a pendulum riding, swinging alternately Liberal and Conservative in the last six elections.

Leonard Jones would have been ideal — but party headquarters, bossed by the Toronto Tory establishment, knew better than the local riding Conservatives' views on the scene of political action.

In Cuba for 3½ Years, Canuel Convicted of Aircraft Theft

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

A 53-year-old former Trenton resident, who flew a 1941-model Cessna Skyhawk 172 airplane from the Belleville to Cuba in September, 1971, says Cuban authorities told him during his three-year stay there that he would never be allowed to return to Canada.

Hervé Joseph Canuel, now of Malone, Que., was found guilty by a 13-member jury in Hastings County Court here Tuesday of a charge of theft over $50 in connection with the disappearance of the aircraft, owned by Dorthee (Des) La Riviere of Cement Rd. RR 2, Brighton, then of Glen Ross on the Trent River.

Judge Russell C. Hooey sentenced Canuel to two years' probation and ordered him to pay restitution to the amount of $8,500 — the acknowledged value of the airplane in 1971. The airplane, believed to be in Cuba, has never been recovered.

Canuel related his experiences in the Communist country during his testimony on the second day of the two-day trial.

Under cross-examination by his lawyer, Robert Temple of Belleville, Canuel testified he aborted a planned minimum three-day flight to Matane, Que. on Sept. 2, 1971 after staying overnight near Montreal.

One day earlier, he had taken off from Stirling Airport with the purpose of visiting relatives in Matane and picking up seafood for sale to Trenton restaurant owners, he said.

He claimed he had permission from La Riviere to fly the aircraft anywhere but this was denied in earlier testimony by the owner.

Canuel said that on the morning of Sept. 2, he checked with Darrell Airport, and discovered dense fog lay along his flight path to Matane.

He flew to Ogdensburg, N.Y. where he cleared customs and continued on to Fulton, N.Y. at which point he decided to fly to Fort Lauderdale, Fl. to visit an uncle, he said. He felt "stupid" at the time he made this decision, he added.

He eventually landed at an airfield near Miami, Fla. after stops at Jersey City, N.J., Norfolk, Va., Conway, N.C. and St. Mary's, Ga., he said.

Canuel testified he decided to proceed to Key West in the Florida Keys to see a long-time friend, rather than visit his uncle immediately, but while circling the Key West airport, he had a sudden impulse to fly the extra 90 miles to Cuba.

He explained he thought he would be kicked out of the Latin American country because he had no passport.

The following is Canuel's account of his Cuban stay gleaned from his testimony, until his arrival at Toronto International Airport on April 19 this year where he was held by the RCMP detachment at the airport until his arrest on April 21 by Ontario Provincial Police from Belleville.

As he approached Havana Airport, he observed jets circling the field, so being without radio communication, he diverted to a nearby emergency landing field, touching down at 2 p.m. on Sept. 2.

e "One guy came up and thought I was a Russian. I spoke to him in English and French . . . and he called guards and they kept me under pistol-point."

Canuel's welcoming committee did not believe his account of his flight and purpose, assumed he was a U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agent and thoroughly searched the airplane.

"They were worried because I got through the Cuban radar without being detected."

After being taken into a local jail and interviewed by an immigration man, Canuel was transported to Havana where he was placed in a cell which had no windows and no provisions such as toilet facilities and at times was not allowed to sleep.

For six weeks, he was questioned seven times by Soviet intelligence agents he identified by the code name of G-2 who threatened him with torture.

At the end of the sixth week, Canuel was taken to a large residence in Havana which housed American aircraft hijackers. He lived there for eight months.

While sitting on the patio of the house one day, he observed the Cessna flying overhead — a fact which surprised him due to previous Cuban assurance that the airplane would be returned to Canada.

He contacted a Cuban government official who told him the aircraft now belonged to the department of the Interior.

Canuel was forbidden to go near the flying engineer, an act which he was told could result in years of forced labor. They told me I would not be permitted to return to Canada."

They did not allow him to work and "they tried to bring you up on the Communist side and teach you military discipline."

At one point during this time, Canuel contacted a CIA agent and was taken to a hotel for an interview. However, it was later discovered the room was bugged.

This led to three months' incarceration for Canuel in the National Hotel in Havana, followed by an unexplained three-week forced stay in a hospital room.

From his hospital release on Jan. 11, 1973 until April 10 when he departed, he was situated from one facility of accommodation to another.

Although he was told return to Canada was forbidden, "I was told I could go into any socialist country of my own choosing."

With this in mind, Canuel read an advertisement in an Egyptian publication for an air traffic controller's position in Cairo. Because he had similar work experience during 25 years with the air arm of the Canadian Armed Forces, he went to the Egyptian embassy to apply.

Because he had no passports — a requirement for moving to Egypt — he was given permission by Cuban authorities for one visit to the Canadian embassy to arrange for his passports to be shipped to Cuba.

During this time in October, 1974, a Canadian trade mission, accompanied by newsmen, was on a Cuban visit and Canuel asked the Canadian embassy to arrange an interview with reporters.

Instead, embassy officials directed him to Andre Bellaven, Cuban correspondent for the Montreal French-language newspaper, La Presse.

Canuel went to meet Bellaven at the Hotel Capri in the reporter's room at 4 p.m. but Bellaven said he was busy and asked Canuel to return at 9 p.m.

When he returned, he was told by hotel management Bellaven had been sent on assignment to Venezuela. But the next morning, a telephone call from Bellaven revealed the reporter had been moved by the Cubans to the National Hotel without explanation.

Finally, on March 26 this year, Canuel and Bellaven met in a secret location and the reporter left for Canada on March 30 with the story.

On the morning of April 8, the Cubans told Canuel to pack, took him to a residence and left him in a dark room for three days.

And at 8 a.m. on April 9, he was taken to Havana Airport and placed in another room from 8.05-8.30 a.m. Cuban authorities explained Canuel was to fly to Kingston, Jamaica and transfer to a flight for Nassau, Bahamas where he would meet Cuban agents for further instructions.

However, it was reiterated that he would not return to Canada.

Canuel feared that if he went the route, he would end up murdered by the Cubans in the Bahamas. So with $180 provided by Cuban officials, he went to Kingston where he would attempt to escape.

At 10.30 a.m. on April 10, knowing he was being followed, Canuel decided to take a two-hour sightseeing tour of Kingston by taxi. When he noticed a car tailing him, he ordered his driver to lose his shadow and when the manoeuvre worked, he went straight to the Canadian embassy.

Embassy officials said they would put him on a jet for Toronto and ordered him to stay in the embassy until departure for his own safety.

Although he had been told both Belleville provincial police and RCMP at Toronto International Airport had been notified of his future arrival, when he disembarked, there were no officers at the airplane ramp, in immigration or in customs hppreciated him.

Canuel had difficulty convincing an RCMP officer that he was a wanted man and desired to be taken into custody.

He was concerned about the initial lack of police protection due to a suspicion that a Cuban agent might have caught him at the airport.

Crown attorney Glenn Dellos, in his summation to the jury, emphasized that the jurors should not consider the Cuban venture when considering a verdict.

He said Canuel's story "doesn't go to the heart of the charge" and added "this man converted that plane to his own use."

Talks Might Prompt Return of Aircraft

Belleville lawyer Robert Temple, who represented Hervé Joseph Canuel, 53, of Malone, Que., this week during his county court trial for theft of an aircraft which eventually landed in Cuba, says diplomatic negotiation might result in the return of the airplane.

Canuel testified Tuesday he was told several weeks after landing in Cuba on Sept. 3, 1971 that the Cessna Skyhawk, owned by Dorthee (Des) La Riviere of RR 3, Brighton, now belonged to the Cuban department of the interior.

Mr. Temple told Judge Russell C. Hooey he wrote to Dr. Julio Garcia, Cuban ambassador to Canada, recently about the aircraft and that Dr. Garcia advised the matter be taken up with the legal advisory division of the Canadian external affairs department.

Recovery is a "delicate matter," said Mr. Temple, but he's said he feels there is hope for success due to "extensive commercial negotiations now going on between Canada and Cuba."

About the trial, Mr. Temple commented, "I don't think we in Hastings County will ever again hear of such a case as this."

Yeast Breads— Something Special

Homemade yeast breads, whether sweet or savory, add a special touch to any meal. Whether it's refrigerator rolls or the old paid popular Sally Lunn, yeast breads show that fan this meal, the cook has made an extra effort.

Refrigerator Rolls

2 tsp. sugar
3 cups warm water
2 envelopes active dry yeast
¼ cup soft shortening
¼ cup sugar
2 tsp. salt
6 to 7 cups all purpose (bread) flour.
1 egg
Salad oil

In large warm mixing bowl, dissolve the 2 teaspoons sugar in the warm water. Sprinkle yeast on top. Let stand 10 minutes. Beat well. Add shortening, sugar, salt and half the flour. Beat for 2 minutes. Add egg and beat again. Mix in enough of the remaining flour with a spoon to or by hand so dough is not sticky and is easy to handle. Place dough in greased large bowl. Brush top with salad oil. Cover with waxed paper and a towel. Place in refrigerator. If necessary, punch down dough when it rises. It will keep at least five days in the refrigerator. To use, cut off amount of dough required then return remainder to refrigerator. Shape cut off dough while still cold into these rolls.

Crescents

Roll two-thirds of refrigerator dough into a round of 12 inches diameter and ¼ inch thickness. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with cinnamon. Cut into 16 pie-shaped wedges. Beginning at wide edge of each wedge, roll up then place on greased cookie sheet with the points underneath. Shape each into a crescent. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with your favorite seeds. (See below). Cover and let rise in warm place until double in bulk. Bake in a hot 400 degree oven 10 to 12 minutes.

Pan Rolls

Break off pieces of dough the size of golf balls. Roll in the palms of the hands to shape evenly. Place in rows ½ inch apart in eight-inch square, greased pan. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with your favorite seed. Cover rolls and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk. Bake in hot 400 degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes.

SEEDS

Any home baked buns become especially tempting when sprinkled with crunchy aromatic seeds. There are six such seeds that can be used — poppy, sesame, caraway celery, anise and dill seeds. To find out which you prefer, experiment with them on one or two buns before baking the whole batch.

Poppy seeds are the minute, blue-gray kidney shaped seeds that are so small they seem round in shape. It takes 900,000 of them to make one pound.

Sesame or Benne Seeds are tiny, shiny, creamy white and have a rich almond-like flavor. To increase this flavor least then beefily in a moderate oven.

Caraway Seeds are often sprinkled on rye bread. They are small crescent shaped, dark seeds with a pleasant if somewhat sharp flavor.

Celery Seeds are most suitable for rolls that are to be served with casseroles and salads. They are very small with an aroma similar to celery.

Crescent rolls with added touch.

Anise Seeds are green-gray in color and have a licorice-like flavor.

Dill Seeds are flat, oval and light brown in color with a mildly aromatic flavor.

The dough in these refrigerator rolls is a practical one because it will keep five days or longer in the refrigerator.

Salty Lunas

one cup milk
one pkg dry yeast
½ cup butter
one-third cup sugar
three eggs
four cups sifted flour
one tsp salt

Heat milk until a film forms. Skim. Cool until lukewarm, then sprinkle in the yeast to dissolve. Work butter in until soft, add sugar gradually, continue working until creamy. Beat eggs well and stir flour and salt together. Beat in flour and milk mix alternately. Cover dough with tea towel and set in a warm place until it doubles in size. Beat hard and pour into a greased York's Head mould or 10-inch tube pan. Let rise until double, bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until nicely browned on top.

Almond Coffee Ring

¼ cup lukewarm water
two tsp sugar
two pkg dry yeast
one cup flour
1¼ cups milk
½ cup butter
three eggs
two-thirds cup sugar
½ tsp crushed cardamom
two tbsp grated orange rind six cups flour
three tbsp butter, melted one cup chopped blanched almonds
one egg
one tbsp cold water
two tbsp sugar
½ cup slivered almonds

Dissolve yeast in warm water with sugar. Stir in one cup flour and allow to stand 20 minutes until spongy. Scald milk and add butter. Cool to lukewarm. Beat eggs well and add sugar. Continue beating and add milk mixture, cardamom and orange rind. Add about three cups of flour and yeast mix. Beat hard until smooth.

Add enough remaining flour to make a soft dough and turn out onto floured surface and knead until smooth. Put in greased bowl and let rise two hours. Turn out and knead again, let dough rest 15 minutes.

Divide dough and roll one half into a 12 x 9 oblong. Brush with half of melted butter and sprinkle with half of chopped almonds. Roll up as for cinnamon rolls from wide side. Form roll into a ring and pinch ends together. Make cuts two-thirds of the way through at one inch intervals. Turn each of these cuts on its side. Repeat with second piece of dough. Let rise until double or about 45 minutes.

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Beat egg and cold water together and crush tops of cakes. Sprinkle one tbsp sugar and two tbsp slivered almonds over each cake.

Bake 35 minutes until well-browned.

Cheese Kachva

one pkg dry yeast
½ tsp salt
two tbsp sugar
¼ cup lukewarm milk
½ tsp vanilla
¼ tsp grated lemon rind
one egg
1¼ cups flour
two tbsp butter

Prepare yeast by dissolving it in ¼ cup warm water with sugar. Add salt, milk, vanilla, and lemon rind. Beat in egg. Add enough flour to make a medium soft dough. Work in soft butter. Knead in bowl or on table for 10 minutes, adding more flour.

When dough is shiny and elastic, let rise 30 minutes until double. Pat dough, on a greased cookie sheet, into a nine-inch circle. Place cheese filling on top. Sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar and bake at 350 for 45 minutes.

Cheese filling: two tbsp yellow raisins, one tbsp brandy, ¼ cup cottage cheese, ¼ cup cream cheese, ¼ cup sugar, one tbsp flour, one egg yolk, one tsp melted butter, one tbsp sour cream, 1½ tsp grated lemon rind, ½ tsp vanilla. Mix raisins with cognac. Cream together cheese, sugar and flour. Stir in egg yolk, then melted butter, sour cream, lemon rind and vanilla. Add brandy-soaked raisins.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ervine

Ervine — Chatterson

St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church, Trenton, was the scene of the recent wedding of Peggy Lee Chatterson, and Robert William Ervine.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Chatterson, the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Ervine, Trenton.

Rev. Malcolm Burke officiated at the afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length chantilly lace gown with high neckline, long tapered sleeves and moulded bodice accented by a rib. The wrist and neckline also featured frills. Her headpiece of chantilly lace and silk illusion caught her four-tiered veil. She carried orange roses and baby's breath.

Elaine O'Hara, the bride's sister, was matron of honor in a mint green jersey dress with green velvet jacket. She carried yellow and white carnations with baby's breath.

Carolyn Turner, Brenda DeVries and Brenda Noonan were bridesmaids assisted by junior bridesmaid, Kathy Noonan. Flower girls were Karen Noonan, the bride's niece, and Karen McGrath, cousin of the groom.

Ushers Jerry DeVries, Michael Noonan, Rick Chatterson assisted the best man who was Allen O'Hara, the groom's brother. Paul Ervine, was a junior usher.

A dinner and dance was held at Treston Lezion.

After a wedding trip to points east, the couple took up residence at Rt 1, Chatterton Valley, Foxboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Spearman

Spearman — Johnston

Dr. James Spearman, uncle of the groom, officiated at the October 18 wedding of Pearl Ellen Johnston and Ronald James Spearman in Westminster United Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Johnston and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Spearman.

The groom's sister-in-law Marlene Spearman was soloist for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of glass matisse styled with a high neckline, a softly-shaped bodice with pearl beading, and bishop sleeves trimmed with matisse lace the same as the neckline. A floral headpiece held the finger-tip embroidered veil and the bridal bouquet was silk ashery roses, baby's breath and fern.

Maid of honor Linda Johnston, sister of the bride, wore a sleeveless gown of olive jersey with a square neckline, a bodice raised with a satin ribbon and slightly gathered skirt. A short jacket of matching velvet had long sleeves and a mandarin collar. She carried gold and bronze straw flowers, wheat, imperielle, baby's breath and star flowers.

Helen Elliott and Karen Herder of Wooler were brides-maids in gowns identical to the maid of honor but in a spice cognac shade, and carried similar round bouquets.

Marie and Heather Waite were flower girls in long-sleeved gold velvet gowns similar to the bridesmaids'. They carried wicker baskets of dried flowers like the bridesmaids' nosegays, and wore strawflowers in their hair.

Douglas Spearman of Ottawa, the groom's brother, was his best man. Ushers were Stephen Elliott and Peter Hall.

A dinner in the lower auditorium of Westminster Church followed the service. After a trip to Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Spearman have made their home at 27 King George Square.

People and Events

Marmora Chapter IODE is starting a drive this week to collect discarded eye glasses for shipment to the Christian Medical Society in the Caribbean.

An appeal for hundreds of eye glasses has been issued by Dr. J. K. Warnica, an eye specialist at Sarnia, who has been active on the island each summer in Haiti and Dominican Republic, aiding the natives with eye problems.

Children's eye glasses, especially, are needed and it is not necessary for any of them to be in perfect condition.

Last August Dr. Warnica, five nurses, opticians, lab technicians and an anesthetist all gave up their holidays to take part in the project and all he is their own travelling expenses.

If any Marmora area residents has a pair or several pairs of discarded eye glasses that they would like to donate, they may be left at the Marmora Insurance Agency or will be picked up by calling 472-3723.

Pam and Heart Throb Spread Safety Message

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pam Stringer is a pleasant and well-spoken 13-year-old who, for all appearances, is like thousands of other youngsters in Canada.

But the company she keeps—in particular one gentleman who goes by the name of Heart Throb—makes you wonder.

Heart Throb is everything that Pam isn't. He talks too much, is insulting at times and has a reputation for being a bit of a dummy.

Make that a lot of a dummy because Heart Throb has only wood between his ears. After listening to his endless chatter you get the impression you would have liked him better if his name was Douglas Fir and he still lived in the forest.

However, it's all part of an entertaining act in which Pam, who lives in Victoria, proves that she is an accomplished ventriloquist.

Her peers think she is good enough to deserve the rank of professional.

Vivacious and self-assured, Pam spends her spare time doing the rounds of schools, churches, nightclubs, television stations and conventions, wisecracking with Heart Throb.

She was in Vancouver recently for the Canadian Safety Council Conference.

"Pam says she is one of the youngest ventriloquists in Canada, although she adds that there is one her junior in Toronto.

She started ventriloquism because hand puppets "were no fun."

Her Grade 4 teacher wanted the class to make puppets and then stage an end-of-the-year show.

"I wasn't really interested so I asked the teacher if I could put on a different kind of show," she said.

So Pam got her hands on a book on ventriloquism and began practising in front of a mirror.

"In about a month or so I had it down pretty well," she said.

She then got a job and went through her act for the class. The class loved it.

After that, Pam decided to take up ventriloquism seriously. Her routines are purchased from a ventriloquism school in Denver, Colo.

One of her most worthwhile activities is a snappy 10-minute routine to teach youngsters bicycle safety. She has performed it about 25 times in schools and on television.

"When I leave school I'm going to make my career in television," she said without a hint of doubt in her voice. "I want to be an actress as well as a ventriloquist."

As for Heart Throb—thiazs could have been worse. He could have ended up as a utility grade two-by-four.

Need Attitude Change

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — The community must reassess its attitude toward the single parent, Diana Leadt, a past president of the area chapter of Parents Without Partners, said. A separated, divorced or widowed parent faced discrimination and problems everywhere, Financial credit was difficult to obtain and there were problems of finding decent accommodation.

Pam Stringer of Victoria, B.C., is a ventriloquist who works with a partner who talks too much and is insulting at times. Jimmy Heart Throb is part of an entertaining act that Pam, 13, performs in schools, churches, night clubs, television and convenient.

'Hyperactivity' Describes Many Conditions

HALIFAX (CP) — An expert on childhood learning disabilities tells parents to be wary when physicians diagnose their children as hyperactive.

Ed Welsh, professional development director for the Quebec Association for Children with Learning Disabilities in Montreal, was speaking at a recent conference in Halifax.

He said physicians sometimes will declare a child hyperactive based on misbehavior or unruliness in the waiting room. A battery of tests and data on the child's medical, social and emotional history is needed.

The problem with hyperactivity is that it has no precise definition applicable to all children, he said. What one parent or doctor might regard as hyperactivity might be interpreted by others as over-active, exuberant or masculine behavior.

More than 25 descriptions of the condition exist and the term says little about a child's abilities cause and remedies.

A study of 100 children considered hyperactive by a group of physicians in 1972 resulted in agreement that only 13 of the children were indeed hyperactive. 38 were not and the rest could not be diagnosed with certainty.

Hyperactive children are commonly believed to be easily distracted, recklessly impulsive short-tempered and over-active and to have short attention spans.

The causes are uncertain and different professional disciplines assess them differently.

Psychiatrists have said hyperactivity results from emotional turmoil within the family. Biochemists and nutritionists have declared it may be due to nutritional deficiencies or food additives which set off allergic reactions affecting the brain.

Genetics, hormones and exposure to toxins such as lead have also been blamed. Neurologists have blamed faults in the nervous system or a lack of blood to the brain.

Lack of discipline, boredom and unresourceful teachers have also been singled out as the cause.

Treatment included administration of amphetamines or other drugs to calm the child, vitamin therapy, diet alterations, behavior modification techniques and perceptual motor training.

Even if hyperactivity is alleviated, Mr. Polak said, there might be repercussions such as low self-esteem during adolescence which would be worse than the original disability.

Famous Women's Hockey Team Never Admitted to Hall of Fame

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Although they were never named to Canada's Hockey Hall of Fame, Preston Rivulettes, a team which played on a dirt rink developed into the most famous women's hockey team in the country.

For 10 years the team established a record unparalleled in the history of Canadian sport.

The team won the Lady Bessborough Trophy, emblematic of Canadian women's hockey supremacy, six times. The trophy has since been withdrawn with only the Rivulettes' name inscribed on it.

They won the Ontario title and the Bobby Rosenfeld Trophy every year from 1930 to 1940 and the Eastern Canadian crown and in Ernest Savard's search of the 10 times they competed for it.

In those 10 years they suffered only two losses and won over 250 games.

Millions of words have been written in glowing accounts of their "raw courage" in meeting massive challenges while competing in a sport that had been and still is dominated by men.

The Second World War forced cancellation of a scheduled European tour for the team. Gasoline rationing prevented the eventual meeting and accounted for the breakup of the smart, heady and talented squad.

Some people have questioned why neither the Rivulettes nor their captain, Hilda Ransome, who was nominated for Canadian Athlete of the Year in 1929, have never been admitted to the Hall of Fame.

Only individual performances are recognized, said M. H. (Letty) Reid, curator of the hall in Toronto. There has never been a woman nominated.

"I doubt whether any woman would get serious consideration right now. It's all relative. If women are competing at the international level, then perhaps we'll see an achievelograde performance."

Ann Landers

Reader Has Varied Taste

Dear Ann Landers: I work at Saturdays for a friend of my father's. He is known around here as a very liberal, family man, has a great wife and four good kids.

It seems that whenever I walk into this man's office he is reading pornographic books or magazines. When he sees me coming he tries to ditch the porn under worksheets or other office material, but it's obvious what he's up to.

In every other way he is super cat A-OK. I have become so upset about this that it has me confused about lots of other things. I am 17. This man is 42. Will you help me sort out my thoughts? — Sharkeville

Dear Shark: Some people eat octopus, chocolate-covered bees, and eels. Tastes vary in literature as well as in food.

What this man enjoys reading has nothing whatever to do with you. If he's hung up on porn that's HIS problem. I see no reason to make it yours.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is suing me for divorce. He grounds are cruel and inhuman treatment. He says I am always picking on him.

What do you think of a man who refuses to change his undershirts for weeks at a time, won't brush his teeth, will not make any decisions on his own and then criticizes me because I made the wrong one?

He runs to his mother and tells her everything that happens in our house, then she comes back to me and I have to discuss with her a lot of things that are none of her business. My husband cheats when we play gin rummy, hides candy and cigarets all over the place, hasn't given me a compliment in years and seldom has anything of interest to say. He doesn't lift a finger around the house to help, yet complains if the place isn't spic and span. I've always had to do everything myself. And now HE is divorcing me. Please help me understand. It. — Baffled in Rahcrafted

Dear Baff: Never mind trying to understand it. Just be glad you're out of it. Your marriage sounds like a nightmare. You should be happy to be free of that oddball. Count your blessings, Sweetie.

Dear Ann Landers: I was invited to an engagement party in June. I gave the bride a $60 coffee maker. She broke the engagement six months later. The engagement gift was not returned.

The girl is now engaged again — to a different guy. I have been invited to the engagement party. Will I be expected to give another present? What do you think? — Twice Tapped

Dear Twice: The bride-to-be should have returned all the gifts when the engagement was broken. You need not bring another.

Incidentally, a $40 coffee maker is more like a wedding present than a shower gift. Unless you are in the wedding party, I'd say you went overboard.

CONFIDENTIAL to Did You Say It: Yes I did, and I will gladly say it again. "Alcoholism, which often masquerades as social drinking, has ruined more marriages, careers, healthy bodies and fine minds than any single element known to man."

Board Approves Use of Calculators

MADOC — Hastings County Board of Education has approved a task force report on calculator use in schools to allow senior secondary school students to use them in examinations.

The recommendations, handed down to the board in early November, proposed a moderate and low-key approach to the use of electronic calculators in schools.

For Grades 11 to 13 the board will allow use of calculators on a day-to-day basis, as well as on examinations. Each secondary school will be responsible to ensure that each student has a calculator at his or her disposal.

The report recommended reserved use of the calculators in Grades 9 and 10. It suggested that programs could be established at the discretion of the teacher. However, the board did stress that basic mathematic computations must also be learned in conjunction with expertise on the calculators.

The board banned use of calculators in elementary grades except when they are used for enrichment or motivational purposes. The task force discovered that many students, unmotivated by conventional teaching methods, be encouraged by the use of calculators.

Society Wants Fair Kept at Present Site

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Writer

Belleville Agricultural Society (BAS) voted unanimously Tuesday that Quinte Exhibition remain at its present site.

The move came after Dr. Bob Burns, BAS 2nd vice-president, warned it could cost more than $5 million to relocate present fairground facilities.

His resolution — approved by BAS members — follows anxiety that the 155-year-old exhibition might be uprooted out of Belleville by increasing pressure of urbanization.

The future of the exhibition has been discussed informally with city council twice this year. But new impetus was given the issue earlier this month when Mayor Ben Corke re-elevated an old proposal when an alderman at one of the sessions: That the exhibition and car-raceway be moved out of the city to increased serviced land available for urban needs.

Lyle Vanclief, BAS president, said he'd had an impromptu talk with Mayor Corke since, and both sides are interested in getting "down to brass tacks . . . and finding out where we stand."

The resolution says the present site is "most ideal" for both city and district residents and the BAS.

Dr. Burns felt because of the society's history of cooperating with city hall, council had "a moral obligation" to the BAS.

When American Optical Co. sought a plant site in the city the BAS exchanged its old grounds for the present site.

In 1954, to make it easier for groups — like Lions Club, Jaycees and curling club — to build and move into Exhibition Park, the society transferred the land to the city in return for a 99-year lease (it runs out in 2053).

The original arrangement called for the city to balance rentals with grants — $150 a day for the annual exhibition; 15 per cent of gate receipts for other events.

But "somehow this has been forgotten and we now receive no grant . . ." said Dr. Burns.

He said the "past four boards would roll over in their graves if they knew what had happened to the agreements they made in good faith."

The BAS must rid itself of "insecurity" about its future in recent years, Dr. Burns said, confidence to develop and expand.

Senior government funding is available for improvements, but first there must be a reliable tenure on the site.

"We could live happily at our present site," said Dr. Burns. "Now I think that to keep our fair viable in the future . . . at all costs we should think of expanding our facilities and land."

"The city spends a lot of money acquiring land for other parks. Why not some for an exhibition park?"

Recreation also was a significant consideration. But the BAS, with its fair, horse races and snowmobile tournaments, is involved in recreation — at no cost to the taxpayer.

"The number of people dollars brought into our city by these events, indicate the city owes this board a lot more respect," he said.

He wondered, in a time when money is tight, where the funding would originate to relocate the Exhibition Grounds' facilities — estimated to cost between $5-$6 million.

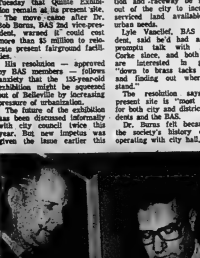
Belleville, as the centre of a farming area, needs an exhibition, he said.

He predicted it wouldn't be "an easy struggle" to get the BAS message across.

Mr. Vanclief said there was need to inform council and the public at large about the significance of the exhibition.

He said the exhibition grounds also provides a buffer zone between industrial and residential areas.

"The next few months are going to be very interesting," he predicted.



Police Examine Waste Reflectors

Waste material is being recycled for safety in northern New York state communities — and Belleville police now are pondering how to obtain a supply.

The material — rubbery and elasticized — is highly reflective and can be easily used for pedestrians and cyclists.

It caught the attention of city police at a recent Toronto meeting of the Ontario Traffic Conference's safety officers committee.

Also introduced is Inspector Ralph Blatchford and safety officer Sergeant Bob Hall were newly-designed bicycle reflectors which are more readily discernable than present standard equipment, say the officers.

The waste material — either reflector knows exactly its original industrial use — was displayed at the meeting by police representatives from New York state.

Police departments in the northern end of the state have been procuring supplies free and converting them into arm bands.

This means pedestrians or cyclists slip them over their arms whenever they consider it necessary.

Police in Hamburg, N.Y., made and distributed 5,000 such bands, says Insp. Blatchford.

He now is enquiring where and how Belleville police can obtain a supply. One problem envisioned by having it shipped in from the U.S. is a 30 per cent import tariff.

The waste-style bicycle reflectors have been endorsed by the Canadian Standards Association.

With newly designed prisms, they throw off more light than reflectors now in common use, says Insp. Blatchford.

He now is to collect more information on the devices and will investigate ways and means of introducing them to the cyclists at a minimal cost.

Reflections on Safety

Sergeant Bob Hall (left) and Inspector Ralph Blatchford of city police, are pondering new ideas for pedestrian-bicyclist safety brought from Toronto convention. They include newly-designed reflectors which throw off more light, than standard products now used, they say.

Holiday Season Prime Time For Shoplifters Say Police

Did you ever think that brightly wrapped gift under the family Christmas tree may have been stolen?

While most of us are considering Christmas shopping some persons are making plans for Christmas stealing.

That gift may have been stolen from the store down the street, from the backseat of a shopper's car, or perhaps it was purchased with money picked from an unwary woman's open purse.

At least two Belleville stores invest in special forms of shoplifting protection year-round. Other merchants are being warned to be on their guard and shoppers are advised to be on their toes in the next weeks to avoid being taken advantage of.

"Shoplifting will be on the increase . . . " said Constable Brian Turner, community services, Belleville OPP.

He said there are so few staff members trying to keep an eye on so many Christmas shoppers it is inevitable more items will be stolen.

Belleville police Chief Douglas Crosbie said as a result of increased incidence of shoplifting over the past seven or eight years more stores are prosecuting those apprehended.

Statistics for this year indicate about as many shoplifters reported to city police as last year. About 85 shoplifting cases were reported to police by Sept. 30 this year compared with 95 for the same period during 1974.

Towers Department Stores Ltd., on Dundas St. W., turned to staff detective investigators to combat shoplifting losses. An investigator, who preferred not to have her name published refused to disclose how many investigators the store employs.

As many as 15 shoplifters are apprehended in a week. Those over 16 are prosecuted, said the investigator.

Shoplifting is more prevalent before Christmas and just like shoplifting seasons they are stealing seasons: "People come in the winter months not necessarily to buy them."

After working as an investigator for a number of years she said she becomes instinctive about customers:

"The average housewife who boosts (steals) a few things is given away by her eyes."

Asked why people shoplift she said: "It's the same old story as with any thief. They think they'll get away with it. If nothing else, we hope we are a deterrent."

As Canadian Tire Associate Store, 348 Cannifton St., they've invested in electronic surveillance equipment. Three antennas hanging from the ceiling in each building up to five cameras scan the store at all times.

Watching customers on a monitor in his office manager Max Cohen said he spotted a shoplifter the second day the system was installed about two years ago.

Basically it's a deterrent. It is expensive but so are losses. I think it has an effect" he said.

The store also prosecutes shoplifters: "Over 95 he knows what he's doing," said Mr. Cohen.

Hospital Window Smashed

Two male youths believed to be between the ages of 15-16 years fled Tuesday after hurling a five-pound rock through the window of the Belleville General Hospital boiler room, slightly injuring the engineer on duty.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today that the rock missed Albert Wilkins by about one foot but his right arm was cut by flying glass.

Chief Crosbie said damage was estimated at $15 in the 4:30 p.m. incident. The youths escaped before anyone could note their descriptions, he added.

Carpets Missing

Belleville police are investigating the theft of two carpets from apartment under construction on Tracy Park Dr. sometime during the weekend.

Chief Douglas Crosbie said today the theft, which reached a by $200 loss, was not reported until Tuesday. The owner is Tracy Park Residential Construction Ltd. at 11 Victoria Ave.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Tuesday, Nov. 25, 12:56 p.m. — welder's spark set fire in flammable plastic which sprayed fibreglass insulation at new Fabricon building east on Dundas St. Damage estimate unknown at present.

Tuesday, Nov. 25, 2:41 p.m. — pot left on stove at 84 Village Dr., nothing used, no fire.

Tuesday, Nov. 25, 9:30 p.m. — false alarm from incinerator set off overhead sprinkler head in basement of Belleville General Hospital.

Adult Education Classes Successful at Bayside

While no two people are alike—adult students attending Bayside Secondary School have at least one common denominator in their single-minded attitude towards succeeding.

Ross Allan, head of counselling services at the school, spends highly of the 23 mature or adult students attending Bayside and comments: "The school is very flexible to meet the adult student's needs."

As the education act now stands any resident of a school board area may attend a local school and generally fees are waived, said Mr. Allan.

Generally there are two categories of adults who register in the school system he said. These are the people who for reasons of job promotion have a single goal of achieving a particular grade or the other group which just wants to improve.

He guessed 15 to 20 adults attend classes; each year at Bayside Secondary.

The broad terms, "adults have a very high success rate when they return to school, said Mr. Allan. "Failures are practically non existent."

Betting On Rise

There were more bettors — and more bets paid — at the Quinte Raceway during the past year, audit statistics indicate.

In the past year the amount wagered by the public on the horse racing was $807,900. Some $784,460 were returned to bettors.

Last year the same amounts totalled almost $532,904 and $564,090.

Thieves Foiled

Thieves were unsuccessful in an attempt to break into Holy Rosary Elementary School on East College St. sometime between 5 p.m. on Monday and 8 a.m. on Tuesday.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today someone attempted to take a screen off a window on the west side of the building and also pried two screens off the southwest door.

However, entry was not gained and damage is estimated at $25, he said.

Tape Deck Taken

Damage was estimated at $250 to a car owned by Stephen Raymond of 132 Foster Ave. when someone slashed the convertible top to unlock the car and steal a tape deck a t Centennial Secondary School on Palmer Rd. sometime between 5:15 — 6:45 p.m. on Tuesday.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said the tape deck is valued at $29.95.

Overseas Parcel Post Deadline Past

Uncle George in England won't get his annual Christmas fruit cake from Belleville natives this year.

It takes about a month for a parcel from this city, now in its 37th day of a strike by post office inside workers, to reach Great Britain by surface mail.

And the deadline for posting Uncle George's favorite gift from Belleville was Monday.

George Burchell, assistant postmaster, said today other deadlines for domestic and overseas mail delivery prior to Christmas are now approaching.

Air mail to Europe must be posted by Dec. 15 to arrive before Christmas. Domestic mail — inside Canada and the United States — must be posted two days earlier.

But mail will not get through unless there is resumption of inter-city mail deliveries to domestic and overseas distribution points.

The assistant postmaster said the post office is now handling the odd Christmas card, and if it comes, he does not expect a big rush of cards until about Dec. 12.

At that time, "we'll likely handle it no matter what happens," said Mr. Burchell.

Now, five members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers in Belleville are back at work, having crossed picket lines earlier this month.

Walter Yateman, president of the CUPW local in Belleville, said today that if inside workers went back immediately, all Christmas mail, except overseas parcel post, would likely be processed and delivered on time.

"I don't feel good about it (missing one deadline)," said Mr. Yateman. "But there isn't anything we can do about it."

Still Learning

Dennis Steidel talks over Grade 13 history problems with teacher Peter VanHuizen at Bayside Secondary School. The school has 23 adult students enrolled in high school courses. A school spokesman said because of adults single-minded attitude toward achieving their goal, adult students have a very high success rate.

Dennis Steidel (left) and Cpl. Steidel find grade nine to join the armed forces but returned to the classroom when posted in Goose Bay, Labr. two years later.

Now stationed at Trenton, Cpl. Steidel is continuing his studies in Grade 13 and having military transfer "all will go well and I should finish this coming year."

He said his chances of gaining employment as an air traffic controller in civilian life will be difficult if he stays in the forces until his retirement at age 41.

"Society demands that people have an education and I'm just looking to the future," he said.

Married with two children, Cpl. Steidel says improving his education helps to "keep up with the kids."

So far in school he has averaged 80 to 85 per cent. "Though my marks may drop a little with the grade 13 subjects," he said.

"I had no incentive when I was younger and I was just filling in time by attending school," he said.

B.C. Community Defends Prison Without Walls

CLEARWATER, B.C. (CP) — There is no visible dividing line between the outside population and prisoners in the minimum-security forest camp near this interior community, 250 miles northeast of Vancouver.

While some British Columbia communities have been organizing to keep prisons away, the people here organized to keep theirs right where it is.

And they have succeeded.

The provincial government recently announced that a planned closure of the camp will not be carried out. The residents had prepared two briefs, held three public meetings and submitted a petition to oppose the closure.

"I felt all along that the Clearwater Forestry Camp best reflects the government philosophy on corrections," said Rev. Gary Dickson, chairman of a residents' committee that fought the closure.

"It is close to the camp would be like shooting the prize filly in the stable."

Other residents agreed and Neil Clark, assistant director of regional corrections in Kamloops, said their reaction to the announced closure was fantastic.

"The camp has 100-per-cent community acceptance and that has to be one of the goals of corrections—to have the community involvement that was shown up in Clearwater," he said.

The camp is a forest-blending green-on-green huddle of huts and cabins 15 miles from the community itself. Guns are unknown, even when there are bears around. A man running away might trip on a gopher hole, be run over by a range rider or be five-bombed from desperation by monster mosquitoes. But nobody would shoot at him.

The common cause of camp and community praised Aug. July 30 when a notice was nailed on a bulletin board that the camp would be closed Oct. 31. No reasons or details were given and the notice was unsigned.

A brief to the attorney-general's office, the local MLA and the Cariboo Development Commission said that while only 16 residents are directly employed by the camp, this adds up to a family total of 70 and $250,000 in wages to the community's far-from-healthy economy.

They said the camp is successfully serving a need in human terms and should not be arbitrarily abandoned.

"These guys are doing all right here, so why move them?" asked Mr. Dickson, the village's United Church minister. "If you take your pick from all over B.C., I would say that Clearwater camp is one of the most ideal from the rehabilitative aspect."

Dora Mann, wife of one of the prison guards, said the community did not want the camp when the crews arrived in 1957 to help develop facilities at the former provincial park.

"When his camp went in, there were people literally going to stand in the road with a shotgun and they weren't going to let that camp in," Mrs. Mann said.

"People were up in arms—they were terrified."

But since then, the community has learned what the prisoners do and the list includes fighting forest fires and clean-up of the sports arena and after heavy snowfalls.

At the camp, where about 22 men stay at one time, a prisoner can learn a new skill, graduation from a log-scaling course, and a handful of help from fighting forest fires.

A prisoner named Hughie is leaving with these assets and he contrasted the experience with what he saw earlier in the Haileigh Jail near Kamloops:

"Up here you learn the basics in lumber—which is B.C.'s largest industry, after all—and Haileigh you have acrez and acres of nothing and a bunch of little pigs.

"You dig a privies and you feed pigs, that's your rehabilitation.

"You have a little bit of pride, you don't want to walk out and get into trouble. They just might as well leave you in a cell and let your time just slide by."

Turkey Closes Famous French Connection

ANKARA (Reuter) — Government officials here say Turkey has finally sealed 1id end of the "French Connection," the infamous drug route from the Anatolian poppy fields to the heroin addicts of the United States.

American narcotics agents are less exuberant but are prepared to admit in cautious optimism that there has been no leakage of raw opium from Turkey's latest poppy crop, its first since the lifting of a three-year-old cultivation ban.

The testing time, one agent said, would be from now to next spring and narcotics agents in Western Europe and the United States would be making a concerted effort to discover whether the connection had reopened.

Previously, raw opium was shipped through Istanbul to Marseilles, where back-street laboratories processed it into heroin for export, largely to the U.S. and West Germany.

This year, however, Turkey introduced strict cultivation controls and a new harvesting technique intended to end the centuries-old production of raw opium.

Before the Americas-inspired cultivation ban came into effect in 1972, Anatolian peasants had planted the walnut-sized poppy pods of their opium gum content by slitting the outer skin during a special two-week period after the petals fell.

They were then free to collect and sell the gum—either legally to the government, which has a monopoly on opium, or illegally to organized syndicates of drug-pushers.

The syndicates paid the higher price.

The incision method, difficult for police, now has been outlawed and once the two-week period for gum collection is over, the only way to extract the small morphine content from the dried pod is by a sophisticated chemical process.

Turkish officials, supported by the evidence of United Nations fact-finding teams that have visited the seven provinces where poppy growing is authorized, said there had been no evidence of incision.

"Turkey is no longer an opium producer," one declared proudly.

This was in sharp contrast in the days when American officials claimed that 80 per cent—an exaggerated estimate—of heroin in the U.S. originated as Turkish opium.

The peasants, who say the poppy's non-addictive oil for cooking and salads and calm it boosts sexual potency, must now sell the dried pods to the government at fixed prices for state export to pharmaceutical producers.

According to unofficial estimates, this year's crop was around 6,000 tons, and much of it still is unsold because Turkey is asking high prices and waiting for increased world demand to catch up with them.

Narcotics agents here still are uncertain whether they have seen the last in Turkey of the Marseilles Connection or its ekstir route—the Beirut Connection.

Although there are no reliable figures as to the value of Turkish opium in the pre-ban days, there is little doubt that it brought millions of dollars to professional heroin traffickers, who are known neither for soft hearts nor for their willingness to give up without a fight.

Guadalajara — Where Canadians Pass Through

GUADALAJARO, Mexico (CP) — This is where Canadians arrive on their way to such Mexican Pacific resorts as Puerto Vallarta, the Club Mediterranee at Playa Blanca and the super-luxurious Las Hadas at Manzanillo. They change to a smaller plane to fly over the Sierra Madre for a holiday at sea and sun.

Guadalajara, second - largest city in Mexico, sits at a breezy altitude of more than 5,000 feet and is worth more than a few hours' layover. Two days would allow enough time to take in some of its attractions.

Sights along the road from the airport are unsurviving—shabby ponds with water lilies, roads filled with fast cars, adobe huts with tin roofs and, close to town, crowded streets of mean houses and dingy stores. Interspersed are new hotels, high-rise buildings and the Plaza del Sol, largest shopping centre in Latin America.

Most of the main points of interest are grouped around the Plaza de Armas. Here is the cathedral, of various architectural styles, surrounded by gardens filled with roses and fountains. One square is a floral rectangle of columns dedicated to birdes.

Facing the squares are colonial buildings of spacious grace and great size, including the governor's palace of 1643 and the old colonnaded Degado Theatre.

The cathedral interior is a swerver of white plaster work and gold leaf. Nearby are other galleries, the University of Guadalajara and, a few blocks away, the Liberdad, reputed to be the largest market in Mexico.

One corner of the market is pungent with cheeses, meats, nuts, beans, candy and flowers but the rest of the two-storey building is a kind of bargain basement of Mexican arts and crafts.

Wares include pottery, glass, lamps of wrought iron and glass bubbles, hand-woven serapes and ponchos, pickled and embroidered white dresses fine enough for a bride, gaudily painted wooden trays, leather belts, purses and wallets, only chess sets and ashtrays and jewelry.

At the House of Handicrafts, where some haggling is permitted and credit cards are accepted, goods of superior quality are sold in elegant surrounings—suede jackets, ceramics, copper or brass saces, sterling silver or 14-carat gold.

For entertainment, the city has plenty of theatres, courts and roll courses, cock fights, bull fights, soccer and charros (rodeos). There is iroquent symphony, ballet and opera and nightclub acts from Mexico City are booked into the larger hotels. And Guadalajara is the city of the Mexican hat dance and mariachi bands.

There is a wide choice of hotels, from the lavishly-run first-class and luxury inns, many within walking distance of the main sights.

Boats Sold

CHICAGO (AP) — John Seeger, chairman of the Boating Industry Association, said that 1974-1975 sales of new boats and boating equipment passed the $3-billion mark but fell short by about five per cent of the previous year. He estimated retail sales of boats, motors and trailers at $1.95 billion for the 1974-1975 fiscal year as compared to $2.89 billion the previous year. He said his figures did not include accessories.

U.S. Auto Sales Jump 33 Per Cent

DETROIT – (AP) — United States car sales in mid-November jumped 33 per cent above last year's poor tempo, marking the fifth consecutive 10-day period in which deliveries have topped year-ago levels.

All four U.S. auto makers reported sharp gains over the middle 10 days of November 1974, when the industry was in the depths of its two-year slump.

American Motors Corp., said its sales rose 41 per cent, General Motors Corp. posted a 36-per-cent increase, Chrysler Corp. was up 30 per cent and Ford Motor Co. reported a 29-per-cent gain.

U.S. car sales in the period were 232,942. The companies sold 190,585 cars in the period last year.

For the year to date, U.S. car sales of 6,340,376 trail last year's levels by nine per cent. GM was off two per cent, AMC seven, Ford 14 and Chrysler 30 per cent.

Meanwhile, Volkswagenwerk A.G., (VW), the West German automaker, apparently has scrapped plans to enter a joint venture with a U.S. company to produce cars in the U.S.

Instead, VW has returned to its original plan to build and operate a U.S. production facility of its own, say officials of the United Auto Workers (UAW) Union.

Arthur Railton, VW's U.S. vice-president, said he was unaware of any change in the thinking of VW's advisory board in West Germany.

Paper Claims Egg Board Imported 4 Million Eggs

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — The Kitchener-Waterloo Record says that a director of the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board imported more than four million eggs from the United States earlier this year and sold them to the egg board at a profit on the eggs.

The newspaper says that Joe Hudson of Lyn, Ont., imported 11,198 30-dozen cases of U.S. eggs between Feb. 1 and July 9 this year. Mr. Hudson is a major grader as well as a producer.

The Record says that although Mr. Hudson's action was not illegal, it was in direct violation of the egg board policy that keeps imports to a minimum. Import restrictions were of the eggs imported by Mr. imposed on foreign eggs July 4. Hudson—more than 1.5 mil-

Ontario Won't Change Position on Hospitals

TORONTO (CP) — There is little chance the Ontario government will reverse its stand to allow the Chesley and District Memorial Hospital to remain open, Health Minister Frank Miller said Tuesday.

The minister said in an interview that the hospital, located about 35 miles northwest of Owen Sound, meets most of the criteria for being closed.

He said the 19-bed facility is located in an old building and is there is a new hospital in nearby Hanover that is not being fully used. The ministry is trying to reduce health costs.

Earlier Tuesday, about 250 Chesley-area residents demonstrated outside Queen's Park in an attempt to save the hospital. Mr. Miller later met with representatives.

Eddie Sargent, Liberal member of the legislature for Grey-Bruce, said the health minister hoped that Chesley likely would be provided with a community clinic to replace the hospital.

Bill Matheson, spokesman for the Chesley-area residents, said in an interview during the demonstration that the government's decision, closing the hospital are not good enough.

The hospital recently announced the facility will be closed in January.

Anti-inflation Board Handles Complaints

OTTAWA (CP) — Since starting operations Oct. 28, the anti-inflation board's public information branch has handled almost 1,400 consumer complaints about alleged violations of the restricted wage and price controls imposed Oct. 14.

Unit chief Jane Heintzman says complaints about food prices rising and rent increases are most frequent.

The unit has three regional offices and six full-time general inquiries officers on telephones. Its function is basically an extended version of the complaints service the food price review board, now swallowed up by the anti-inflation board, Miss Heintzman said Tuesday.

Its officers are dealing directly with the public, but are taking a basic set of questions and answers developed by the previous organization. Someone has received about 11,000 consumer inquiries and referred many of them to the public information unit, Mrs. Heintzman said.

She says the unit is starting a once-a-week analysis of all complaints it receives, from which it will try to isolate particular industries or companies that appear frequently among the complaints. These names then will be referred to the monitoring units within the anti-inflation board.

Ottawa Could Lose On Nuclear Sale

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government stands "to lose at least $36 million on the sale of a nuclear reactor to Argentina, the president of Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. said Tuesday.

John Foster told the Commons resources committee the loss will occur unless the South American country agrees to renegotiate the sales contracts, raising the price to include higher-than-expected rates of inflation.

The original contract called for an expenditure of $140 million—$111 million of that in Canada and the remaining $29 million in Argentina. But the federal Crown agency estimates the cost of the Canadian portion alone has risen to $177 million.

When the contracts were signed in the spring of 1974, an inflation clause was included with a ceiling of 24 per cent. But actual inflation so far totals between 30 and 35 per cent.

No ceiling had been set on the $40-million spending in Argentina, but further losses are possible at that end, Mr. Foster said following the meeting.

Mr. Foster said three meetings have been held with representatives of the Argentine Atomic Energy Commission and he believes a new contract can be negotiated.

Under questioning from T.C. Douglas, NDP energy critic, he declined to say whether Canada will be stuck with the loss if the South American government refuses to renegotiate. He said AECL believes there is a valid claim for renegotiation under Latin law.

Not Always a Thrill

NEW YORK (AP) — To celebrate the Bicentennial, "The Spirit of 1776," a boxed set that includes a fife, has been put on the market here. The box, put out by Music Minus One, also contains an album with tunes from the American revolution and an illustrated instruction text.

Names Conflict

ST. MAARTEN, N.A. (AP) — The Netherland Antilles Windward Islands of St. Maarten, Saba and St. Eustatius are in the northeastern Caribbean in a chain of islands called the Leewards. Reason for the confusing names is that the Dutch named the island chain as they were approaching while the English sailed through the chain and looked back before naming them.

BEST FOOD NEWS IN MONTHS

The good news of an 8-week price freeze on some 7,500 products in our stores will give much-needed help in food budgets. Remember that even prices on our advertised features are frozen as of November 21, and that prices will be lowered on any items for which a decrease is received from our suppliers.

Perishables such as meats and produce can not be included in the freeze, because of wide fluctuations in the supply market for such foods. However, only normal mark-ups will continue to be made on these, and any price advantages will be quickly passed on to you.

If you have any questions about the November 21 price of a product, consult a member of the in-store Consumer Advisory Personnel, or the store manager. Or give me a call.

May Order Strikers To Work

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson said Tuesday she is considering a request from the mayors of 11 Ontario municipalities that striking paper workers be legislated back to work.

Dr. Stephenson said that before making any decision, she wants to study several alternatives to such legislation. Some of the workers, members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union, have been on strike since July. The strike involves nine plants and 2,200 workers.

The mayors asked that the government order the workers back for a period of 90 days and if in that time a mutual settlement is not reached, then compulsory arbitration be instituted.

Sidesteps Request

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has jurisdiction over the operation of the Canadian Football League, Dr. Bette Stephenson, Ontario labor minister, said Tuesday. Albert Roy (L—Ottawa East) asked Dr. Stephenson to make an order under the Human Rights Code to end discrimination against Canadian quarterbacks in the league. He said a league rule allows each club to employ two import quarterbacks and the rule should be changed to allow each team another Canadian player who would be designated as a quarterback.

Declines Involvement

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Tuesday he will not participate in protests in Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey's Canadian Centenary. Paul Yakabuski (PC—Renfrew North) asked in the legislature whether Mr. Davis felt Mr. Mackasey should be the unanimous choice. Mr. Yakabuski said the Mr. Mackasey deserves the honor because he has demonstrated "that he possesses a personality commonly known as guts."

Hatfield Requests Total Freeze on Prices

FREDERICTON (CP) — Premier Richard Hatfield called Tuesday for a country-wide price freeze for the remainder of the year as anti-inflation measures can be put into effect.

Speaking on a legislature motion to support federal anti-inflation moves, Premier Hatfield criticized the Liberal opposition in the provincial legislature for saying they support the program on one hand "and finding fault with it on the other."

"The country is facing a very serious financial problem. It can only be tackled on a national basis. I said so 18 months ago," the premier told the house.

He said he has serious reservations about the anti-inflation program and the timing of it and thinks a freeze should be applied to all prices.

"People are not ready for price and wage controls today but the vast majority realize they are necessary and they have to put up with them," Premier Hatfield said.

The motion of support was passed unanimously by the legislature.

High Commissioner Shot in Bangladesh

NEW DELHI (AP) — A gang of armed men shot and seriously wounded India's high commissioner to Bangladesh in Dacca today, the Indian government announced.

A spokesman for the foreign ministry said four of the attackers were killed and two others were wounded.

The Indian official, Samar Sen, was shot in the right shoulder. The government was sending a special plane with medical personnel to Dacca, the capital of Bangladesh, to bring him to New Delhi.

"The government of India has asked the government of Bangladesh to institute an immediate inquiry into this incident to expose the conspiracy behind it and punish the offenders," the Indian spokesman said.

He said India has been the target of "insidious and mischievous propaganda" in Bangladesh for weeks.

"Our high commissioner had drawn the attention of the Bangladesh government to the serious consequences that might follow if this campaign was allowed to continue," the spokesman said.

Although India was independence for Bangladesh in the 1971 war between Indian and Pakistan, relations between the two neighboring countries have been strained by the recent government upheavals in Dacca and by the discovery of a live grenade on the grounds of the high commissioner's residence two weeks ago.

Bangladesh's pro-Indian independence hero, President Mujibur Rahman, was killed in a coup on Aug. 15. After another upheaval three weeks ago, the army chief of staff, Maj.-Gen. Ziaur Rahman, apparently became the chief power in the government.

The attempt on Sen, formerly an Indian representative at the United Nations, was made as he arrived at his office this morning. His assailants were described as armed terrorists and the Indian government immediately told Bangladesh security guards and Bangladesh police stationed at the Indian office opened fire on them.

Group Formed

TORONTO (CP) — Representatives from four levels of government have formed a study group to determine the future role of Toronto Island Airport, the Toronto harbor commissioners said Tuesday. The results of the study program will be the basis for a final decision by late 1976 on the future of the site. The program was set up as a result of meetings between federal and provincial government officials and representatives from Metropolitan Toronto, the City of Toronto and the harbor commissioners.

Top Crop

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Grape Growers' Marketing Board said Tuesday grapes have moved ahead of peaches and apples as Ontario's top fruit crop. Figures released by the board say grapes bring more than $15 million a year to 1,300 growers operating 23,000 acres of vineyards. A 10-year easing into wine, juice, jam and jelly, the value of the crop increases to about $60 million, the board said.

Plans Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Tuesday night the government intends to go ahead with plans to hold a United Nations conference in Vancouver despite a request by Vancouver city council to postpone the conference.

Provides Couriers

TORONTO (CP) — Rio Algom Ltd. announced Tuesday it will provide a courier service to transport material to shareholders of Lornex Mining Corp., the company that it is seeking to purchase with a cash offer of $9 a share. Because of the national postal strike, shareholders have not received material for the offer due to expire Dec. 31.

Awarded $1,000

TORONTO (CP) — The Church of Scientology of Toronto was awarded $1,000 Monday in a libel action against Ontario Central Services of Nottingham, England. The sect had sought damages of $500,000 from the defendant, which printed a book entitled Inside Scientology, written by Robert Kaufman. The case was not defended.

Like Nickels

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Residents here respect nickels rather than dimes and are pondering problems for the Federal Reserve Bank. People want their change given in nickels and no one knows why. The bank has asked fast-food restaurants to give change in dimes rather than nickels in an effort to stop the problem.

Seat Belt Legislation Introduced For Economic Reasons Says MPP

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation making the use of seat belts mandatory was introduced by the Ontario government for economic reasons Jamie Wiebrook (L—Sarnia) said Tuesday.

Mr. Bullbrook said in the legislature during second-reading debate on the amendments to the Highway Traffic Act that the government decided it might save some money by reducing traffic accidents.

The Liberal MPP said the government considered the problem in light of the financial cost of terms of medical treatment and property damage. He said he would support the legislation but added he does not think it will be accepted universally by the public.

Spokesman for the NDP and the Liberals indicated they will support the legislation in principle.

Larry Grossman (PC—Toronto St. Andrew-St. Patrick) said he has had some evidence the legislation is not popular in his riding but said he will support it because it is necessary.

Fred Young (NDP—Yorkview) said the legislation should be accompanied by measures to provide for better driver training and safety-inspection programs.

Police Raid Olympic Contractors for Papers

MONTREAL (CP) — Acting on complaints of possible widespread corruption involving construction of the Olympic village, police raided offices and homes of key figures in the project Tuesday in search of contracts and documents related to the project.

The raids, undertaken jointly by RCMP and Quebec Provincial Police, resulted from an investigation which began last June.

A police spokesman said the investigation followed 39 or 39 complaints from individuals concerning the handling of bids on the four pyramid-shaped towers, being built by the consortium Les Terrasses Zarlega.

Current estimates for construction of the village run as high as $94 million, almost triple the initial construction estimate of $30 million.

The suspected fraud could involve as much as $30 million, police said.

The complaints included increasing contract prices for the purposes of kickbacks, signing contracts with favors attached, payment of money under the table to secure contracts, and unusually high bids, police said.

Charges may be laid as soon as today once all the search warrants have been executed, police added.

Go to Shut-ins

BROOKLYN (AP) — The East New York Savings Bank has pledged $15,000, rather than buying Christmas gifts for hospital patients as it has in previous years, to Hospital Audiences Inc. This group started in 1968 and provides entertainment for shut-ins in hospitals, nursing homes and other institutions. It also takes groups of patients to plays and films.

Caracas' Mayor Has Lots of Nerve

CARACAS (CP) — Diego Arria, the youthful manager of Caracas, has an abundance of guarano — a slang word Venezuela describing a head long style that involves a macho attitude, daring, nerve, even adventury.

Arria's success is such that he can still back in the herrorious headquarters of his capital city were his drives headed in the direction of some of the worst urban slums in the world and tell a visitor: "Housing is not one of our provicles."

It is the kind of breathtaking gesture applauded by bullfight afficionados and by Caracas plaza de toros, not far away from the mahogany-lined office of the governor of the federal capital district.

Governor Arria is performing now at this interview with all the dazzle and daring of a quick-footed matador. The visitor still is dazed by the fourish about beating when Arria wrenches his attention with this:

"We are fortunats in Caracas that our city is in a valley and our machitos, our slums, are always in full view on the mountainsides.

"In cities built on the flat, the slums can be hidden away. Our poverty is always visible and a constant reminder that we live with a desperate problem."

The more detail Arria gives about that problem, and the more he talks with enthusiasm about the need for real reforms — "throwing up public housing is a superficial palliative, not a cure" — the more apparent it is that only someone with Arria's bounce and optimism could survive in the job.

A person with less guarano than the stylish, 37-year-old Arria, a multilingual man-about-the-world with a background in economics, tourism and international aid, would be worn down by the damning daily problems of Caracas, a metropolis gone awry.

Arria is a dark, slender dynamo in a tight, white, double-breasted suit, limping stiff-legged around his office. The limp is a legacy from a traffic accident in Washington where he worked with the Inter-American Development Bank before his recent governor, including a seat appointment last year as Caracas governor including a seat on the federal cabinet.

He talks with enthusiasm about the United Nations conference on the human habitat to be held next year in Vancouver and about plans to recruit advisers on parkland in the capital region from Parks Canada in Ottawa—"I'm told they're the best."

But Arria, a man his peers predict will one day be president of Venezuela, talks mainly about his city and its appalling problems of poverty, public health and population growth, problems comparable to those of any bursting-at-the-seams city of three million or more but worse because they expand so rapidly here.

In 1950, a predecessor of Arria estimated that 15 per cent of the population lived in slums. Ten years later the official estimate was 30 per cent. Now Arria, having just completed a census of housing, health and educational conditions, says up to 40 per cent of the city's 2.3 million people is "inadequately housed."

The rural poor stream in daily by thousands, legal and illegal migrants from neighboring Colombia sneak into town in uncounted thousands. A birth rate of 37 per 1,000 population overwhelms the Concepcion Palacios maternity hospital, the schools and the undermanned police force of 5,500.

In a country where 56 per cent of the population is under 20, 70 per cent of Caracas crime is committed by children under 15. The ranchito communities foster anarchic gangs.

Those who do have jobs in the city may be seen in the pre-dawn twilight, having scrambled down from their high-hill ranchito hovels, waiting for city buses to take them downtown. The average wait on the inadequate public transport system is one hour.

The city is acquiring land for an underground transit system that is officially supposed to cost $2 billion but which Arria predicts will wind up costing $15 billion—twice the country's current annual budget.

So what is to be done in this city, glorious for its grotesque contrast of wealth and poverty? Cursed as country grown rich on all exports afford to house its poor?

It wouldn't work, even if all the money were poured into new housing, says Arria, because you simply enlarge the problem, attract even more people and never catch up.

Arria wants to begin at the beginning by upgrading slum area services, providing water, power and police protection, developing a community readiness for housing improvements in place of anarchy.

Beyond that, he says, the solution depends on national measures already instituted but still in their infancy. They involve land reform and farm improvement that would encourage farm folk to stay put, involve land reform and farm improvement that would encourage farm folk to stay put, involve land reform and farm improvement that would encourage farm folk to stay put,

Fishing Season Not Over Yet

Tim Agapas of 13 Fairway Ave. and Bob Kent of 388 East Moira St. examine the two large salmon they fished out of the Moira River Saturday with their hands. The salmons weigh between 25-30 pounds each. Bob, who wrestled with the fish in the shallow water, said he didn't realize how cold it was until after he had his catch.

Home for Retarded Opened in Hamilton

TORONTO (CP) — An old, rooming-house in downtown Hamilton was scrubbed clean by mentally retarded persons before they moved into the building, the first home of their own.

Some were moving from their family homes and some had been living in a residence maintained by the Hamilton Association for the Mentally Retarded, said David Crouch, the association's director of residential services.

He was attending a weekend meeting of the Ontario Association for the Mentally Retarded, called to discuss accommodation problems.

Mr. Crouch said the rooming-house tenants are on their own, apart from a staff member from the residence who visits the house each day to help with problems.

The tenants know how to handle their family benefit cheques and shop for food but will have to learn how to cook, he said.

Alan McWhester, director of residences for the Metropolitan Toronto Association of the Retarded, questioned the practice of training retarded persons for low-paying jobs and then housing them in residences with broadloom and color television.

They would not want to leave the residence for housing within their incomes, he said.

Patience Pays For Rorabeck

The 1975 hockey training camp has been a long one for Brighton's Brian Rorabeck, at finally, the waiting is over for the 15-year-old.

Monday, an Ontario Hockey Association (OHA) appeals tribunal ruled in the young sinister's favor and he will be allowed to play for Toronto Young Nationals minor bantam team.

Rorabeck, along with Brantford's Wayne Gretzky, took up residence in Toronto before this season, with their signals set on playing bantam hockey in a Young Nats' organization.

Gretzky, a minor league whiz, was picked up by Nats' entry in the Minor Bantam B Hockey League after he and Rorabeck were denied permission to play in the bantam level, by the Ontario Minor Hockey Association (OMHA).

According to reports, Gretzky's hockey future is still in doubt since he is said to have been suspended indefinitely by the OMHA after he joined the Junior B team.

Apparently, the OMHA has not as yet honored that suspension. The case is expected to come up at an OHA meeting, December 5.

Rorabeck, it appears will be better off than his counterpart, in spite of the long wait.

He'll be in the Young Nats' minor bantam lineup for a tournament at Grosse Pointe, Michigan, this weekend. If his registration in the Metro Toronto Hockey League (MTHL) is accepted in time.

Orangeville lawyer William Grant and Tom Sims of Stratford, members of the OHA's tribunal, were in favor of Rorabeck being okayed for Nats' bantam MTHL. The third member of the trio, Pat Doherty of Kitchener, did not agree.

A talented minor hockey player during his climb through the ranks in the program at Brighton, Rorabeck is living in Toronto and attending school there.

Moira Trojans' Scott Sisson breaks past Belleville Collegiate's Mitch Hannah and John Guthrie (right) in the second game of Tuesday's Bay of Quinte Basketball Association Senior A doubleheader at Centennial Secondary School. Sisson was burdened with the task of leading the Trojans over Collegians. He scored 17 points during the first three quarters to keep Moira within range of powerful BCI squad, but in the fourth quarter, he and his teammates were left behind as the Collegians mounted an all out attack and rolled to a 69-46 victory.

Overwhelm Opposition in Last Half

Tigers and Collegians Play Possum for First Two Quarters

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Trenton High School and Belleville Collegiate Institute made sensational Bay Tuesday night in the first Bay of Quinte Basketball League Senior A doubleheader of the season. About 300 spectators were on hand to watch the visiting Tigers down the home Chargers, at Centennial gym. BCI came on strong in the final quarter to defeat Trenton, Trojans 69-46.

In other Bay of Quinte Basketball League A action, Centennial juniors walloped visiting Trenton 64-6 just after the Charger midgets had gone down to defeat 46-45 at the hands of the Tigers.

In Bay of Quinte B play, Albert College seniors and midgets travelled to Bayside only to receive a cool reception. The Red Coat midgets slipped the visitors 37-33 and the home midgets sent Albert away on the short end of a 50-23 score.

"They really play well when they have to work at it," said Trenton assistant coach, Joe Dicrace "as long as they can run from the first of the game they're all right."

The Tigers were a little slow getting started and the Chargers took a 16-4 lead five minutes after the first quarter tap ball. However, Trenton narrowed that to a 17-13 lead at the end of the quarter and by half time were in front 30-27.

The Chargers, evidently lacking confidence, found themselves scrambling under the guidance of Trenton's man-to-man defence.

"We did well until they started clearing their bench," said a disappointed Centennial coach, Pat Carty, "when they started jumping we just couldn't get anywhere."

The height advantage, bench strength and overall balance of the Tigers was most evident on the score sheet where four players hit double figures, but no one shooter dominated. Bob Thompson, who played an outstanding two-way game led the Trenton squad in all departments, including scoring, with 15 points. Forward Blaine Rittinger followed with 11 points and Paul Yates and Dave Lewis popped 10 apiece.

John Hipwell keyed Centennial's offence with 15 points. For some reason, the aggressive forward developed cold hands in the second half and only counted two points. That figure showed in the Chargers' second half total as they only tallied 13 points. Altogether, Centennial was outscored 31-13 in the final two quarters.

BCI 69, MOIRA 46

The Collegians went up to their old tricks in the second game of the senior A double header. They played as hard as they had to through the first two quarters bolting a medial 27-26 edge at the half.

They advanced that to five points after three quarters with a 47-42 margin. Then, in the last period, BCI walked away with the game outscoring the Trojans 22-4.

"Moira put a fine team," said winning coach Bill Miller, "I was surprised at the pressure they applied through the first half. They really came to play."

Miller also added that he felt his players were unusually rattled by Moira's defensive attack.

The Trojans appeared in run out of steam in the final period and BCI applied even more pressure. They ran a fast break offensively and an aggressive man-to-man defensively.

Mike Kirby was the key to BCI's pressing attack. He hooped 20 points while Mitch Hannah, another lethal year senior scored 18. Brian Bell also hit double with 10 points.

Scott Sisson was almost impossible to hold off the Moira scoreboard as he hit consistently from 20 to 30 feet out. However, he developed a cold hand in the final period and only counted two of his 19 points during that eight minute span. John Lowe and Kent Manning were next in line with 10 points apiece.

CHARGERS 81, TIGERS 5

Centennial's awesom offence, combined with a defence lack of skills in the Trenton lineup gave the Chargers an overwhelming win. They rolled up an amazing 34-3 lead at the half and went on to drub Trenton.

Art Pulis popped 27 points, Jim Graham 19 and Pete Green 14 in the victory. Top scorer for the visitors was Brian MacIntosh. He counted five for Trenton's field goal for four points.

TIGERS 64, CHARGERS 48

Mark Scuccato led a well-balanced Trenton attack to victory with 15 big points over the home team. Doug Attwood was very close behind with 14 hit double figures. He totalled 10 points.

BAYSIDE 37, ALBERT 33

Albert opened their senior B schedule with a win last week but proved a little weak bench-wise Tuesday. The Red Devils outlasted the visiting Collegians in the final few minutes of the game to earn the four-point margin of victory.

Paul Dasaylva popped 21 points for Bayside and Rick Hodgson had 15. Anthony Stewart was high man for Albert with 14 while Ed Chan and John Tynes scored 12 each.

BAYSIDE 30, ALBERT 28

Forward Don Dasaylva outdid his brother in the scoring department. The younger Red Devil had his midget crew in this decisive victory by scoring 16 points. Rick Davis was next with eight.

For Albert, Erik Swan hit 14 and Steve Johnson seven.

Race Drivers Go to School

LONDON (CP) — The checkered flag sweeps down, the crowd cheers and the race car flashes over the finish line and the backslapping congratulations begin as the champagne corks fly.

This is the recurring dream of the budding racing driver, who longs to make a path in the gambling world of high-powered cars, to compete over the great circuits of the world—Monaco, Brands Hatch and all the rest.

How do the great drivers of the world get there? That's the vast majority of them begin at school.

But these schools are no ordinary establishments of learning. They are where the would-be great racing drivers can test their appreciation of math to see whether they are likely to make the grade in the toughest, most dangerous sport of all.

In Britain, two of the most famous schools are at the Brands Hatch and Snetterton motor-racing circuits. Every Friday and most Saturday evenings about 70 students go to the testing Brands Hatch circuit about 30 miles southeast of London.

Not all necessarily have ambitions to become Grand Prix drivers. Many are motor-racing enthusiasts who just want to see what it is like to drive around at top circuit speeds.

Many of those applying do not clear the first hurdle—interviews by experienced men who run the schools do not let just anyone loose in their expensive cars, and certainly not until they are satisfied as to the applicant's competence as a driver.

Consequently, the first tentative step on the long road to the cockpit is to enrol the Shell Sport escort.

An instructor sits next to the student making notes on a large pink form listing up to 40 possible faults in driving technique.

On the first drive, a strict speed limit is imposed.

Once the initial test has been passed, the students go back to school for sessions in a classroom, complete with blackboard, where instructors give the right "lines" through the corners and show the students how to brake and apply the accelerator simultaneously when changing down and give other hints on high-speed driving.

Students are then ready to take to the track in Formula Ford. Formula Fords made especially for racing schools. They are tough, rather overweight racing cars with great advantages in that they are fairly easy to repair.

The courses are flexible, varying according to the capabilities and progress of the students. Some spend a whole session just on skidpan, less ring what to do, and what not to do, when control is apparently lost.

Belleville took the lead with a screened shot by Dave Giddings. The play was set up by Gary Thompson, who fed the puck to Giddings. The shooter wasted no time in putting the puck into the mesh of players in front of Peterborough goalie Doug Haye. The insurance goal for the locals came from Ross Lawrence with Brian Bell credited for giving the goalie trouble.

Alan Pearce had a fine game in the Belleville net, as he fought off several Peterborough rushes in the first two periods. At one point in the third period, Pearce made a two-man advantage and appeared the Belleville lead with shots. Portt managed to stave off the attack and give the win to the Belleville club.

One of the top performers in the game was Marty Lowery, who harassed Peterborough forwards throughout the match.

In the penalty department, Belleville picked up 11 minors, while Peterborough had just four minor penalties.

The standout on offence for Jim's Pizzeria was Ross Macleod, with his two goals which left Belleville in contention early in the contest. Gary Thompson also had two goals, both were assists. Lowry picked up two assists to go with his defensive efforts.

ALLAN PORTT

ly lead in the opening minutes, scoring at 2:06. The goal went to Terry Geoffainy, Ross MacLeod of the locals soon tied it up, making the score 1-1. After two periods each team had added a marker, with MacLeod scoring his second of the night for the locals.

Early in the third period,

Bob's on Top Of GHHL Battle

The battle for first place continued in the Gas House Hockey League Tuesday night as Bob's Sports scratched their undefeated streak to five games with a 7-3 win over Rollin's Lumber.

In the other two GHHL contests, Bel-Con Engineering downed Murray's Food Market 7-3 and Jim's Frame-in upset Bi-Temp Airconditioning 6-5.

The win gave Bob's 15 points for the season, one more than Bel-Con Engineering and the Yardmen both idle Tuesday. All three teams have played nine games.

Charlie Rawsthorn topped balanced Bob's attack with two goals and an assist. Dave Middleton, Bobb Harrington, Dumon Richardson, Mike Gordon and Bob Windrim each had singles.

Wayne McCauley, Dale Tummon and Bill Dunn were the marksmen for Rollin's.

Rob Foster earned a hat trick in leading Bel-Con to their win. Peter Fisher also drew three assists.

Paul Semark, Bernie Robar and John Nell scored for Murray's.

Jerry Chapman scored three times and collected an assist as Jim's Frame-in surprised Bi-Temp Airconditioning. The Basketball Classic

You'll See Only the Best

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

The premier basketball tournament in the area this year will take place here this weekend when the Bay of Quinte Boys Basketball Classic gets presented by the McDonald's Belleville Basketball Classic.

Eight of the best senior High school basketball teams will vie for the elite title. Three of those clubs come from right here in the city — Belleville Collegiate Institute, Nicholson Catholic College and Quinte Secondary School. The other five teams come from three other cities across Ontario and one from New York State.

Stamford Collegiate from Niagara Falls, St. Pius X from Ottawa, Bishop Gibbons from Schenectady New York, Hershey District from Hamilton, Loyalist and A. N. Myer also from Niagara Falls make up the remaining clubs entered in the Classic.

STAMFORD

There are three levels of basketball in the province — AA, AA and AAA. Stamford settled for nothing but the best last year when they rolled through the top league in the province and captured the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations' AAA title.

All of their starting lineup of last season has graduated, except one player, John Nicol. With him and two other five second year players who transferred to the Collegiate, Lorne Dyer, Jim Hunter, both six-foot-two, Stamford promises to be a better title with tremendous ferocity.

ST. PIUS

Last season St. Pius surprised the AAA basketball scene when they defeated Stamford 1973-74 champions, Lisgar in the fifteen District playoff. That fact, with their experience and intimidating six-foot-six centre, makes them most capable of winning the local tournament. Led by Dave Kent, the shortest of their starters at six-foot, St. Pius may be the team to watch.

HERSHEY GIBBONS

The league this New York team participates in makes them tough even before the opening jump. Their loop, the Schenectady and Troy, has over the past few years produced the top basketball teams along the Eastern Seaboard.

Darrel Faber spearheads an outstanding Gibbons' attack but he may not be in the lineup due to injury. However, the high school comes equipped with three talented clearing from six-foot-five to six-foot-seven. Should he be able to play things stick even without Faber.

STRATHROY

Height doesn't count for everything in the game of basketball as will be proved this weekend by Strathroy District. Only three players on the team break the six-foot mark, but BDCI makes up for height with tremendous speed and an overpowering defensive game.

Five-foot-nine, Amedeo Pisterio leads this exciting, aggressive defensive squad.

A. N. MYER

Highly touted, Myer is likely everyone's favorite to take the AAA championship away from Stamford. Led by six-foot-five Jay Triano and six-foot Terry Higg, two nationally rated high school players, they recently walloped a squad from Detroit 89-58. They have a large bench, they have great height, they run the opposition right off the court.

QUINTE, NICHOLSON, BCI

The three local entrants in the tourney give Belleville a good chance to keep the Classic's championship right here in the city. The Quinte club, with Steve McCracken, rotate five starters and their entire bench throughout every game. They are such a well-balanced, versatile team they field-count some great on defence and earn a fast break offensively.

Nicholson, last season's OFSAA runner-up to Stamford Collegiate Association's Champion, enters "75-"76 with all of their starters back. Led by Dale Wilson, six-four, Jeff Boyle, six-four, and Bruce Collins, six-one, the Nicks possess one of the tallest threes at all levels of basketball in the province.

BCI, though not endowed with the height possessed as Quinte and Nicholson, have always been strong. Well disciplined and with excellent coaching, the Collegians have several strong points including a talented first year bench. Since BCI has always been highly regarded for their basketball prowess throughout the province, they have to be considered near the top of this year's lineup.

The tournament is going to be run in three sessions. Friday night, Saturday mid-day and Saturday evening. Admission for each session is $1.25 and 75c for students with ID cards.

Slim Pickin's On Trojan Plank

If Centennial and BCI are lacking for second year basketball players they should be thankful for Moira. At Moira, coach Ken Smith has only one player with that much season and he isn't a starter. "We're a young club in the long run," said the sophomore coach. "We have some good performance it won't make a great deal of difference."

The Trojans have caught in an oversized rebuilding upheaval, losing their three best experienced ball players.

The gaps left by guards Scott Sisson and Rob Chase.

"Scott is Moira's best guard in the area," said Smith, "and Rob is very, very surprising, but happy find for me."

Though only by his first year of senior ball, has been playing basketball since he was in grade five. "He's a big boy in height," said Smith, "we make room for him."

The coach says they have to be patient with him. "We have to force the opposition to come to us," said Smith, "if they get up under our boards we don't have enough height to cover the rebounds."

Offensively the Trojans have to rely on ball control. They are still quite a bit behind the eight ball in that department they have been unable to get their offence in gear.

We just give the ball to the guards right now and let them call the shots," said Smith.

Though things sound somewhat dismal for Moira seniors Ken Smith still has a keen eye for Quinte Basketball League action. He's been with it since as had as last year. At least they're not in the cellar.

Scrooge Had Nothing On Dryden and Smith

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal goalie Ken Dryden wanted to play close at 4:00 minutes Tuesday night but Atlanta coach Fred Creighton was not about as definite as you can get.

"That was the best performance I've ever seen a goalie turn in," Creighton said after Dryden and the Canadiens shut out his Flames 4-0 in a National Hockey League game.

The Canadiens were outshot in every period and Dryden had to block 39 shots to earn his fourth shutout and lower his goals-against average to under 1.7 a game, best in the league.

Dryden modestly speculates on his changes of keeping his goals-against average under two a game, pointing out that averages don't always mean that much.

"You don't think about that," he said. "You just proceed from game to game.

"Some seasons a 2½ average will be good, and other seasons it won't be good. I think in comparative terms, not absolute terms."

The win enabled the first-place Flyers to retain their two-point lead over London Knights in the Emms division.

The Knights defeated Windsor Spitfires 4-1 in the only other game Tuesday.

At Hamilton, Sean Sullivan, Dale McCourt, Danny Shearer, Joe Contini, Rob Street and Mike Keating scored for the Fincups, who led 4-1 going into the third period.

Larry Skinner and Peter Lee scored for Ottawa.

Thirty-one penalties were given. Four majors and two misconducts went to the Fincups, and four majors and one misconduct to Ottawa.

SHOOT 46

The Fincups shot 46 times at Bob Day and relief goaltender Jim Fraser, who took over for four minutes after Hamilton's fourth goal. Mark Locken faced 29 Ottawa shots in the Hamilton net.

In Windsor, it was only the third win on the road this season for the Knights.

Dave Hillbom and Rick McIntyre gave London a 2-0 lead in the second period after a scoreless first period. Vern Stenlund and Scott Campbell scored for London in the third.

Newcomer Jack Anderson, acquired Monday in a trade with Hamilton, scored the Windsor goal early in the final period.

London outshot the Spitfires 39-24 before 2,480 spectators.

Fincups Protect Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Fincups broke a scoreless tie, scoring four goals in five minutes early in the second period to defeat Ottawa 67s 6-2 Tuesday in Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A action.

With seconds remaining in the penalty-ridden game, Mike Hedges of the 67s was carried from the ice on a stretcher after he was involved in a fight with Cal Herd of the Fincups. Officials said Hedges suffered a broken nose.

The win enabled the first-place Fincups to retain their two-point lead over London Knights in the Emms division.

Beavers Pick Up Share Of Lead in the West

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sherbrooke Beavers gave up an early lead to first-place Chicoutimi Saguenecns but rallied for an 8-6 triumph in Quebec Major Junior Hockey League action Tuesday night that gave them a share of a first place at their own.

The Beavers beat a 15-5-1 one-not-tied record for 34 points in the West Division, several to Cornwall Royals but with a game in hand. The Saguenecns, first in the weaker East, are 11-11-2 for 24 points.

Elsewhere, Trois-Rivieres Draveurs bombed Shawinigan Dynamos 10-5.

The Beavers trailed 6-4 after two periods at Chicoutimi but scored four unanswered third-period goals while outshooting Chicoutimi 18-5 for an over-all 38-26 edge. Robert Simpson, with his second goal of the game, Alain Belanger, Mark Lofthouse and Jim Corsi with his 28th of the year, supplied the game-saving offence.

Rams Move To Top

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Richmond fifth Rams took over first place in Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A standings with a 6-4 win Tuesday over host Weston Dodgers.

In other action, North Bay Trappers fell two points behind the league leaders as they were held to a 3-3 tie by Royal York Royals in Toronto.

Myles McCaully and Bob Osborne led Richmond Hill with two goals each. Jim Clement and Frank Nigro were the other scorers for the Rams.

Greg Athe, Brad Hill, Ken Taylor and Paul Mancini scored for Weston.

Tom Diggles led North Bay with two goals and Claude D'Amour got one.

Ken MacDonald, Dan Dalvise and K. C. Patterson scored for Royal York.

Mariners' Ace Gets Back in the Groove

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Andre Lacroix showed some of his old flair for collecting scoring points Tuesday night.

Lacroix, who set a torrid pace down the stretch last season to take the World Hockey Association scoring title, scored one goal and assisted on three others to lead San Diego Mariners to a 7-5 win over Edmonton Oilers.

The career leader in scoring in the WHA with 382 points in three seasons, Lacroix is currently struggling this year. Before Tuesday's game he was tied for 36th place with 18 points, far behind the leaders.

Playing before a San Diego crowd of 4,700, Lacroix helped set up a first-period goal by Kevin Devine that broke a 1-1 tie, putting the Mariners in front to stay.

Later he drew an assist on the Mariners' fourth goal scored by Kevin Morrison, set up San Diego's fifth goal, again by Devine, and scored the sixth himself.

In Tuesday's other WHA games, Houston Aeros stopped Indianapolis Racers 4-1, Cleveland Crusaders edged Toronto Toros 4-3 and Minnesota Fighting Saints stopped New England Whalers 3-2 in a pair of overtime games.

Perhaps Lacroix is having difficulty adjusting to staying in one place. Although he had more than 100 points in each of his first two seasons, this is the first time since 1970-71 he has played with the same team for two years in a row.

Gene Peacosh added a pair of goals and rookie Alex Tidzy one for the Mariners. Mike Rogers and Bruce MacGregor were the Edmonton scorers.

Goalie Ron Grahame continued to hold a hot hand for the Aeros, who recorded their fourth consecutive victory.

He blocked 27 shots, including 19 while Houston was taking a 3-0 lead in the opening period. He has allowed only five goals during the Aeros' victory streak.

Gordie Howe scored the sixth goal of his career and drew an assist on a goal by Don Larway for the Aeros. Terry Ruskowski and Frank Hughes had the other Houston goals while Reg Thomas scored for Indianapolis.

Gerry Pinder scored for Cleveland in the third minute of overtime to beat the Toros, who forced the extra play with a third-period goal by Frank Mahovlich.

Al McDonough scored twice and Danny Green once for Cleveland. Vaclav Nedomansky and Jeff Jacques were Toronto's other scorers.

At St. Paul, Minnesota veteran Dave Keon set up Mike Antonovich's winning goal in the seventh minute of overtime. Antonovich's shot carbomed off Whaler defenceman Thommy Abrahamsson into the net.

The Whalers had tied the game with only 19 seconds remaining when Ron Climie batted in his own rebound.

John McKenzie and Wayne Connelly had the other Minnesota goals. Gary was the other New England scorer.

Howe Has Share of Toros

TORONTO (CP) — There is a bylaw to prevent Gordie Howe from having an interest in two World Hockey Association teams, WHA chairman Ben Hatskin said Tuesday.

"I'm, who is player-president of Houston Aeros, has an interest in a Mississauga, Ont., company that owns a single $20,000 share in Toronto Toros.

The Gordie Howe Sports Corp. is one of at least 29 shareholders in the Toros, who underwent a corporate reorganization this summer.

Howe said Tuesday he was pewter his partners in the sports centre had purchased the share, but didn't realize they had direct it in the centre's name and not his own.

"You've got to be kidding," Howe said when asked if the share might represent a conflict of interest. "The way I feel about Houston!"

Hatskin said the matter would have to be brought before league trustees for discussion.

"It's just the corporation doing it, not him," said Hatskin. "In my opinion there's nothing wrong with it when you've only got a peanut of it (the Toros)."

Boston's Talented Rookie Makes Baseball History

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Lynn of Boston Red Sox, earlier named Rookie of the Year, added the American League's Most Valuable Player award to his trophy case today in an unprecedented vote by the Baseball Writers Association of America (BBWA).

Boston's stylish centre fielder became the first player in baseball history ever to break in 0-0 winning both coveted prizes and his 39-point margin over first baseman John Mayberry of Kansas City Royals represented the largest in the 45-year history of the award.

In this year's National League voting earlier this week, second baseman Joe Morgan of the Cincinnati Reds won the prize by 18½ points over outfielder Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia Phillies, which until today represented the largest plurality in history.

Only one other rookie ever came close to winning the award. That was Pete Reiser of the old Brooklyn Dodgers, who finished second behind teammate Dolph Camilli in 1941.

Lynn, the third successive outfielder to win the American League prize, was the only player named on all 24 ballots of the special BBWA committee. He received 23 of the first-place votes and two for second to finish with a total of 336 points.

Mayberry, whose name appeared on 22 ballots, was runner-up with 192 points.

Jim Rice, Lynn's rookie teammate in the Red Sox outfield, was third with 154 points while Rollie Fingers, the Oakland A's relief ace, received the remaining first-place vote and finished fourth with 129 points.

The 23-year-old Lynn had a .331 average and led the league in runs scored with 103 and in doubles with 47.

Kromm Sees the Challenge And He Does It His Way

WINNIPEG (CP) — When Winnipeg Jets signed Bobby Kromm this summer to coach their World Hockey Association team, they did it without much fanfare. It was a quiet little gathering far down the scale of extravagance from the signings of some of their players.

Some hockey insiders say that was an injustice because in Kromm the Jets have obtained one of the most knowledgeable and communicative coaches in hockey.

Kromm's level of success in the major leagues will be measured in the season ahead by the native of Trail, B.C., already ranks as one of the most successful minor league coaches.

While waiting patiently for Chicago Black Hawks to give him the promised National Hockey League coaching position, Kromm molded Dallas Black Hawks into one of the most devastating clubs in the Central League.

That's an easy task in a league where teams are made up of a handful of veterans and a majority of youngsters fresh out of junior ranks. Some hockey people say hockey in that league is nothing but dumb luck.

But in his eight years at Dallas, Kromm produced what might be considered a dynasty in the minor leagues as the Black Hawks captured three championships and came within three victories of claiming three others.

Kromm finally grew tired of waiting for Chicago to keep its promise.

"I turned down two NHL jobs four years ago because Chicago promised me I would get the coaching job when it became available within a year," he said. "But as we see, nothing changed."

So Kromm, a fierce competitor and disciplinarian, took up the Jets' offer to try to lead them back into the WHA playoffs.

It took him less than a month to bring the multi-national club together as a unit, get the defensive play improved to near the desired level, and instill a winning spirit in the club.

"It's the winning is everything; I don't like losing," Kromm says matter-of-factly.

What I have to get across to a number of guys in that dressing room who haven't been winners maybe is how great it is. Once they become winners they'll never want to lose again."

Kromm hasn't been a winner all his life but his playing and coaching career has been marked by frequent championships. He turned down the opportunity to play professionally with the Western League, electing instead to go into coaching.

While learning the fine art of glass-blowing at Cominco Ltd. in Trail, he coached the senior Smoke Eaters to the Canadian championships and in 1961 took them to the World title, the last time a Canadian team earned that distinction.

His success with the senior team earned him the Dallas job.

But with all his teams in the past, the Jets will become winners because Kromm has definite plans or not at all. When he agreed to take over the coaching reins from Rudy Pilous, who became general manager, Kromm made it clear he would tolerate no interference from coaches Pilous and Bobby Hull.

Bills Hang On In AFC East

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo Bills have lost their share of football battles this season, but they still haven't lost the war.

The Bills, fighting for their lives in the American Football Conference East, invade St. Louis on Thursday afternoon with hopes of upsetting the Cardinals.

The Bills are tied with Baltimore Colts at 6-4 in the AFC East, one game behind front-running Miami Dolphins. Another loss could be fatal to their National Football League playoff hopes.

The Bills started the season in style with four wins in a row, but then dropped a 17-14 decision to the lowly New York Giants in a Monday night game.

They have never quite recovered. They have won just two of their last six games and one of them, a last-minute victory over New York Jets, was a gift.

Worse, the team has been ravaged by injuries. The offensive secondary has been especially hard hit, which could account for the 261 points the Bills have surrendered. Only three teams—the Jets, Chicago and Cleveland, have given up more.

The offence, with O. J. Simpson and Jim Braxton piling up the rushing yardage and Joe Ferguson passing to J. D. Hill and Bob Chandler, leads the National Football League in scoring with a whopping 230 points, 23 a game.

The Cards, 8-2, need a victory Thursday to stay on top of the NFC East and are favored by about one touchdown to get it.

The NFL's other Thanksgiving Day contest finds Los Angeles Rams, 8-2 and all but certain of winning the NFC West title, visiting Detroit Lions, 6-4, who are entertaining hopes of getting into the playoffs as a wild-card entry.

Kansas City QB Is Out

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mike Livingston, Kansas City Chiefs' quarterback, underwent successful knee surgery Tuesday night, a spokesman for the National Football League club announced.

The exploratory surgery was scheduled after the 30-year-old Livingston failed to respond to rest following an injury suffered in the Chiefs' Nov. 16 game against Pittsburgh Steelers.

Livingston, who moved into the No. 1 spot this year, is out for the rest of the season. Veteran Len Dawson, who led the Chiefs to an overtime victory last Sunday over Detroit Lions, was given the starting assignment Sunday against Baltimore Colts.

Bottom-rung Beginning For Foreman on Road Back

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — The long road back begins tonight for George Foreman, former world heavyweight boxing champion, as he meets Joey Ballard in a 10-round fight of questionable claims.

The New York Athletic Commission said the bout is an exhibition. Sponsors insist it is a real fight.

"It is a benefit fight for charity," said Marvin Kohn, deputy commissioner. "We approved it as such. There will be a reference, but not one of our referees."

A spokesman for the promotion said: "Both fighters will try their best to win. But if the bout goes the limit there will be no decision rendered."

Foreman, who won the heavyweight title by stopping Joe Frazier in January, 1973, in Kingston, Jamaica, and lost it to Mohammad Ali in an eighth-round knockout in Zaire in October, 1974, needs a victory over a creditable opponent to regain his status as a legitimate challenger.

Time To Pay For CSA

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Ski Association (CSA) has fired three key employees, eliminated one ski program and curtailed two others until it musters up at least $200,000 to pay for them, general-manager Keith Haddock said Tuesday.

Alpine director Luc Dubois, jumping team manager John Armstrong, competition technical director Lorne O'Connor and five other employees were released Monday, he said. Plans to reduce the programs became final Monday night.

Heskin blames inflation, the decreased value of the Canadian dollar in Europe and public indifference for problems that flopped for the CSA's difficulty.

The CSA has a budget of about $1 million for the year. Half of it is a federal grant and half from public sources but the organization was counting on an extra $200,000 to make ends meet.

The National Ski Team, five members of which are scheduled to compete in the Winter Olympics in Innsbruck in February, remains untouched.

Orillia Team In Shakeup

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Orville Bray, father of team captain Len Bray, has been named new coach of Orillia Terriers of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

He replaces Rick McCockitis, who wants to return to the team's playing lineup after coaching it through its wins and 10 losses this season.

Als Let PM Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday congratulated Edmonton Eskimos for winning the Grey Cup but followed that he was "slightly disappointed" at the game's outcome.

Last week Mr. Trudeau indicated he would be cheering for the identical Alouettes who lost a 9-8 decision to Edmonton in the Canadian Football League championship game.

In the Commons Tuesday Steve Paproski (PC—Edmonton East) a former lineman with the Eskimos, pinned an Edmonton supporter button on the prime minister and later in the question period asked Mr. Trudeau for a report "on the athletic and political disaster" that was his team last Sunday.

ADDS EXECUTIVE

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Putnam with Philadelphia Flyers and am, 46, a former executive with Philadelphia Flyers and Atlanta Flames of the National Hockey League, has joined the World Hockey Association. CONTRACTS VALID

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Chancery Court Judge Robert Hoffman has declined to release Willie Spencer and Ed Marshall from their contracts with Memphis Southmen of the defunct World Football League. Spencer and Marshall filed suit to invalidate the contracts so they could negotiate with the National Football League before midnight Wednesday, the NFL's deadline for signing former WFL players. The Southmen, owned by John Bassett of Toronto, have kept the team intact in the hope of acquiring an NFL franchise.

SOLOMON WINS

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Fifth-seeded Harold Solomon beat fellow American Brian Gottfried 6-2, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1 Tuesday to win the men's singles title in the South African Open tennis championships. The victory for Solomon means he has edged out American Eddie Dibbs by five points to clinch eighth place in the Grand Prix standings and qualifies for the lucrative Masters tournament in Stockholm next week. Solomon's prize money was about $12,000 while the eighth-seeded Gottfried earned about $6,000.

Manitoba Junior League Cracks Down on Violence

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Junior Hockey League has begun a get-tough policy against violence by suspending Kenora Thistles' defenseman Ken White for the remainder of his junior hockey eligibility.

League commissioner Bill Addison said Tuesday White was suspended "for conduct detrimental to the best interest of the league and for disrespect exhibited towards officials . . . . . "

Addison made the announcement following a league meeting to discuss a sharp increase in violence in recent MJHL games. But he refused to go into any detail about the New-30 game that sparked White's suspension.

White began his junior hockey with the Thistles last season.

The game between Kenora and West Kildonan North Stars in Winnipeg was called at the 13:30 mark of the third period following a bench-clearing brawl. The Kenora team suspended players Warren Hampton and Craig Svenson for their part in the incident.

Wayne Fox suspended the players indefinitely and the league is satisfied with the penalties," said Addison. "There won't be other suspensions announced in the near future pertaining to other games.

"However, the game is in question are a thing of the past. Our goal is to set up the machinery that will prevent these kinds of things from happening in the future.

To that end, the league announced two rules changes that take effect immediately.

First, the bench-clearing incident, the coach of the team involved first will be suspended for a minimum of three games and fined $100. If there is any doubt as to which team left the bench first, both coaches will be suspended and fined.

When an altercation or fight takes place, the remaining players must immediately proceed to their bench. Any players failing to do so will receive game misconduct penalties.

Addison said meetings will also be held with league officials to instruct them in their duties.

"The key is to make sure they are calling everything strictly by the book. We will also call a meeting with coaches and referees present to give them a chance to discuss the rules together."

Despite the suspensions and the new rules, Addison said he doesn't necessarily believe play in the MJHL is any rougher this season than in the past.

"I've been at 17 hockey games in the last 18 nights and the calibre of play this year is at least as good as it has been in the past years. We have had only 50 per cent of the penalties that we had at this time last year.

"I think that because of the fact violence in hockey has become such a big issue recently, people tend to exaggerate when discussing the violence in our league."

Husqvarna 2000
Husqvarna 2000
We're not kidding. In Sweden we've spent over 100 years perfecting the Husqvarna ... the simplest and most reliable sewing machine you can buy. Now, even a rank beginner can sew a buttonhole on first try. And it's just 1, 2, 3, 4 then go ...
It's simplicity like this, that makes Husqvarna the most popular free-arm sewing machine in Europe.
You don't have to oil it. You don't have to worry about the thread jamming. Fashionable knits and stretch fabrics are easily sewn with a range of stretchable stitches. And for heavy materials such as denim or leather, there's a neat little gear shift, which allows five times slower sewing than normal with full motor power and greater needle penetration.

LOBLAWS FREEZES PRICES

Friday November 21, 1975
Time: 12:01 a.m.

William Sherman , President of Loblaws Limited announced today a 60 day price freeze on all non-perishable goods for sale at Loblaws, effective immediately.

An official 'Price-Freeze Book' will be posted in each Loblaws store by mid-week based on today's prices, and exempting only perishable items that are subject to daily market price fluctuations such as fresh meat, fresh produce .

In addition to the freeze on prices, Loblaws will launch appeals to their suppliers to hold all cost increases during the 60 day freeze.

This action is being taken by Loblaws in recognition of the consumers' and governments' growing concern over food price inflation, and in the hope that other retail organizations, both food and non-food related, will implement similar programs.

BEEF: THE CANADIAN FAVOURITE

Beef is truly Canada's all-around favourite meat choice. At your Loblaws store over 40 different beef cuts are available for your selection and enjoyment. While these cuts vary in taste characteristics, all beef cuts are delicious, tender and juicy when prepared properly. For greatest eating satisfaction, buy quality beef and familiarize yourself with the wide variety of beef cuts available.

KNOW THE CUTS

Select beef cuts according to your intended use. Since beef cuts vary considerably in their natural tenderness, be sure to match the cut to the proper cooking method. Use dry cooking methods (oven roasting, broiling, pan frying, pan broiling) to prepare tender cuts and moist cooking methods (pot roasting, braising, cooking in liquid) to prepare less-tender cuts. See our Beef Chart for specific cooking recommendations.

No matter which cut you select, beef is both a delicious and a nutritious addition to your menu. Beef is an excellent source of high quality protein and a good source of the vitamin niacin and the minerals, iron and phosphorus.

BUY QUALITY BEEF

Loblaws makes it easy to buy high quality beef. Loblaws offers only the finest, assuring you of excellent flavour, tenderness and juiciness.

Royal Warrants Undergo Change

LONDON (CP) — The system of royal warrants, generally interpreted as the royal household's stamp of approval on a product, is about to be revised, with many old firms being forced to give up the coveted accolade.

After consultations with the Queen, the Royal Warrants Commission has announced that about 70 shops, businesses and manufacturers will be stripped of the "Royal Warrant of Appointment" events now displayed on their products.

"Many of these firms haven't supplied anything to the Royal Family for several years," said a Buckingham Palace spokesman.

Although there are 1,638 warrant-holders, the Queen and living members of her family are thought to have dealt with only about 500 to 700 of them.

Among those losing the warrant is a firm of shirts made for George VI, the Queen's father.

Another is a London department store lost a spokesman said the firm was not too alarmed—"We never regarded it as an advertisement—either a civilized accolade."

But an eminent city barber was distressed. "Oh, dearie me—this is a blow," he said. He will have to remove a window lettered with the words, "By appointment to the late King George VI, George V and the Prince of Wales 1915-1936."

No one knows exactly when, by whom and to whom the first warrant was granted although the custom is generally traced back some 600 years to Henry II, who granted a royal charter to a weavers' group, thereby establishing a formal link between royal household and tradesmen.

To qualify for a royal warrant, firms must directly supply the royal household or one of its residences for three consecutive years and must be paid for their products or services by the household. The monarch must see all warrants before they are granted.

Holders are allowed to display the royal arms and the words "By Appointment" on premises, vehicles, products, wrappers and stationery.

But it is by no means as easy as it sounds. "If a product is used in the palace canteen for workers, the company would not be eligible," said Col. William Rowsell-Boyd, spokesman for the Royal Warrant Holders Association.

Although royal warrants are rarely removed except for misbehavior, legitimate holders cannot use them any way they want. For instance, they cannot display arms more than once on the side of a package and the cost of arms must be reproduced exactly as designed. Legal action is taken against those who falsely claim "royal appointment."

Tony Scoller, account director at J. Walter Thompson Ltd., the United States ad agency's British affiliate, said the royal coat of arms gives a product "as air of reliability and truth."

"One wouldn't expect, for example, a royal warrant-holder to be watering his beer."

Although the royal warrant symbol is seen on a number of luxury goods, such as high-priced liquor, fine woollens and other snobs' goods, it does not necessarily mean that only posh establishments are thus favored. James, cornflakes and shampoos also carry the accolade.

And a royal warrant does not mean the item is better than any other, but that the Queen and her clan, like any other folk, have preferences.

If nothing else, a look at the list of holders over the years allows a glimpse of his behind the royal closet royal doors. The current list, which is published annually, includes harpsichord tuners, makers of racing colors, suppliers of mayonnaise and suppliers of horse-and-carriage conveyances.

The royal household prefers domestic products. About the only non-British items are several varieties of finest French champagnes.

World's Largest Dam Harnesses Indus River

TARBELA, Pakistan (Reuter) — The world's largest earth-filled dam now harnesses the waters of the mighty Indus River, and gives hope of a better life for Pakistan's 72 million people.

The Tarbela Dam, which cost $1.38 billion and took seven years to build, should revitalize Pakistan's shaky, agriculture-oriented economy and help the country become self-sufficient in food production.

The dam was due to go into operation last year but had to be delayed when it nearly fell because two hydro-electricity tunnels were badly damaged during testing.

The repairs, now almost completed, added $60 million to the Tarbela bill and cost Pakistan an estimated $300 million in lost crops.

Experts say the dam, begun in 1968, would cost twice as much to build today because of inflation.

The dam stretches 9,000 feet across the Indus at a point 65 miles northwest of the federal capital, Islamabad.

It is half a mile wide at the base, 470 feet high and 40 feet thick at the top. It required 185 million cubic yards of earth and rock fill—hence its claim to be the biggest earth-filled dam in the world.

The previous largest dam, which took 175 million cubic yards of filling, also feeds Pakistan's myriad irrigation canals. It is the Mangla Dam, constructed on the Jhelum River on the border with the Pakistan-held part of disputed Kashmir.

The long-standing quarrel between Pakistan and India over the divided Himalayan state made it necessary to build both the Mangla and Tarbela dams to sustain Pakistan's irrigation network.

The Indian government, after partition of the Asian sub-continent in 1947, restricted the flow of the three eastern tributaries of the Indus which traverse India and Indian-controlled Kashmir.

Tarbela authorities say more than half the water conserved by the Tarbela and Mangla dams merely replaces the volume siphoned off by India.

The Indus basin is home to more than 80 per cent of Pakistan's people.

The waters behind the Tarbela will be strategically released into the canal network during the dry winter months when wheat and other crops are planted.

"Tarbela is not a panacea for Pakistan's economic ills but at least it will guarantee water for irrigation and that will make a big difference," says one American economist.

The Indus, late in 1974, was at its lowest level for years. Numerous irrigation canals dried up and the result was the smallest acreage under wheat for a decade.

Pakistan was forced to import 1.86 million tons of wheat which cost more than $200 million.

Finance Minister Rana Mohammad Hanif forecast that the 15 per cent extra water made available by Tarbela will be translated into a million tons more wheat next harvest.

Heavy Trip

Power Increased

WINNIPEG (CP) — Policemen in Manitoba may be given the power to apprehend people believed to be unstable and take them for psychiatric examinations. Amendments to the Mental Health Act, to be introduced in the legislature next February, will allow a policeman to use his own common sense to decide whether a person is suicidal, or a danger to himself or other people.

Diefenbaker Adds Humor To Volume of Memoirs

OTTAWA (CP) — Humor, history and some hard appraisals of policies and political parties make John Diefenbaker's first volume of memoirs about as readable a book as any of its kind published in this country.

Much of the humor is self-deprecating. The history is rich with the sorrows and tribulations of the old Upper Canada and western frontier. The politics, written from the perspective of an ardent partisan over a 30-odd year, crows a broad brush embellished with countless anecdotes, some warm, some biting, a few bitter.

The title is One Canada, The Crusading Years 1895 to 1956, which takes the former prime minister from his Ontario birth to Saskatchewan, boomtime country at age seven and onward to his capture at third try of leadership of the Progressive Conservative party and the eve of the greatest federal political victory in Canadian history.

He recalls attending a Boer War troop-return ceremony in Toronto about 1902—but with his mother-sews satin sailor suit saddly begrimed with grease from the horse-drawn garbage wagon he arrived on. He had fallen into the garbage tank.

He tells of being boarded in the big city of Saskatoon to write exams, and flunking because the wide-eyed farm boy had gorged on ice cream for breakfast and lunch.

He says Mackenzie King told him that he'd had too much to drink at lunch when the Liberal prime minister made what many people think was King's most disastrous speech, a 1926 declaration that he would not give a "five-cent piece" to any provincial Conservative government. King lost the looming election.

And he says that while he and George Drew worked together amicably after Drew won the 1948 leadership convention, the convention was geared to a Diefenbaker defeat. When he went to congratulate Drew, "it was as if an animal not customarily admitted to houses had suddenly entered the plates."

His battles with the party hierarchy from the start are enlivened, with Mr. Diefenbaker saying at one point:

"It was to be shocked and concerned again and again by the degree to which some in our party seemed to regard the possession of wealth as necessary preliminaries to any sound conception of national interest."

And again, of the party in the 1930s: "The Conservative party had literally to be dragged kicking and screaming into the 20th Century."

Included are tales of liquor plants to frame non-Liberal politicians and, in Diefenbaker's case, of some housekeeper being hidden in his office, which he located just before police arrived to search.

Diefenbaker launched his law career aged 24 at Wakaw, Sask., and won his first election that year as village councillor. He was to lose five more before he finally entered the Commons in 1940 and he was on the verge of quitting politics in 1953, he says.

He had lost two leadership bids by then—but the Gardiner machine wiped out his constituency of Lake Centre and, stung, he moved on to Prince Albert and won handily.

Of Arthur Meighen, Conservative prime minister, with whom he argued over policies: An outstanding parliamentarian "but he never understood the people . . . people are not logical."

Of that 1926 episode in which Mackenzie King swung from apparent defeat to victory and regained power: King, by dashing a constitutional crisis, "produced one of the most transparent falsehoods of any man in any generation of our country."

There was so love lost between King and Diefenbaker and one emotional warfare access is described in which King attacks him for mentioning Winston Churchill in a speech, but not King's efforts for Canada. Mr. Diefenbaker says the long-time Liberal prime minister was jealous of Churchill, who did not like King.

Diefenbaker does not appear much impressed with Louis St. Laurent, especially as a House of Commons man. He calls the fabled pipeline debate "those dreadful days" debating Parliament and says of the 1953-57 Liberal period preceding his own rule that C. D. Howe "made what he liked and unmade what he did not like."

Mention of Lester B. Pearson is limited. Diefenbaker does say again that he first raised the concept of a Middle East peacekeeping force under United Nations auspices—a concept whose implementation by the UN in 1956 won Mr. Pearson the Nobel Prize.

Moon Has Halo

TORONTO (CP) — Recently a number of Metropolitan Toronto residents saw a halo around the moon, Environment Canada says the halo is made by diffraction of light from the moon by agcloud called cirrostratus and composed entirely of needle-like hexagonal ice crystals. The cloud was caused by a weak disturbance crossing Northern Ontario, they also said.

Stanfield Predicts Permanent Price and Income Controls

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield condemned the government's proposed anti-inflation program Tuesday as the forerunner to permanent controls over prices and incomes.

Mr. Stanfield said it is a "1 1-2 p t e r p l a n n i n g in institutionalizes intervention in the economy" that is "totally unacceptable" to the Progressive Conservatives unless shortened to 18 months.

He was speaking in the Commons during report stage debate on the legislation, establishing the selective wage and price controls, proposed as a 3½-year program to end Dec. 31, 1978.

New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent said the length of the program is irresponsible. The NDP fundamentally rejects the program because it will create higher unemployment and control wages without effectively curbing price increases.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald tabled an amendment providing for a three-day parliamentary debate and vote of confidence on whether the program should be continued after 18 months, if at least 30 MPs seek such a review.

But Mr. Stanfield said this was unacceptable to the Conservatives because the Liberal majority would make the review nothing more than a progress report" and would not allow changes in the program.

Mr. Macdonald replied that the Conservative leader was playing "little parliamentary games" by insisting that the 18 months is the magic time period for a program of controls.

He said the Conservatives campaigned in the 1974 general election by calling for a three-month wages and price freeze followed by selective controls of up to two years. This would have given the Conservatives proposed controls a little span of 27 months, a year short of the government program imposed Oct. 14.

John Rodriguez (NDP—Nickel Belt) quoted Prime Minister Trudeau, who said during the 1974 campaign that the proposed Conservative wage and price freeze would in reality be nothing more than a wage freeze.

Formal votes on five amendments proposed were deferred until later in the week. These include Conservative amendments to shorten the program to 18 months and to require that the anti-inflation board monitor all government spending estimates to determine whether it was staying within the program guides.

Another Conservative amendment to limit government spending for the duration of the program was ruled out of order.

Mr. Stanfield said the Conservatives would support an 18-month program aimed at breaking inflationary expectations. But they will vote against the longer-term bill because it would build in regulation of the economy, he said.

The bill itself is nothing more than a blank cheque giving the government to alter the terms of the program without recourse to Parliament, Mr. Stanfield said.

The government policy paper outlining the program said wage increases generally would be limited to 10 per cent in the first 12 months. This is to be set by cabinet regulations, which could be changed.

Two Arch Rivals Form Business

TORONTO (CP) — Two arch rivals astonished the Canadian advertising world when they combined to form MacLaren International Inc., creating Canada's largest advertising venture with total annual billings of about $75 million. The recent merger brought together MacLaren Advertising Ltd. and Goodis Goldberg and Soren.

George Sinclair, chairman of the MacLaren group, and Jerry Goodis, president of Goodis Goldberg were not surprised, however, that they should get together after years of feuding.

"Everyone knows George and I have been fighting for years," Mr. Goodis said in an interview. "He's the only lively guy in the business—it's natural we should become friends."

Mr. Sinclair said his new colleague reminds him of his brother, broadcaster Gordon Sinclair—"Both are contentious. Both have made their way to success with no help from anybody."

But, although they have combined their talents, Mr. Goodis makes it clear that the agreement will be separate, under its own arrangements.

"We have agreed on common ownership," said Mr. Goodis. "But it is still definitely separate management of the two companies."

MacLaren's total annual billings—those of all advertising and other services—is about $60 million.

Mr. Sinclair has started as a copywriter with MacLaren 30 years ago. Thirty years ago Mr. Goodis was a year ahead to take a course in commercial art.

In 1950, Mr. Goodis joined Gesteteer Ltd. as a designer and was later advertising manager for Karsa Jewellers. In 1953, he founded Ad-Mail Advertising. He began his own agency in 1956, and is best known for his campaigns for Greb Hush Puppies shoes and Speedy mufflers.

H. M. (Bob) Turner Jr., president of MacLaren, said in an interview that "it was clear when I became president a year ago that our business had stabilized."

Home Programs Help Inflation

TORONTO (CP) — Paul Poise, president of Montreal Trust Co., said Tuesday that government programs encouraging newly-formed families to purchase homes contribute to inflation.

Mr. Poise said subsidies provided to first time home buyers by the federal and Ontario governments appear to be almost at encouraging people to believe it is their right to have a home shortly after they are married.

He said a news conference inflation is not going to be combatted by subsidizing people to rush into home ownership, giving high-ratio loans to protect themselves against future price increases.

Births

ALLAIRE — Don and Barbara (nee Platt) are proud to announce the arrival of Mark Stephen on Nov. 5th, 1975, weighing 7 lbs., 10 oz. Proud grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Allaire of Ameliasburgh and Mrs. Richard Hall, Many thanks to Dr. Bate and Staff.

CLARK — Bill and Sally are delighted to announce the safe arrival of their daughter Nicole, at 4:14 a.m. on November 21st, 1975. A sister for Jennifer. Our thanks to Dr. Fry and nurses of Obstetrics Ward at Belleville General Hospital.

In Memoriam

DEMILLE, Annie — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother who passed away Nov. 27th, 1974. Her memory is a keepsake, With which we'll never part. God has her in His keeping, We have her in our hearts. —Lovingly remembered by the family.

BARRIAGE — In loving memory of a dear father Clarence Barriage who passed away fifteen years ago today, November 26th, 1960. The midnight stars are sleeping, The world is hushed in rest, Beneath it sleeps the one we loved, And the one we could not save. As long as life and memory last We'll keep him in our thoughts. —Sadly remembered by daughter Lila Little (nee Barriage).

CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Hattie Vickery would like to express their appreciation for the kindness and sympathy shown during their bereavement, to the Deloro Heart Foundation, and the Canadian Cancer Society. Many thanks to Rev. Clare Kellogg and the Thompsons' Funeral Chapel.

We wish to express our sincere gratitude to all our friends and neighbors known to us on the recent loss of our beloved husband, father and grandfather Lloyd Wilson. Special thanks to Rev. Mowbery also to Father Ferguson and other members of the Clergy and the Sisters, to relatives, friends, and neighbors for the many cards, flowers, floral tributes, and for the kindness shown to us, and Cards to the Children's Theatre Friends, Bell Telephone Co. and pension services, and to Mr. Bob Hamilton and staff of the Bank of Montreal for their kindness and assistance. We are grateful and we sincerely regret that we are unable to acknowledge our personal appreciation at this time but we thank you sincerely. —Jean and the Wilson Family.

LIP Project Means Rides For Area Handicapped

There's a new mobility available to the handicapped of Belleville.

For 50 cents they now can be driven anywhere in the city.

It's simply a matter of dialing 968-3094.

That's the telephone number of Belleville Services for the Handicapped and Senior Citizens.

At the other end of the line will be Edid de Smidt.

She's the co-ordinator of a twin program which also does chores for senior citizens.

Mrs. de Smidt says her original inspiration for organizing a service for the handicapped came from noticing elderly people disabled by infirmity, "huddled" in front of a nursing home.

"I used to think if ever I could do anything it would be to assist people," she said.

From there she progressed to thinking about problems faced by all handicapped people.

"Everything is geared to the automobile," she says. "It's bad enough not to have a car. But to be handicapped and not able to have a means of transportation must be sheer hell."

Mrs. De Smidt has personal insight into the problems caused by disability.

She was handicapped for a number of years after being injured as a child during a World War II air raid in Britain.

Mrs. de Smidt says it was "a stroke of luck" that got the service started.

She was seeking a job last summer at the Canada Manpower offices and mentioned she'd like to do work with the handicapped. Her interviewer told her speakers — where an official for the Local Initiatives Program had stopped by.

The end result several months later was a $27,500 grant. The service went into operation Monday with two men hired as drivers.

Now people have started calling — she has an office in the basement of the MacDonald Ave. home — mostly for visits to hospital or doctor's offices.

But Mrs. de Smidt figures there are scores of people in Belleville immobilized from various handicaps. There are 66 blind people in the city alone, she says.

Physical immobility can lead to mental stagnation and even depression, she believes.

But "why, if people are physically handicapped, they have to suffer mental frustration as well?" she says.

She sees the service as more than just a convenience.

"I'd like the handicapped to start using the service to help each other," she says. "I want them to get the feeling of mobility they haven't had before and enable them to create ideas for themselves.

Mrs. de Smidt believes the service doesn't compete with regular taxi business. The present fee is to cover transportation costs. But she envisions "there won't be people taking advantage.

"The LIP grant runs out in June. But, by that time Mrs. de Smidt hopes to have found a way to keep the operation running permanently.

She admits she knows nothing about fund-raising. But she intends contacting community and church groups and government agencies about possibilities of perpetuating the service.

"I'm going to give it a try anyway," she says.

Board Chairman Elected

BLOOMFIELD — Harmon Montgomery, vice-chairman of Prince Edward County board of education and trustee for Ameliasburg will serve as chairman of the board in 1978.

Elected in absentia by fellow trustees earlier this month he confirmed Monday he will fill the chairman's office next year.

Vice-chairman of the board for 1976 will be Picton school trustee William Lant.

Although board members are elected for two-year terms the chairmanship and vice-chairmanship changes annually.

Mr. Montgomery will replace outgoing 1975 chairman, Ross Casey at the January meeting of trustees.

Candy Campaign Planned

PICTON — A candy campaign sponsored by students of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute will begin Friday.

Community residents are invited to say Merry Christmas with peppermint patties, chocolate bars and mixed nuts.

Perry Enjoys Acting Career

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Born in another era, Rod Perry probably would have fitted well in her and grandfather to work at a steel mill in Coatesville, Pa. Instead, he reached manhood at a time of opportunity for black performers.

One of the stars of the successful television series S.W.A.T., Perry, 35 says he had "doubts about his timing when he entered show business.

"But, it turned out fine, because I was lucky to get one chance after another," he explains. "I feel sorry for kids who are just getting started. They're finding that the field is crowded."

Indeed, opportunities for black performers, which blossomed in the late 1960s with the popularity of Sidney Poitier, are not as great. There was only a handful of recognizable black actors a few years ago but now there are dozens and competition for roles has increased.

Perry broke records as a bruiser at Penn State, where he was supported by a truck schoolarship. After graduation, he could have taken another year to qualify as a physical therapist or he could have returned to the steel mills where his forebears worked summers. Instead, he went to New York.

The year was 1962, when sit-ins and demonstrations in the South were inspiring a growing awareness of blacks. Advertisements and television commercials were beginning the transit on from lily-white to integrated.

"A friend dared me o apply at a model's agency," said Perry, "I did, and I was hired immediately for a cigarette ad. I had never smoked in my life, and it took me two days to learn how to hold a cigarette.

Trial Date Set

A 23-year-old Belleville man will appear in provincial court here on Dec. 5 for trial on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

Floyd Johnston of 26 Centre St. was remanded when he appeared in provincial court here on Monday following his return from Penetanguishene Mental Health Clinic where he underwent psychiatric evaluation during 30 days of observation.

Police say Johnston was charged following an investigation into an attack on a 51-year-old city woman on Oct. 4.

Snooker Entries to Close

NORTH MARYSBURG — Entries close Saturday for the Fall of '75 Snooker tournament to be held at Quaill's in Waupoos.

War Years Reviewed

OTTAWA (CP) — A poignant look back at everyday life in the Second World War, at home and abroad, will be shown on the CBC-TV Network in the Performance series Sunday.

It is a dramatization by Norman Klenman of passages from the book, Six War Years by Barry Broadfoot of Vancouver, who interviewed hundreds of men and women in recent years for their recollections of the war.

An earlier book, Ten Lost Years, chronicled the Depression in the same way, was a hit of the Performance series on CBC-TV last season.

It was produced in the style of improvisational theatre, with rough sets and properties merely suggested. In Six War Years, producer Robert Sherrin and director Allan Nicholls used documentary films and a more formal acting approach.

Some acting cast in small, and roles are not identified in the film credits. Actors include James Ahss, Blair Brown, Clare Coulter, Thomas Hauff, Daudlia McGrath, Ken Pogue and Miles Potter.

The War Years opens with a leave-taking scene, the kind of thing many men must have gone through with their parents as they waited for the war.

There are the troop trains, the beer parties,the hurried-by punch-ups, the nights in Piccadilly Circus, the military brass and jam-making sessions, and other scenes quite apart from battles that meant war 30 years ago.

There are also the recollections of arguments about Mackenzie King's leadership as prime minister, about the National Resources Mobilization Act and the Zombie-like men conscripted under the Act for military service at home—and the Halifax VE-Day riot.

And in the background, the still-remembered songs of the war years: Glen Miller's String of Pearls, Deep in the Heart of Polka and A Nightingale Sang in Berkley Square—all there except the voice of Vera Lynn, the Sweetheart of the Forces.

New Book for Children

OTTAWA (CP) — How can a raindrop that goes "splosh" on the pavement hold up the show among friendly raindrops that all go "splish" and "splash"?

That's the problem in a new story for children by Imelda Read of Ottawa a teacher-turned-journalist who has written what she calls an easy-to-read book. It's left for children aged three to six to supply the ideas and even.

The book is the result of Ms. Read's experiences as a teacher and researches she undertook with grants from the Canada Council and Opportunities for Youth.

Pre-school and junior grade children, she said in an interview, are fed often spoon-fed with stories that do nothing to challenge their imaginative powers or creativity.

Raindrop, An Empty Book by Merilyn Read, illustrated by Wendy Irvine and published by Borealis Press of Ottawa with help from the Ontario Arts Council, is the result.

Ms. Read's story is about a maverick raindrop and how it is encouraged by other raindrops, but finds friends among children when it rests on a mud-puddle. What will happen when the sun dries the puddle?

Ms. Irvine is a prize-winning art student from the University of Manitoba and of Ottawa. Her three-year-old daughter Rebecca helped with the design of what illustrations should go in the book.

Ms. Read does not write down to her young readers, and uses words such as "spectacular-smelling weeds as thunderpeans raincloths and skydrops."

The book has been tested on some pre-school children and, she said they found it aroused their interest and imagination.

Lemmon Topic of New Book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — All of Jack Lemmon's friends, from Ezio Adamo to Billy Wilder, have a place in Bruce Feinstein's collection of the new biography, Lemmon.

The guest of honor said he was the most reluctant of biographical subjects: "I tried to argue with Don Widener that it was too soon.

"Hell, I'm only 50. I said. 'Can't you wait a few years til I'm run over by a truck—or a producer?' But Don needed the money, so I said okay. Now he doesn't need the money."

Indeed, author Widener was drawing as much attention from the party guests as Jack. A few days earlier in San Francisco, Widener had won a record $7.35 million in libel damages from Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

The judgment resulted from the utility's reponse to a television documentary on nuclear power written and produced by Widener and narrated by Lemmon now.

Only collaboration led to the just-published Lemmon, which would indicate that the actor's life has been a series of scenes from a Jack Lemmon movie.

For instance:

—He was born in a hospital a elevator and had such a bad case of jaundice that a nurse cracked, "My, look at the little yellow Lemmon."

—He suffered every possible childhood disease, had five minor operations before the age of 10, underwent three tonsilectomies and five removals of adenoids. He was also a chronic bedwetter.

One of the most interesting parts of the biography concerns the actor's work with Marilyn Mercor in the film Some Like It Hot.

"Marilyn has a kind of bullish alarm system," Lemmon says. "It would go off in the middle of a scene if that scene was not right for her, and she would just stop everything. She would stand there with her eyes closed, biting her lip, and kind of wringing her hands until she felt it worked out. Now this sounds like selfishness, and I guess it is. But she didn't mean to be selfish—it was the only way she could work.

I don't think Marilyn had a great talent—what she had was star quality and we completely the talents she did have."

Bachman Aids Group

WINNIPEG (CP) — I'd never met the two guys from Trooper before we were introduced by a representative from their record company and sat down to tape an interview.

Ra McGuire is the vocalist and Tommy Stewart is the drummer.

Their talk was honest and straightforward in a way that you can belabl won't be a year from now if the group still is in one piece.

The best time to talk to a rock band is before they've realized enough success or failure to set their minds to a kind of role reply to constant questioning. The candor of a band before exposed to a question for the first time and the often naive belief in their mission is always is startling contrast to the tired veteran whose answers bare the same relation to the truth as most of the chatter on a late night talk show.

Bachman, formerly a Vancouver bar band known as Opposition, has been one of the most unlikely to benefit perliberally from the Randy Bachman masterminded success. It is the fall-out from that phenomenon Bachman has realized his own record label, Legend Records, and Trooper is the first product on the market.

The influence Bachman has had is undeniable but Trooper isn't as philosophical rather than musical.

"Some songs are just gut emotion. Take in Trouble Again, I have no idea what it's about. The band just started playing the song one day and I started singing it. Tried to put myself in the same emotional thing as the music was about. I just started singing. Sure, on some of the songs the lyrics are mostly inane and stupid but I'm not trying to sell a philosophy. There's enough I'm trying to get across."

"We've had another rock 'n' roll band. I mean we're not Elton John or anything," Stewart throws in.

Sometimes it seems that the only way for a group to get the necessary breaks these days is to be the protege of a successful band, band manager, star producer or have massive record company funds and hype behind them.

"We get kicked in the face a lot because of our association with Randy." He pulls out a still think there's always someone who comes along and turns the key."

Your Horoscope

Bernice Bede Osol

For Thursday, Nov. 27, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be very tactful today in handling people who are helping you, but who are not really obligated to do so. You could rub them the wrong way.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're still very prone today to take foolish risks with your resources. Be very wary of all things speculative. Stick to the blue chips.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If there is an unnecessary tempest at home today, chances are the blame can be traced to you. Don't speak out without thinking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're very easily irritated today, but you're not likely to tell the real cause of your frustration. If you don't, nothing can be resolved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't let an overenthusiastic friend sell you a ball of goods on a pet project. It could cost you plenty.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're going to let someone set the pace for you, rather than determine your own speed. Unfortunately, your stride and theirs aren't in harmony.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't talk about your ideas prematurely today or discuss them with one who isn't in a position to judge objectively.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Just because you know a person sociably is no reason to deal with them in a business sense. In fact, be scrupulously careful to avoid such involvement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It would be a mistake today to be too self-serving at another's expense. This person would be very irritated if he felt he was being used.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone you'll be closely associated with today has a great big chip on his shoulder. A few loose words could easily knock it off.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb 19) To save money today, you may tackle something that's better left to experts. You could wind up with a larger bill than anticipated.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Normally you're easy to get along with. Today, however, you're apt to behave in a manner that others could find offensive.

Was Hottest Movie

MANTECA, Calif. (AP) — The hottest picture here is—or was—The Towering Inferno. A few hours after the monster movie had its last showing in the San Joaquin Valley farming town, flames gutted the El Rey Theatre, the community's only movie house. Fire officials said cause of the blaze was under investigation.

His Fourth Marriage

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Second World War flying ace Gregory (Pappy) Boyington married to his fourth wife, Josephine Wilson Mortenson, 48, at her home here. The 63-year-old retired Marine colonel, credited with shooting down 28 Japanese planes, was awarded the Medal of Honor for his exploits with the famous Flying Tigers and Black Sheep squadrons. He wrote a best seller in 1958 about the latter group.

Steelworker Director Attacks PLO Position

TORONTO (CP) — William Mahoney, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America and vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress, said Tuesday that admission of Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) spokesmen to Canada is tantamount to opening the country's doors to kidnappers and murderers.

Mr. Mahoney said he made the statement because he felt it was time someone outside the Jewish community spoke up against allowing PLO representatives into Canada.

He said he disagreed strongly with the decision of the International Labor Organization to give a place to the PLO.

Body Fluid Can Vary Dramatically

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: If your body retains fluid in the daytime and you take four diuretics a day to relieve it, and your blood chemistry is fine, is the circulatory system that is at fault? Could it be a sluggish thyroid?

If it is the circulation at fault how do you solve the problem?—Mrs. E. A.

The causes of water retention are many and varied. Excessive salt intake, of course, is one. Use of the contraceptive pill is another. The increase in estrogen production before a period can also cause a retention problem, and you, as a low thyroid activity can, as you suggest in your letter, for the thyroid gland disease is another possibility.

If it is a circulatory disorder you doctor should be able to detect that and prescribe appropriate medication—digitalis, for example.

Do you have varicose veins? This can be a cause, and if so, it can be corrected surgically. If it is the thyroid causing it, then thyroid medication can control the situation.

For starters, your doctor is trying to use the diuretics to see if this simple approach will be sufficient. However, I'm sure that it would be a permanent solution unless your problem is only temporary, or one related to a recurrent cold as with some menstrual cycle.

That's a lot to think about, but water retention is a complex matter, and usually water pills are not the answer alone.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have had pain in my stomach that I call gas pain. I have been unwarranted for two to five times a day. It is not diarrhea but a soft stool.

I am 35 years old. This is a change in bowel habit for me. I have not seen a doctor. I go to school five hours a day and work six hours a day. I am on my feet from 8 a.m. until midnight, but I take care of my two children—Mrs. F. C.

I guess your question is, "What's wrong with me?"

It is difficult to say but if I had to make an uninformed guess, I'd say from your description of yourself and from the personality that comes through in your letter, that you could have a gastric ulcer.

It is ironic, and more than a bit sad, that those who can least afford it (busy career-oriented mothers like yourself) are the ones who are most prone to eating and resting habits. You sound as though you are spreading your energy budget a bit thin and in the process neglecting yourself in a state of attrition.

As I said, this is mere guesswork. Your change in bowel habits should be viewed as a red warning for you to convince you to see a doctor.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have inverted nipples. I didn't try to breastfeed my first baby. My mother and my sister are the same, and they tried and failed. Is there a way to correct this? Doctors favor breastfeeding, but what about when you just can't? I am pressured to explain why I don't. When I explain, people think I have some kind of deformity. Is this common?—Mrs. J. W.

Inverted nipples can be raised by plastic surgery, in this, fi bers are severed that are restricting abnormal tension on the nipples, pulling the mid-ward. It is not a common problem though.

A nipple that is normally erect, and then becomes inverted is another matter requiring immediate attention. Since both your mother and your sister have this condition, you would naturally suspect a hereditary factor.

Many physicians advocate breastfeeding, but this should not give you concern over your baby's health. Formula-fed infants do quite nicely, and have for many, many years. I suspect that you learn to live with the condition. Tell your inquiring friends your baby just didn't catch on to the idea of breastfeeding or that you don't have sufficient milk. I have no figures on the incidence of inverted nipples.

Tries To Crush Revolt

LISBON (AP) — Commandos loyal to the Portuguese government-controlled rebellious military police near the presidential palace in Lisbon today as President Francisco da Costa Gomes tried to crush a pro-Communist revolt in the armed forces.

Officers of the military police regiment said one of their men was killed when the police fired on a crowd of soldiers from their barracks and the commandos retrieved the body.

Rebellious paratroops and air force men were holding out at two of four air force bases they seized early Tuesday, but the rebels at the other bases surrendered, apparently without bloodshed.

A government spokesman said pro-Communist Gen. Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho, the leading military opponent of the moderate-leftist government, has been relieved of all his responsibilities in the air force. The spokesman said Saraiva de Carvalho's command was at present at Portugal's Belem Palace with Costa Gomes.

A number of other leading left-wing officers were reported under arrest.

Reuters news agency reported that Costa Gomes disbanded the internal-security organization Copcon today after the 7,000-strong military police regiment, one of the most radical in Copcon, fired on loyal troops near the presidential palace. Copcon was under Carvalho's command.)

Saraiva was under a state of siege declared by Costa Gomes after the rebels seized the four bases and took several hostages, including the air force commander for the Lisbon area.

The rebels called the revolt an attempted coup and a "protest against the left." He ordered the Lisbon commandos reinforced to crush it.

The commandos also moved in on the Lisbon light-artillery regiment, which is one of the garrisons outskirts of the capital and arrested its commander, Maj. Dinis Almeida, officials said. There were no reports of fighting there. Both the light artillery unit and the military police regiment have long been considered leftist.

Leftist Revolt Has Collapsed

LISBON (AP) — Rebel troops under a midnight-to-6 a.m. curfew, suspended civil liberties and gave Costa Gomes extraordinary martial-law powers. A crowd of more than 1,000 left-wing soldiers defied the curfew and massed outside the government palace at 1 a.m. shouting "Fascist! Fascist!" but the crowd-maiden scattered them by firing into the air from armored cars.

Another commando unit reported that the Lisbon television studios from rebel soldiers from the army administration school. After the station was seized, the government cut the power to its transmitters and broadcast from Oporto, Portugal's second largest city 175 miles to the north.

The president's decisive action strengthened the moderate government and brought Vice Admiral Pinheiro de Azevedo, which the commander and the commander of the Lisbon military region, Gen. Carlos Azeredo de Carvalho, have been trying to oust.

The Azevedo government last week announced it would no longer tolerate leftist Costa Gomes could get the armed forces to support a rival military Revolutionary Council headed by Brig. Otelo Saraiva Friday, but the president voted the move, because he was told many of the troops in the Lisbon area would not accept the change in command.

Fromme Convicted of Assassination Attempt, May Get Life

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Lynnette (Squeaky) Fromme, who confessed her life to mass murderer Charles Manson, was found guilty of attempting to kill President Ford—a conviction that may lead to a life prison for life.

Miss Fromme, who was shot out from the courtroom for the verdict as she why much of her trial, was found guilty late Wednesday night by a jury of eight women and four men which deliberated more than 19 hours. Miss Fromme's lawyer said he will appeal the conviction.

Their verdict gave the 27-year-old Miss Fromme in the first person ever convicted of attempting to assassinate a U.S. president. She was prosecuted under a special law enacted after the 1963 assassination of President John Kennedy.

Miss Fromme spoke to U.S. District Judge Thomas MacBride before and after the verdict, but did not controvt her pr vent.

"You understand why I won't be here," she told the judge, apparently referring to her repeated refusal to attend her trial unless Manson was present.

Witnesses at her three-week trial recalled how Miss Fromme calmly stepped from a crowd and pointed the .45-caliber automatic pistol at Ford near the California capitol Sept. 5. She was wrestled to the ground by Secret Service agents who quoted her as shouting: "I didn't go off."

But the trial's star witness, President Ford whose testimony was recorded on videotape in Washington at the request of the defense, had a funny memory of the incident and couldn't say for certain whether he heard the gun-trigger click as Miss Fromme took aim.

The weapon was found to contain two live bullets in its clip but none in the firing chamber.

Jurors, who were sequestered for 11 days, frequently reached agreement only after hearing testimony that Miss Fromme really intended to kill Ford or, as the defense contended, was merely seeking attention for her cause—a new trial for Manson.

After the jurors were discharged, the judge told Miss Fromme back to the court and set sentencing for Dec. 17. Miss Fromme spoke out briefly, commanding a witness and a legal recorder for all her conversations with probation officers.

Dairy Princess Delays Career

BY HARRY MULHAL
Staff Reporter

When the Quinte district's Debbie Rogers realized she had been chosen Ontario Dairy Princess she admits to an ambivalent reaction.

She was ready for her last high school year when she won the title at the Provincial Exhibition from 39 other contestants.

But the honor means a year away from studies, travelling the province on behalf of the dairy industry.

"At first I was quite bewildered. I knew my future was going to be delayed a year," said the 18-year-old from an Odessa farm in Lennox and Addington County.

Then she realized the honor was linked neatly in with her future career plans. She intends being a veterinarian.

Debbie said she always wanted to be a dairy princess for her county. She won the Lennox and Addington title in two successive years—but has had to surrender it this year because of her Ontario role.

Although she claims she's "still a novice" in her assignment, people already are asking if she doesn't get bored.

"That's not possible," said Debbie. No matter how similar occasions might be, the people she meets are different, with different opinions and ideas.

Postal Talks Shrouded By Secret Manoeuvres

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Behind-the-scenes manoeuvring continued Wednesday to get the two sides in the nation's longest-ever postal strike back to the bargaining table and sources indicate a meeting will take place today.

Contract talks between the post office and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) broke off Nov. 6.

Sources inside the post office and union were in touch by telephone Wednesday night and agreed to meet today, but no time was set.

Postmaster - General Bryce Mackasey has told reporters outside the Commons that "we're expecting something to happen within the next few hours.

He said there had been direct communication between the two sides but did not wish to jeopardize the current situation by commenting further.

The union was equally tight-lipped. "We'll just have to wait and see what transpires," Paul Mitchell, a union spokesman, said late Wednesday.

Neither CUPW president Joe Davidson, nor Jean-Claude Parrot, vice-president and chief negotiator, was available for comment.

The major issue still outstanding is wages although Mr. Mackasey reaffirmed outside the Commons that the government offer of a $1.75-an-hour increase over 30 months and a 35-hour week would not be changed.

The union wants $2.75 more an hour over 27 months and a 30-hour week.

Again rejecting a legislated settlement, Mr. Mackasey said the government might consider ordering a secret ballot by the 22,000 postal workers on the government's latest wage offer.

The CUPW national executive has been steadfastly refused to put government wage offer to a vote.

Workers continued to trickle across picket lines in the last few weeks and although close to 90 per cent of the 2,000 union members remain off the job, the post office reported that about 2,500 workers were sorting mail Wednesday. This included about 1,000 in the Toronto area.

Police Break Protest For Political Inmates

MADRID (Reuter) — Riot police backed by water cannon broke up a demonstration of about 2,000 people shouting for amnesty for political prisoners outside Madrid's main prison today.

The people had gathered in front of Carabanchel jail in the city's eastern outskirts to protest the partial amnesty announced Wednesday by the government of King Juan Carlos.

After the crowd had grown in size throughout the morning to the 2,000 figure, a truck equipped with water cannon suddenly appeared on the scene and sprayed the assembled people.

They broke into groups of 200 to 300 and ran through nearby streets, giving the clenched fist Communist salute and shouting "Amnesty, amnesty," and "Unity, unity."

It was not known whether there were any injuries or arrests.

The demonstrators, many of them women and youths in their 20s, gathered outside Carabanchel where several hundred political prisoners are held to protest against the limited scope of the King's amnesty.

The amnesty measure excludes prisoners held for terrorism—itself a vaguely defined term under an anti-terrorist law decreed by Francisco Franco last August—or those held for being Communists, anarchists or separatists.

Ford Changes Mind

$2.3 Billion Offered To Save New York

NEW YORK (AP) — President Ford has promised billions in federal loans for New York City. City residents face higher taxes. As a result, the threat of city default has been put off until 1976.

That's a big change from the crisis atmosphere of the last six months when default was around the corner every two weeks or so.

Immediately following Ford's news conference Wednesday night, Mayor Abraham Beame said the help came only at the cost of much hardship to the city's eight million residents and he warned that the city's problems aren't over. He said the president's promise of federal loans of up to $2.3 billion in the current fiscal year and a like amount in each of the next two years only "marks a crucial turning point."

Ford's announcement marked a change from his repeated stand that the city would have to save itself from bankruptcy without federal aid.

In explaining his decision to offer help, Ford said "New York has balled itself out" and the federal loans will not cost taxpayers outside New York a cent. He said that steps taken by the city and the New York state legislature in the last several days have erased a deficit that amounted to $2.85 billion for the fiscal year ending June, 1976.

However, there is no state or city plan to eliminate the deficit that quickly.

Ford apparently was referring to an agreement reached with New York City banks and city labor unions under which the city will delay paying off about $1.6 billion in debts owed to them. The union also agreed this week to invest $2.5 billion in new securities to aid the city, bringing total city union and bank commitments to about $4.1 billion.

But the complex package of aid arrived at in New York was aimed at curing the city's financial ills over many years, and no one involved said it would completely erase the budget deficit by next June.

The city comptroller projected a $600-million deficit for the current fiscal year, but more conservative accounting done by some fiscal experts at suggest an actual deficit of more than $2 billion.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey echoed Beame's statement that the federal aid package "does not mark the end of our difficulties."

"Painful burdens remain ahead of us all," included in those burdens are steps needed to balance the state's budget.

Ford's proposals still must get approval from both houses of congress before a threatened city default on Dec. 15. That city deadline is more than two weeks to work after it returns Monday from the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.

Ford's offer of federal loans came only after the New York state legislature earlier this week imposed a $500-million package of new taxes on the city's residents.

The next increase for city residents will go up an average 36 per cent. Low-rate cigarettes will go up four-cents-a-pack tax advantage over high-tar brands. Hitherto, permanent wave and massages will be taxed for the first time.

Thus, a family of four in the city earning an adjusted gross income of $10,000 will see their city income tax go up $9.20 to $93 a year. A similar family with an annual income of $20,000 will have their income-tax burden increased by $22.20 to LONDON (Reuter) — Thirty thousand British physicians were given the go-ahead Wednesday to slow down hospital services in an action unprecedented in the 27-year-old history of the National Health Service.

Guidelines Will Apply To Marketing Boards

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald says the anti-inflation program made progress at agreement by the provinces Wednesday to ensure that increased food prices set by marketing boards are justified by higher production costs.

However, the marketing boards would still be under the program itself, and provincial finance ministers assembled they still don't know enough about how the selective wage and price controls will be applied.

"There are still a lot of things in limbo," said Walter Smishek of Saskatchewan after the one-day conference, the second in five weeks.

The ministers met Oct. 23-24 and decided the anti-inflation program had been discussed by officials since then. Mr. Smishek said he had expected Ottawa to shower some of this province's reservations Wednesday.

"But I regret to say that the federal minister still could not provide many of the answers we were looking for," he said.

Mr. Macdonald maintained the "only area of significant doubt" is whether the provinces will allow the federal program to control their activities in their public service employees or related areas such as schooling.

Three other nine provinces are delaying this decision until the federal cabinet issues regulations stating how the program is to be applied.

Mr. Macdonald said he had hoped the provinces would indicate more definitely which method they will chose, but added delays was valid. Regulations would be issued as soon as the special legislation is passed. He hopes within a week. The bill is currently before the Commons.

Mr. Macdonald said "some considerable progress" also was made on controls for professional fees, also within provincial jurisdiction.

The program exempts food prices at the farm level.

McLauchlan to Head Quinte NDP Again

BY COLIN BEUCK
Staff Reporter

Quinte New Democrats maintained their early bird campaign approach Wednesday night by being the first party to pick a candidate for the next provincial election.

Carson McLauchlan, employed by Canadian Industries Limited, won the party nod for the second consecutive time. He carried the NDP colors in the last election in which Conservative Robin Jeffrey lost to Liberal Hugh O'Neil.

Mr. McLauchlan's candidacy for the last election also came nearly a year and a half before either of the other parties had made their choices.

But even the NDP boss proved a success at pulsation both during election night and at last night's nominating convention.

Several times throughout the evening pointed to the NDP security moves when the doors of the riding vote a vote in itself which also established the local riding association to guarantee payment of election costs.

Because an election in Ontario could be as far away as four years, Wednesday's choice is more than academic could be the first to be held in the province, said riding president Ellis Williams.

"We wanted a person now whom we could build publicity around and who would keep abreast of government business between elections," said riding president Rick Williams, in explaining the early choice.

In his acceptance speech, Mr. McLauchlan pointed to the weakness of the member for Quinte riding, Mr. O'Neil.

"As president of a real estate firm, how can Mr. O'Neil attack home builders, developers and land - speculators," asked Mr. McLauchlan. "He will not and cannot," he added.

Mr. McLauchlan, who has been travelling to Toronto one day each week to attend house proceedings, re-stated some of the issues he promised he'd call for a review of taxation that would encourage more province's total income.

On hinterland, Mr. McLauchlan said the government had the guts to control the money grabbing of the corporations we'd have public auto insurance by now."

Mr. McLauchlan was not on hand in his bid for the right to be the Quinte candidate in the next election after being nominated by fellow CN worker and member of the Quinte District Labor Council Jack Thomas.

The meeting in the Belleville Elvania Centre was attended by 38 members of the NDP party.

Police Say Intersection Blameless In Rash of Traffic Accidents

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville say Loyalist College students have voiced concern about what they consider a dangerous traffic hazard at the intersection of Wallbridge Road and County Rd. 32 (West Moira St. extension) west of the city.

However, Traffic Sgt. Duke Parry says the situation is no more unique than any of the hazardous traffic locations in the Belleville detachment jurisdiction.

Wallbridge Rd. is split at the intersection. Although the county road runs straight through, motor vehicles travelling along Wallbridge Rd. must take the "S" path at the intersection when trying to drive along the county road for several feet.

The only stop signs are on Wallbridge Rd. south of the county road and on the county road west of Wallbridge Rd.

The intersection claimed its 19th traffic accident since July 1st on Wednesday — a rear-end two-truck collision which resulted in $300 total damage and a charge laid under the Highway Traffic Act.

One truck was westbound on the county road while the other was southbound on Wallbridge Rd. — a route which is considered a priority route for traffic in and out of Belleville, says Sgt. Parry.

However, there are no indications that the physical setup of the intersection is a problem, he explained in an interview Wednesday. "I don't think it's a problem," he said.

Sgt. Parry pointed out there is no pattern involving the accidents — five each occurred in the morning, afternoon and all night.

Due to Loyalist College just south of the intersection and an increasing residential population in the area, the traffic volume has increased and as a natural consequence, so have the number of accidents and the amount of police enforcement be stabolished.

Sgt. Parry commented that the issue, and in many situations, is drivers not exercising proper caution. "People are the problem, not the highway," he remarked.

MORE

There might be some relief of the situation at the intersection in the near future. A Hastings County spokesman said Wednesday an overpass has been proposed over the Canadian National Railway line which runs along the county road — east across Wallbridge Rd.

Study Continues In 1976

Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings-Peterborough, says he has been advised by natural resources minister Leo Bernier that the Algonquin Park feasibility study will continue in 1976.

As a result the minister has given "favorable consideration for the continuance of use" of 5½- horsepower motors, boats and two-wheeled cars in the park for 1976.

WHO HAS HEARD FROM THE GOOD TOOTH FAIRY?

What is the going "rate" these days for the "good tooth fairy" to leave under the pillow for a baby tooth? Nobody seems to have a definite answer to this question. We have heard as high as a dollar for a first tooth and down to as low as a nickel for a third or fourth.

While we are not sure of the worth of that old tooth we do know that the best diamond tooth is priceless and should be treated accordingly. It has to last an ever-increasing lifetime.

ARC Move Next Month Means Expanded Service

TRENTON — ARC Industries will be moving to a new building that will allow doubling employment capacity and provide work for 70 handicapped area residents, J. E. Leveridge, president of the Trenton-Brighton District Association for the Mentally Retarded, sponsor of the group, said Wednesday.

Mr. Leveridge also announced the group has applied for additional licensing from the ministry of community and social services which will enable the association to provide rehabilitation facilities for physically and emotionally handicapped people as well as continuing to work with the mentally handicapped.

Negotiations have been proceeding with Lardenskee Enterprises Ltd. for more than a month to secure the new location on Canal St., in the premises formerly occupied by Erie Technological Products.

"It was a question of space and we needed a larger building to alleviate the overcrowding problem we have been experiencing", said Mr. Leveridge.

ARC Industries has been located in its current Cosgrave Street building, which was presented to the association by the Trenton Kiwanis club and funded by the community, since 1966. The industry currently employs 37 handicapped people providing services for local Trenton business, such as sticking labels on boxes and other hand work.

The building will be leased for five years with an option to buy during the lease, said Mr. Leveridge.

"We hope to be completely moved into the new area by the second week in December and then we will be able to offer the Guelph St. building for rent, said Mr. Leveridge.

"The decision to move into a new building was based on several reasons, he said.

"We wanted to expand our services to the handicapped and the new site will allow us to handle any additional business from local sources."

"Currently we have been working so efficiently, thanks to the efforts of the workers and the staff under the direction of Jim Graves, that we will only need half of the funding provided by the ministry," said Mr. Leveridge.

Santa's Right Arm

Needy Alerted About Possible Christmas Hamper Shortage

PICTON — The Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society this year again will play Santa Claus to needy families in the community but because of inflation St. Nick's list may be shortened.

Pat McClennon, a CAS worker who has been actively involved in preparing Christmas baskets for the past four years, said Wednesday that in 1974 a total of 35 hampers was distributed. This year because of the rising cost of food, clothing and toys fewer families will receive holiday assistance.

In an effort to avoid disappointing families the CAS has sent letters alerting them to the possibility that there may not be the usual hamper this year.

Mrs. McClennon explained that the CAS must rely entirely on donations from the public for its Christmas program as there is no money in the budget to cover this expenditure.

She noted that in 1974 approximately $1,500 was spent by the CAS for gift hampers. A total of about $1,000 was received in donations and the remaining $500 taken from a special account containing funds bequeathed the CAS work.

"At least $1,500 is needed this year", said Mrs. McClennon.

She observed that donations of clothing, toys and money are beginning to arrive but it is usually mid-December before contributions reach their peak.

Because gifts must be purchased and wrapped long before this date CAS workers must shop early and wait for donations to arrive to cover the cost of the presents.

Mrs. McClennon said that lists of families who have formerly received the gift hampers have been closely reviewed as it is felt it will be necessary to cut back this Christmas because of inflation.

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas this week at the Picton office of the Prince Edward Children's Aid Society where gift hampers are being packed for holiday distribution. Mrs. Pat McClennon, a CAS worker, is assisting co-workers Heather Smith and Fred Pixley in shopping and wrapping gifts and while they scouted Santa's workshop Wednesday she began to pack St. Nick's bags.

Driver Found Injured

PICTON — A Cherry Valley man has been charged with careless driving following a single-car collision early today on the Glenora Rd. immediately east of the town limits.

Charged is Kevin Peters, 17, driver of a car owned by Nancy Monroe, of RR 4 Picton.

A police spokesman said Peters was eastbound when his car left the road, crossed a lawn, and struck a tree. Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $1,500.

The driver, who was found unconscious at the scene was taken to Prince Edward Memorial Hospital.

The collision occurred shortly before 1:30 a.m.

Tanzanian Leader Predicts Frelimo-style Guerrilla Warfare in Rhodesia

By JOHN D. HARRISON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The important state visit of Tanzania's president, Dr. Julius Nyerere, by British standards, seemed by other international events, chiefly the death and funeral of Spain's dictator, Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

As the personal guest of Queen Elizabeth and staying in Buckingham Palace, the British gave him much attention, but the visitor president's visit.

Did they hope he would make a major scientific something that only armed conflict could be used to solve the Rhodesian problem?

Possibly they did. And if so, they were right. British foreign office suspected that such a solution might be made easier by Dr. Nyerere's offer during his British visit, or at least to Tanzania.

For those who know little of the long politics of blacks and whites in East Africa, the Tanzanian's previous activities in harboring liberation movements, Dr. Nyerere appeared as though he was casting a long spell as a leader of violence and peace.

He postulated the only solution for Rhodesia would now be guerrilla warfare of blacks against whites, the internal war in white-ruled and dominated Rhodesia conservatively taking place with aid from outside that finest state.

"This development is nothing new," Dr. Nyerere told reporters prior to the end of Portuguese colonial rule in Mozambique, saying his country had harbored the Frelimo liberation movement of Mozambique.

This was the major black liberation movement fighting the Portuguese and which today is the ruling government of what is a neo-Marxist black republic of Mozambique.

Indeed the internal differences of Frelimo in its headquarters in Dar-es-Salaam, the Tanzanian capital, resulted a few years ago in the assassination of Frelimo's first leader, a distinguished Portuguese-educated Mozambiquy black intellectual who would have given the new government greater stature.

Tanzania was allegedly party to the making of order which created movies for the Frelimo guerrillas, but the impression he was given by the international world they had joined "inside their so-called "liberation territories" in the old Portuguese colony.

But a German magazine in possession of still-photos from such a movie, noticed: Two

Scouts Need Leaders

"It needs a special kind of man. Handling boys that age can be difficult — some men are hesitant about working with teenagers."

That's the word from Betty Fort, assistant district co-ordinator for Belleville cubs and scouts who says the organization is having a difficult time finding and keeping leaders for downtown scout troops.

It's good though to hear that many troops have been revitalized around the city. How then, to attract men willing to take on that often boisterous age group of 11 to 14?

There has been mention lately of a trend toward peer group counselling in the schools — boys and girls helping out others in their own age group. Perhaps what the scouts need, in addition to adults willing to take on the job, are boys of leadership material not much older than themselves.

Whoever takes up the challenge it is surely one that can be commended. The Scouts — and the Girl Guides — have remained intact as youth organizations in the face of changing and difficult times. They are as much needed today — probably more so — than ever.

Cultural Initiative

The Quinte Arts Council is taking an imaginative step in seeking to bring a male singer to reside in Belleville and perform around the community and assist church choirs and choral societies.

Too often the arts are obligated to take a back seat in the daily pursuit of job and the economic functioning of the country. Quietly and effectively, though, the Quinte Arts Council for one works to create a cultural balance.

At the same time it may be asked if it is necessary to go outside Belleville for such a professional. There are at least two that come to mind and they might be able to fulfill such a task.

In any event the idea is a good one. Maybe it will lead to other resident artists, who could reside here, or in this case, for a few months, and help to enrich the artistic awareness of citizens here.

U.K. Cars Compete

One of the rarest of species these days — as was shown nearly by cartoonist Donato in recent days — is a new car priced under $3,000. And then only in the smallest models.

A look at British imports is interesting in this context. A pioneer in cars in the miniature category while still offering a fair amount of room, the British have a larger model now as well which is in the same league as the latest compacts from Japan and Germany.

The ads term the vehicle "surprising," with an eye to extras it claims cost more on the scale — and in fact a Toronto dealer had a demonstrator model advertised the other day at under $3,000.

This from a country whose cars have seen better days as imports but which, with more of them reappearing on Canadian highways, might be picking up competitive steam again. And at a time too when British cars, as was reported by Canadian Press recently, are emerging as more efficient packages as energy-conservation spurs improvements.

This could be all to the good for a country whose August deficit totalled $370 million (well down though from the record $600 million of a year ago) and which finds itself being alternately balled out and snubbed by Arab governments — such as Kuwait (by gross national product of $10,000 per capita, the world's richest country) which no longer regards sterling as a reserve currency.

Motorists today want staying power of course. Gas is costing more and inflation is making it difficult to buy a new model at regular intervals. Whatever the place of origin then, the car which gives the moatest at the most economic price is the one the discriminating buyer is seeking these days.

W - couldn't decide whether to laugh, applaud, or grumble. The brief news item said Linda Salcedo of San Francisco had won the right to karate chop bricks as a part of the talent presentation" in the California Teen Pageant. Was this to be treated as a society's modern jokes, a breakthrough for women's rights, or a reminder that such remnants of racism as "beauty contests" still exist in the United States?

Then other things in day's mail caught our eye: a feature story on Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso's husband (referred to as "Dr." and never the First Man") an advertisement that featured a female TV journalist, and another with a woman pilot. Then was a small story headlined with the fact that the new head of the Massachusetts Consumer Council is a woman. There, a promotional bit for a new television show about a female lawyer. We say stories about a resurgence of interest in women's colleges, and the championship women's basketball team from Delta State College in Mississippi. Then caught ourselves remembering to call the protectors of public safety "police men and women."

All of which may add up to less substance than attempts at surface image-changing." But it seems to us that Bella by Bitts we are getting closer to a day that will see the goals of the Equal Rights Amendment realized. When governors, pilots, lawyers, and department heads won't be newsworthy just because they're women. When beauty contest will have gone the way of the dodo. When Linda Salcedo can destroy the masonry surrounded without making news.

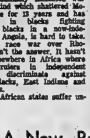
A New, Revitalized, Davis Vital to PC Recovery

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service



In the early stages of this session dedicated Tories sitting in the Queen's Park galleries needed anti-depressant pills.

Lord, what a change from a year before.

Then a boisterous, confident and somewhat arrogant corps of 78 members.

Now a group of only 51, under a cliff of 74 NDPers and Liberals. A group politically pallid and unsure. Even their figure slumped at its desk, cheering her on, President Bill Davis showed little spark to encourage them.

Then came Thursday November 6.

The government benches came alive for the first time.

The opposition had been taunting the administration that it was going to lose its coveted AAA financial rating.

That normally top AAA rating had been confirmed. At the opening of the House premier ministers made announcement. Standing behind him Bladen Rice gave details of his rent control legislation. And Treasurer Darcy McKeough taunted the new rating back at the opposition.

Government members pounded their desks. There was cheer in their faces. Now they had something to come to play.

Whither now the Ontario Conservative Party?

An obvious first question is whether Bill Davis' vitality of November 6 can be maintained.

If the party is to regroup and rebuild obviously it must. Tattered as it first showed itself in the house it would have made only the political rag bag — and crawling at that.

But questions that the party is able to maintain vitality . . . what else has to be done?

Plenty.

There is a widespread feeling among inside party observers that their failure was that their vote didn't get out.

This was true in certain ridings, and a good number of them.

But more important was that there was a great switch in support.

The PCs were down 270,000 votes over their 1971 total and the Liberals down 70,000 to up 380,000 (with the Liberals getting 220,000 of these).

Obviously there was a general switch.

The first Conservative priority must be to get these votes back. And this is a matter of image.

Of image and organization. Organization is the simplest being tackled. Reform of the party machine is already underway.

Mauritius Gets $1,250,000 from Ottawa While Home Needs Are Neglected

By RICHARD JACKSON
Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — Immediately below the escarpment of Parliament Hill there is a sewer outfall staining the Ottawa River.

You can imagine what it does for swimming and canoeing and how it perfumes the air for the tourists on the cruise boats.

Similar outfalls pollute the river upstream from the Capital from towns and villages along both the Quebec and Ontario shores.

At the confluence of the Ottawa and St.Lawrence Rivers, Canada's biggest city, Montreal, pumps its sewage, untreated, into the water.

The situation is not unique to the Ottawa River.

It occurs in streams in all provinces.

There isn't the money to provide treatment facilities, municipal officials who obtain at least some of their budget from provincial governments which in turn secure it from the federal administration through the complex of transfer payments.

But there is money to spare, $630,000 of it, for "improvement of the water supply system" in faraway Mauritius.

It is part of just another foreign aid handout — a tiny fraction of the federal government's giveaway program currently running at an annual $750 million — and it wouldn't be worth a thought if it didn't happen to come from one another.

The $630,000, says the Canadian International Development Agency, the foreign share-the-wealth arm of External Affairs, is to provide Mauritius "with the basic system to meet needs for safe water supplies."

Since, goes on the Agency, "the government of Mauritius has given highest priority to improving the water system," it is only the present thing for Canadians to shell out the $630,000.

The second handout of another $400,000, reveals the Agency's twin press release, is to "assist in the creation of an institute of bilingualism . . . to improve communications in French and English within the Mauritius government."

That makes a total, in one day, of $1,250,000 for far-off Mauritius.

How far away?

The other side of the world, as the Agency locates it in the tandem press release, "in the Indian Ocean, 1,000 miles east of Tanzania."

That places it "somewhere east of Rose," where in Rudyard Kipling's great days and more Great Britain began lowering the Union Jack around the world. It was one of the outposts of Empire on which the sun never used to set.

But it isn't for solid long syne that Canadians are gift-wrapping bilingualism and pure water with $1,230,000 for some $23,000 Mauritians they don't know, will probably never meet and who vote against them in the United Nations.

Why, then, this double give-away?

Well, for one thing — it may be only coincidence — former Transport Minister Jean Marchand and public affairs man Prime Minister Trudeau since their pre-federal political days labor days in Quebec, happened to be out in Port-Louis in Mauritius.

His is heading the Canadian delegation to the Conference of L'Agence de Cooperation Culturelle et Technique which is holding its annual general assembly in the Mauritian capital.

No self-respecting member of the Canadian government could represent the Trudeau Imperium in any Third World country without arriving bearing gifts.

It is part of the federal magic, part of the federal belief in charity to Canadian taxpayers is fast approaching $1 billion in these days when restraint is supposed to be in high fashion.

This posturing as a latter-day Great Western Raj on giveaway junkets to Third World banana republics that have declared the independence they never can afford from colonial empires has been causing a lot of talk in and around Ottawa.

So much talk, in fact, that it's a government front-bencher necessary to formally deny — in documents tabled in the Commons — that Paul Gerin-Lajoie, president of the Canadian International Development Agency, did not pose on a float at the head of many jollies to faraway places to pass out cookies in the name of the ever-generous Canadian taxpayer.

MPPs Seek 10 Per Cent Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Ontario legislature are justified in asking for a substantial salary increase of 10 per cent, Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) said Wednesday.

His told members of the select committee studying the fourth and fifth reports of the royal commission on the operation of the legislature that MPPs salaries of MPPs have fallen 23 per cent behind the cost of living since their last increase in October, 1972.

MPPs now receive a base pay of $25,000 plus $7,500 in expenses for a total of $32,500.

An increase now should be limited to 10 per cent or $3,250 in order to keep within the federal wage and price controls, Mr. Cassidy added.

Premier William Davis announced during the Sept. 18 election campaign, the salaries of MPPs will be frozen for two years, making the next increase due in October, 1976.

Mr. Cassidy said this means MPPs will need an increase of 20 per cent at that time when most people will have received be about six per cent because of the federal controls.

That is the percentage increase needed to keep MPPs at the same salary level as the late 1960s, he said.

The royal commission was to recommend to the legislature a measured schedule of increases that could be increased in an orderly manner.

Instead, the commission said it is clear that the cost of living has increased a great deal since the last increase but made no recommendation on what increase should be made.

Eli Martel (NDP—Sudbury East) said raised the matter before the committee.

He said MPP's are entitled to a raise and it's time they spoke out honestly and clearly on the issue.

Mr. Martel said the committee should recommend to the legislature that MPPs be covered by a medical plan and receive extra cash for mileage, the same as civil servants. MPP now receive 15 cents a mile.

Murray Gaunt (L—Huron-Bruce) said that although he agrees MPPs should receive medical coverage and additional salary, it is not realistic to expect a salary increase until after the next election.

He said the committee should not recommend any increase beyond 10 per cent at this time because of the federal controls.

Donald Morrow (PC—Ottawa West), committee chairman, said he is not in the same financial bind as some of the younger members, particularly those with families.

Mr. Morrow said he realizes there are those who need the increase "as of yesterday."

K. Rae Meek (PC—Simcoe) said the royal commission should have settled the issue.

Mr. Cassidy said the issues raised at the meeting will be discussed at the committee's meeting Tuesday. He said he wants the committee to make a recommendation on these matters so they can be discussed by the full legislature.

Scotland, Wales Offered Partial Rule by Britain

LONDON (AP) — The British government today offered Scotland and Wales partial self-rule but said it will not permit the economic and political unity of Britain to be undermined by awarding the huge North Sea oil deposits to Scotland.

In what it said would be "the most fundamental constitutional change in Britain for centuries," the government proposed in a white paper that home rule be given to new assemblies which 5.3 million Scots and 2.7 million Welsh would elect by about 1979.

But it said the huge oil deposits in the North Sea belong not just to Scots but to all Britons. "Let there be no misunderstanding: such a proposal—for oil revenues to be controlled by those parts of the Kingdom off whose shores the oil is found—would mean the break-up of the United Kingdom," the government said.

Scottish nationalists picked up nearly a million votes, and 11 out of Scotland's 71 electoral districts in last year's elections to the British Parliament, on the slogan, "It's Scotland's oil."

The proposed constitutional changes would be the most far-reaching since England and Scotland joined in 1707.

The government acknowledged the failure of British democracy "does not mean it is perfect" and said many state functions could be exercised nearer to the people.

Under the new government proposals:

—The Scots would get a law-making assembly with a cabinet-type executive under a chief executive or premier.

—The Welsh would get a purely executive assembly with powers only to administer laws, not to make them.

—Both would control such functions of local government as health, social services, schools, housing, roads and environment but would leave foreign affairs, defence, European Community business, national law and order, economic and money policies to the national government.

—Parliament each year would vote block grants to each assembly to pay for the services they control. On the basis of current budgets Scotland would get more than $4 billion a year, Wales nearly $1 billion. Each assembly could raise new revenues through specified surcharges.

—Assemblymen would be elected on Britain's regular voting system and not on the basis of proportional representation.

MPs Warn About Shipping Reliance

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada should not place too much reliance on foreign shipping in its import trade, opposition MPs warned Wednesday.

The warning came as MPs debated the merits of the government's proposed new maritime code. Legislation for the code, which eventually will replace the Canada Shipping Act, was given approval in principle and referred to the Commons transport committee.

The proposed code covers a range of issues, including a section enabling Canada to arrest foreign ships for offences committed by inter vessels. Penalties under the law would provide for fines up to $5,000 and seizure of the ship and its cargo.

But the bill makes no provision for creation of a native merchant fleet, a move backed by all opposition parties in the Commons. This omission provided most of the fuel for debate.

Lloyd Crosse (PC—South Shore), a former shipowner, said the government should move to encourage Canadian investment in a merchant fleet by lowering interest rates paid by shipbuilders.

Mr. Crosse said a merchant fleet was necessary to strengthen the security of the country. The world political climate could threaten the reliance of Canadians on foreign fleets.

"We must act to ensure we will never be immobilized by instability in the international shipping industry," Mr. Crosse said.

Canada has only three merchant ships and domestic traders paid $1.5 billion last year to foreign vessel owners to transport goods, he said.

But a 14,000-ton dry-cargo carrier could be built for $16 million, he said. About 130 ships could have been built for the money national traders had to pay out.

Mr. Crosse said a fleet of 175 ships would provide work for 7,000 sailors.

Ontario's $1,500 Grant Now a Success: Meen

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's $1,500 grant to first-time home buyers has been immensely successful, Revenue Minister Arthur Meen said Wednesday.

Mr. Meen said in an interview after a cabinet meeting that the program was to encourage people to purchase homes.

Housing Minister John Rhodes was quoted in a published report as saying in Ottawa that the grants are a "gross error" and "utterly silly."

Mr. Rhodes, who was attending a federal-provincial conference of housing ministers, was quoted in the report as saying there should have been no income ceiling on those eligible to receive the grants.

Mr. Meen said he believes the program helped turn the economy around in terms of the housing market.

The published reports quote Mr. Rhodes as saying some people were purchasing homes for $135,000 and using the grant money for a quick trip to the Bahamas.

The revenue minister said there may have been some abuse of the program, but not a high percentage.

When the grant was announced in the April 7 budget, Mr. Meen said the government expected to receive 100,000 applications.

To date, it has received 70,000, he said.

The program expires this Dec. 31. Buyers eligible for the grant receive an initial $1,000 and additional grants of $250 in each of the next two years if they keep the house.

The original $55-million budget has been expanded to $70 million, Mr. Meen said.

He said he does not agree with Mr. Rhodes and plans to discuss the matter with the housing minister.

Mr. Meen said getting people out of apartments and into their own homes is not silly.

He said representatives of the housing ministry, the treasurer's office and his ministry will be meeting soon and a decision whether the program will be extended beyond Dec. 31 will be made next week.

Given Authority

In March, 1798, repeal of the Stamp Act in Britain was followed by the Declaratory Act claiming the king, by and with the consent of Parliament, had authority to make laws to bind colonies in all respects.

The difference between 'old' and 'elderly' is often merely a matter of income.

How much income do you expect to receive at retirement, over and above your Canada or Quebec Pension Plan benefits and perhaps your employer's pension benefits? Is it enough? If it isn't, the rest is up to you.

Let me show you how tax deferral can help build your retirement savings. Together we'll design a plan just for you.

Moving Towards Containment

Firemen watch a backfire flash into the air Tuesday morning as they try to contain the Tujunga brush fire which has charred 45,500 acres near Los Angeles. Firemen are setting backfires in an effort to stop the large brush fire. Firemen say the Tujunga fire is about 50 per cent surrounded by fire lines. (AP Photo)

Cannon Close to Real Life Private Detective

TORONTO (CP) — William J. Sansom said the television detective who comes closest to the work of a real private eye is Cannon, but minus the gun battle every 15 seconds.

And Mr. Sansom should know. A private detective for 17 years, he is president of Fleet Investigation and Protection Co.

He hides no fancy shoulder holster under his tweed coat, does not carry a gun concealed anywhere else, and he and his detectives politely move aside at the dramatic end of an investigation to let the police take over and process charges.

At $12 an hour, he and his detectives can be hired to investigate divorce case testimony, check insurance claims to detect fraud, find witnesses for lawyers in criminal cases or catch employees who are pilfering their company's goods.

Mr. Sansom said he finds the work interesting: "One minute you're dealing with the president of a corporation concerned about the shrinkage of his stock and the next minute you're getting information from the thief."

And there have been some interesting cases. Mr. Sansom said he remembers one where he was investigating theft from a manufacturing company and accidentally stumbled on a drug ring.

The Toronto police were notified and the men were charged.

Mr. Sansom said he likes to hire former policemen as private detectives because they are trained in investigation.

Anyone applying to his company must have an impeccable reputation and the company and the detective are separately licensed by the Ontario Provincial Police after background checks.

Like any police department, his detectives have their files on personalities and informant's. "We assist the police and they sometimes assist us," he said.

None of Mr. Sansom's detectives carries a weapon and he said he does not know of any other private eye who do, except when acting as a bodyguard or escorting a consignment of expensive merchandise.

Inflation Factors Now Recognized in Pensions

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto actuarial firm says recent changes in federal government regulations to permit future inflation to be recognized in the operation and funding of pension plans are long overdue.

"The only surprise is that this obvious need could be ignored for so long," said William M. Mercer Ltd. in a recent bulletin.

In those plans in which the formula for determining the final payout on retirement includes final year's earnings by the employee, companies now will be allowed to invest tax-deductible funds in the plan on the basis of projected increases in earnings due to inflation.

A spokesman for the department of revenue in Ottawa said previously companies were permitted to project the final year's salary—and hence the amount of tax-deductible money to be invested—only on the basis of productivity increases and promotions.

While the criteria for projecting final-year salary may now include inflation, the annual percentage increases in salary projected for inflation must be at least one percentage point below the expected rate of investment return on the pension plan.

Thus, if pension-plan investments are expected to return an annual seven per cent on the plan, then the annual salary increases projected for inflation would be limited to six per cent.

The changes also affect the small number of supplementary pensions which provide extra money to a retired employee to account for the increased cost of living since he retired.

When investing money in these supplementary plans in the past, the companies were restricted to doing so on the basis of increases in the consumer price index which already been recorded.

The changes will allow companies to invest money in these plans on the basis of projected increases in the index over any number of years. However, the rate of increases assumed must be at least two percentage points below the annual projected return for the plan.

William Mercer Ltd. says the changes will make it easier for employers to formulate indexed pension plans for their employees.

At present, except for federal government pension plans, few plans are indexed, that is, few plans allow pensioners' benefits to be increased according to a wage or price index.

Search for Lead, Zinc Deposits Will Remain in Yukon for Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — The search for high grade lead-zinc deposits likely will keep the level of exploration high in the Yukon Territory for the next few years, says a director of AEX Minerals Corp.

Aaro E. Aho said the stable, producer-controlled zinc market is more attractive now than the unstable copper market. High capital costs for mining ventures make high grade deposits essential for economic development, he said.

Several mining executives of companies working in the Yukon agree exploration is likely to continue in the territory at a pace of about $20 million annually for the next few years.

The Yukon also offers the lowest tax rate in Canada for mining companies—25 per cent compared with over 50 per cent in most provinces.

Mr. Aho said the tax rate, the government attitude and the method of taxation in places like British Columbia have enabled mining companies to look seriously at the Yukon.

Many geologists have become familiar with the geology of the Yukon recently and companies have committed themselves to long-term exploration in the area.

Dutch Van Tassell, exploration superintendent of United Keno Hill Mines Ltd., said the method of exploration in the Yukon has changed.

In the past decade mining companies have looked for obvious showings in outcrops, he said. When a company found a potential deposit, it was staked and, after the first good drill hole was reported, a stake rush started.

Numerous companies would take claims near the find and use them to persuade stock, he said.

Mr. Van Tassell said more attention now is being paid to the subtle geological clues that often indicate a major ore body where no surface showings are available.

Judd Buchanan, federal minister of Indian and northern affairs, said the introduction of the federal Yukon Mining Bill this year will result in slight increases in Yukon mining taxes, but the overall tax situation will not change.

He also said the government would consider equity participation in the building of a smelter in the territory.

J. H. Salter, executive vice-president operations for Cominco Ltd., said the federal government could kill exploration in the Yukon by insisting on a smelter project as a condition on profits.

Another problem with further mine development is the possible lack of electrical power.

Mr. Van Tassell said there are three mineral deposits in the Yukon that could be developed into mines, but if they all came on stream within the next few years, there would not be enough electrical power to run them.

The Yukon has large electrical power potential, but there are environmental problems in developing it. Indian land claims have to be settled before any electrical development can take place.

Teachers Will Alter Contract Demands

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiating teachers have indicated they will alter their contract demands if the school board will retreat in the bargaining talks by Friday evening.

The offer, along with one to withdraw a complaint that the board has bargained in bad faith, was made Wednesday by John Volpe, chief negotiator for the teachers.

The strike affects 100,000 students in 125 schools in the Toronto area.

OFA Calls for Acceptance Of Federal Economic Controls

HAMILTON (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Agriculture adopted a resolution Wednesday calling for acceptance of the federal government's wage and price control guidelines by all individuals and groups, including commodity marketing boards.

The resolution, voted on during the final session of the convention passed a series of other resolutions, including one condemning strikes as disruptive to the food industry and calling for curbs on the powers of both cooperatives and labor unions.

It was the second anti-strike resolution adopted by the delegates during the meetings.

Another resolution called for changes in the contracts expert representatives be made to province to change the terms of reference of the power planning. The commission, was set up under chairman Arthur Porter to study Ontario Hydro's long-range plans for power from 1983 to 1993.

A convention resolution said the commission should be empowered to look at power planning from 1978 on.

Key motions during the three-day meetings dealt with land use, federal dairy subsidies and the anti-inflation controls.

Convention delegates 4lisagreed with the federal government's recent orders of the lowering of subsidies on industrial milk production and plans to allow more imports of foreign dairy products, a move strongly opposed by the OFA.

Don't Dig Metric

RACINE, Wis. (AP) — The metric system apparently rates low with farmers, if one is to judge from a recent poll conducted by Wisconsin Agriculturist, a farm magazine. Farmers were asked: "Since most countries of the world now use the metric system, it has been suggested that we adopt it." Only 17 per cent said it should be adopted.

Welcome to the Panasonic age

Every member of the Panasonic gang has special features.

Like the innovative Quintrix picture tube. You'll find it on such models as CT-324C, CT-914CA, and CT-974C with remote control, shown here. Where conventional picture tubes have only two lenses, Quintrix has a third. An extra prelocus lens for sharper, brighter viewing. And Quintrix delivers better contrast than we've ever had in a color picture tube before.

Another Panasonic feature is Quatrecolor. Which means you get a modular chassis for easy servicing, if ever needed. Q-Lock for one-touch color tuning. 100% solid state as in every Panasonic TV. And an Ultra Pana-Matrix picture tube in our Quatrecolor consoles such as PC-2645 and PC-2643, shown here.

Our 8" screen model? The CT-772C delivers pure, rich color. Features include Panabrite which adjusts color and contrast automatically when you change the brightness. Panalock automatic fine tuning, and 100% solid state...all in a lightweight compact portable.

Tired of Losing? Then Fight Dirty

Fed up with losing arguments?

Then fight dirty.

It's kidding it works. I've been observing some of the tactics used by people who always win. And it seems to me that the more understanded and sneaky their arguments, the more likelihood there is that they'll come out victorious, whether they're right or wrong.

It's obvious, to any of us who have been losing debates for years, that using fair, logical reason don't get you very far. People who can rattle your thinking and make you feel foolish are going to easily disarm you. And they're the ones who end up on top.

Clearly, there's only one thing to do: Fight fire with fire, fight dirty, and get the last word no matter what.

Here are a few sure-fire techniques.

Never, never, under any circumstances, admit defeat. If your opponent seems to be scoring crucial points, say things like, "Well, everyone's entitled to his own opinion," and shrug. The shrug is very important. Learn to do it the way the Prime Minister does.

Assume you are right and never falter. If you can, give the impression that you enjoy mental exercise in much the same way you'd enjoy a game of tennis. As with sports, it's essential that you exude confidence. Stay cool, and don't raise your voice in anger.

Whenever you feel the least bit nervous, lean back in your chair and smirk. This annoys nerves anyone who is arguing with you that they'll be sure to falter, at least momentarily.

Refuse to take seriously any opinion that conflicts with yours. Laugh in disbelief — "You must be joking!" — and repeat what has been said in stunned amazement. In fact, repeating everything that's said has two benefits: it'll annoy and exasperate your opponent, thus making him more vulnerable to attack; and it gives you more time to think of really clever retorts.

* * *

Drag in irrelevant issues as you can. Introduce as many old beefings as you have in your pocket.

* * *

A very tricky technique, not to be attempted by beginners, is to compliment the other person with remarks like, "Very good. Well thought out. Good for you." This can give him a false sense of security, making it more easy for you to move in there with the final telling blow.

* * *

Much easier is the method that logicians refer to as to completely miss the point, which means that you discredit the other person not on the grounds of the argument, but by demeaning his character.

"You've always been a liar, how could this possibly be true?" is the tack you take.

If it looks like you might be losing, quickly appeal to other authorities as the source of your ideas. Whether it's true or not, state confidently that your views are also held by your mother, the mayor, and three of your mental friends. What is most important is that you name your sources. Be specific, and don't concern yourself with small issues like whether or not they're true.

* * *

In the same vein, throw in statistics. Learn to use phrases like 43 per cent of nine-tenths. This is dodgy till you get the hang of it, and realize that there's little chance that you're going to be checked up during the argument. It does happen, the person who was busy scrambling to verify your facts is already on the defensive, so you'll still be the superior position.

* * *

Be sarcastic. Be brutally sarcastic. Go for your opponent's weakest spots. If need be, when he reacts with cries of "Unfair!", smile and say sweetly, "My goodness, I was only kidding. Can't you take a joke?"

* * *

And, it's dirty all right, but you've won.

St. Andrew's Bazaar And Christmas Tea

Christmas decorations made the basement of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church a festive place for the annual bazaar and Tea held Wednesday afternoon. The tea room featured green and white table decorations as well as a Christmas tree, and a mistletoe and holly-covered arbor at the door.

Conveners of the event were Grace Jones, Ruth Cook and Effie Fraser. The Sunshine group, under the direction of Mary Hudner, was responsible for the decor.

One of the special items at the bazaar was a quilt made and donated by Mrs. C.J. Allison, that sold for $100.

Helen Van de Voort was convener of the apron table that featured a wide range of fancy aprons, including some especially made for wearing with pants.

Conveners of the other bazaar tables were: Elsie Hubner, home baking; Dorothy Durno, the Friendship group display and Agnes York, the Loyal group crafts. The CGIT and Sunday School were responsible for the White Elephant table, convened by Liz Helm, Jane Anderson and Margaret Freeborn.

Convener of the kitchen was Hilda Brooks, with one member from each group helping. Pouring tea were the presidents of each group, Marion Mac, Jean Lloyd, Elsie Hubner and Margaret Hill.

Receiving at the door were Guild President Mary Louise Eggar with Betty Sutherland, Margaret Fairbairn and Margaret McKay.

Replenishing in the tea room were Mary McKay, Betty Lee, Mary Weir, Louise Leeman, Mary Astell, Sharon Wright, Diane Galanger and Olive Gryce.

Make Mobile Move

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Fifty-three per cent of the respondents to a survey on mobile home life, said that they moved to their mobile homes from traditional, site-built single-family housing. The study, which surveyed the attitudes and buying preferences of 1,400 mobile home owners, found that two-thirds of the respondents were first-time owners.

Stained Glass Craftsmen Prosper in Tweed

By HAZEL HUGGAN

If you've been in Tweed since August, you've probably noticed the new blue storefront and wooden sign at Sunrise Stained Glass.

The shop, owned by David Tabbutt, specializes in custom made windows and lamps of stained glass. Here customers can bring photographs or sketches of objects they'd like, and have them made to their own specifications.

"The customer do custom work here is to start from a scale drawing of what the customer has in mind," says Mr. Tabbutt. "Bill Lindsay is the artist who does the part of the planning, and I do the glass work. Donald Scott is a glass craftsman who works with me part-time. We discuss each project with the customer, before making decisions about what colors and textures of glass to use."

Mr. Tabbutt has 70 different colors of glass to choose from, in eight different textures. He emphasizes that he uses only high quality glass imported from Belgium, stained right through rather than just colored on the surface.

"Although we use excellent material, our price on the finished work is up to 30 per cent lower than competitors in cities like Toronto," says Mr. Tabbutt. The reason for this, he says, is his low overhead, and the lower cost of living in Tweed.

Since moving from Peterborough a year ago, Mr. Tabbutt has become interested in drawing attention to Tweed as an artistic community. One way he does this is by hanging the work of local artists on the walls of his shop — both for his own appreciation, and so that customers can view and possibly buy, the paintings.

Mr. Tabbutt left a career as an aircraft engineer when he discovered that he could make a living — and satisfy his artistic needs — by creating objects from stained glass. Self-taught, he has been working with glass for nearly two years, and hopes to expand to share his knowledge and skill.

He'll be teaching a night course at Loyalist College in the 1976 winter term, in which students will make a leaded window and a stained glass lampshade under his instruction. The day and time for the course will be settled later in December, and will be advertised then by the college.

Currently, Mr. Tabbutt is working "day and night" to keep up with orders — both for original work and for the glass restoration that is part of his shop's service. Although he enjoys doing repairs — "you can really learn a lot from the way older windows and lamps were made," he says — his greater enthusiasm is for commissioned new work.

"The thing about working with stained glass," he says, "is that once you've mastered it, you can go in any direction. There's no limit to what you can do."

David Tabbutt, of Sunrise Stained Glass

Books By And About Women

FROM MINNIE WITH LOVE — "The Letters of a Victorian Lady, 1840-1881"

— Edited by John Vincent Ellis

For years ago, Minnie Loving Anna (edited by Louis Tivy) was published. Now a packet of letters to her mother in England written about her life in the Canadian pioneer, this book had great appeal. Mary Jane Tennant, who has long family connections with India, has edited letters from another English lady, Minnie Blanc, which were written over 100 years ago. They were discovered in a trunk by Minnie's granddaughter, followed and faded words, illegible with cross-writing.

This correspondence offers an unfamiliar picture of India in the mid-nineteenth century, the India of the unprivileged British family. Minnie married Captain Archie Woods, a junior officer in the East India Company. Immediately following their marriage, they set sail for his post in India. This long voyage, of 116 days, with the incessant heat, the bad food and other discomforts, is vividly described.

Later there are accounts of adjustment to life on the post, the growing disillusionment with her marriage, especially when she finds her husband heavily in debt. However, Minnie possessed the same kind of indomitable courage with which to face her problems as did "the loving Anna."

There are pleasures too, she says, for she tells in detail of the arrival of her piano, ackowledgements of parcels from her mother, or preparations for a party. The strange and hazardous journeys and the Mutiny with its terror are recorded and lend a heightened excitement for the reader, presenting a realistic view of the conditions in India at that time.

This book is available in the Corby Public Library as well as a novel by Jane Venaliff entitled Prelude to Mutiny.

People and Events

Women's Study Guild

Greenpeace, Mrs. Ted Gibson explained to the women's study guild at their meeting November 24, is a peaceful environmental group which has developed into a movement concerned with flashpoints of planetary survival on a global scale.

Greenpeace first protested American then French atmospheric tests; now it's immediate goal is to pressure the International whaling Commission to adopt a 10-year moratorium on whaling.

Huge factory ships, as big as aircraft carriers, accompanied by fast killing boats to run down and harpoon the whales with explosives, have resulted in two million whales being killed in the last half century and five out of eight species becoming almost extinct. This non-political group is endeavoring to allow the whale, the highest form of life in the oceans, to regenerate.

The Greenpeace cause is spreading to many countries, beginning to influence the course of events in the world.

Mary Hegewald, in contrast, told of the ecology of the desert, the wastes of sand that bursts into color when violent but sparse rains result in rapid growth. Adaptation had meant survival for the animals, plants and birds found in the desert, she said. Many adapt by means of estivation (or summer sleep) to conserve moisture.

The delicate balance of nature regulates itself if not interfered with, Mrs. Hegewald explained. Animals have an amazing ability to cope with heat and dehydration problems in the desert.

The meeting was at the home of Georgia Meckler, with Helen Layton, Susan Sherry and Josephine Tickell as hostesses.

Teens Find Abortions More Easily Available Than Contraceptives

MONTREAL (CP) — It is often easier for a teen-age girl to get an abortion than to obtain contraceptives, says Dr. Ian Kinch, obstetrician and gynecologist at Montreal General Hospital.

Many physicians are reluctant to provide unmarried, female with contraceptives without parental permission, even though the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and the Canadian Pediatric Society favor the practice, he said.

It is difficult for a physician to tell when a teen-ager is mature enough to have the respect given an adult, Dr. Kinch told a symposium on psychosocial and ethical aspects of pediatric practice.

He criticized some family doctors for not respecting confidentiality with teen-age patients.

Dr. Kinch said "about 15 to 20 per cent of the patients he sees are pregnant following a single act of intercourse." It was rare for a girl to seek medical advice prior to her first experience.

Most unmarried women, he said, first do nothing about contraception, then experiment with various methods described by friends and finally consult a professional in the family-planning field.

"Many, though, are already pregnant by the time they reach the last stage."

Physicians were frequently prepared to give contraceptive advice but are unable psychologically to give sexual counselling, he said.

In such counselling it was important for the physician to discover how much the woman knew about the ramifications of intercourse, the extent of her experience and how much she had enjoyed it.

Counselling for a teen-age girl should also involve the parents because, despite any therapy, she must still live with her parents and their values, he said.

At the Montreal General's pre-natal clinic for adolescents, decisions on pregnancies are left to the individual. "Therapeutic abortion is not stressed as a solution to pregnancy, but individual requests are received sympathetically and rarely refused," Dr. Kinch said.

About 12 per cent of patients in the unit carry pregnancies to the full term while the remainder apply for abortions, an in-hospital study showed.

Pre-and post-abortion counselling is stressed. The study indicated that for the majority, "the abortion experience was a maturing experience," the doctor said.

"Abortion should not be advocated as a means of contraception, but for a pregnant adolescent uncertain about her future, therapeutic abortion appears to be the best solution," Dr. Kinch said.

Suggestions of adoption after carrying out the pregnancy were received with negative reaction. "Patients were emphatic that this was not an alternative they could consider," the doctor said.

Restaurants Standards 'Too Low' in Calgary

CALGARY (CP)—There are about 800 restaurants in this city which do not sufficiently maintain the same standards of service and sanitation found in Europe, says Lorne McRae, chairman of the Calgbalan Restaurant Association's sanitation committee.

Although the food-service business is the third-largest industry in Alberta, less than one per cent of all food—service staff have received training in proper food handling from recognized schools, he said in an interview.

Mr. McRae said one reason food-service staff do not always maintain high standards may be that many earn the minimum wage.

"We're not paying anywhere near what we should."

Chefs, apprentice chefs and other trained personnel earn good wages but the majority of food - service staff are not trained.

In an effort to improve the situation, the restaurant association and the Calgary board of health organized a two-day sanitation-training program for food-service personnel.

Graduates of the course will be awarded a certificate and plaque to be worn on the job, and the city's medical health officer has advised the public to watch for those plus when dining out.

Ann Landers

Reader Gives Thanks for Wonderful Father

Dear Ann Landers: Several years ago on Thanksgiving Day, you printed a beautiful letter from a daughter thanking God for the wonderful father she had just lost. I always regretted not clipping that column and now I am asking you to haul it up and run it again. This time it will have even more meaning to me because I lost my own beloved father just a few days ago. Thank you, Ann. I know you'll come through. — Sad Long-Time Friend In Cleveland

Dear Friend: I do recall the letter and here it is — once again on Thanksgiving Day.

Dear Ann Landers: A great man died today. He wasn't a world leader or a famous doctor or a war hero or a sports figure or a business tycoon. But he was a great man. He was my father.

He didn't get his picture in the paper for beating up criminals. I guess he might say he was a person who never cared for credit or honors. He did corny things — like pay his bills on time, go to church on Sunday, and hold an office in the P.T.A. He helped his kids with their homework and drove his wife to the shopping center to do the grocery buying on Thursday night. He enjoyed handing his kids and their friends a and from football games. He enjoyed simple things — a picnic in the park, country music, mowing the grass, and running with the dog.

Tonight is the first night of my life without him. I don't know what to do with myself so I am writing to you. I am sorry now for the times I DIDN'T show him the proper respect. But I am thankful for many things. I am thankful because God let me have him for 18 years. And I am thankful that I was able to let him know how much I loved him. He died with a smile on his face. He knew he was a success as a husband and a father, a son, a brother and a friend. I wonder how many millionaires can say that? Thanks for listening,Ann Landers. — You've been a great help. — His Daughter Daughter Ann Landers: I have been looking for several days about that column with all those readers suggesting ways to peel onions without shedding a tear. I hope it's not too late to get into the act. Here's my surefire, 100-per cent-foolproof method for peeling onions. I learned it from my grandmother.

Put the onions in a basket. Take them outside where a good breeze is blowing. Get a pealed take them in the house milk stool out of the barn to sit on. Put your have'nots in a pan which you have filled with cold water. Peel just the outside skin off the onion — starting at the bottom. Always look up — never at the onion. When it is peeled drop it in the pan beside your feet.

When all the onions are peeled take them in the house and get a long cellophane bag. With the onion and knife in your hand, pull the cellophane bag well up over your hand and put a tight rubber band around your wrist. Slice the onion and slip the bag off your hand. It's guaranteed, Ann. Not a tear in a bushel basket. Try it and let me know how you make out. — Just Call Me Bill

Dear Bill: It sounds fine — providing you have (a) good breeze blowing, (b) a milk stool, (c) you live in a house and not an apartment, (d) you have a long cellophane bag, (e) you want to go to all that trouble — which I'm not sure I do. But those who wish to try it — be my guest.

Biculturalism in Canada Aids Church Identity

HALIFAX (CP) — The pluralistic and bicultural character of Canadian society has saved Canadian churches from the pitfalls of narrow viewpoints and has given them a national identity, says Rev. Gregory Baum of Toronto, an internationally known Catholic theologian.

Father Baum said this quality has given a Canadian identity to the churches and made them markedly different from their American counterparts.

Canadian churches are in constant tension between universalism on one side and "particularism"—regional or cultural differences—on the other.

He said local parishes of Canada's largest churches tend to be conservative and preoccupied with local concerns, but their national boards tend to promote progressive lines.

Of all Canadian institutions apart from the federal govern-

MAARTEN (AP) — Visitors to this half-Dutch, half-French resort island in the Netherlands Antilles Windwards now can keep in touch with their families or businesses in the United States by direct dial telephone. Calling St. Maarten from the U.S. however, must still be done the old-fashioned way through the overseas operator.

A Fishy Tale

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (AP) — Francis Leonard has a fishy tale for his insurance agents. He claims a whale fell on his car, denting the roof and damaging the windshield. "The whale is a fibre-glass model monument which stands near the entrance to the seaside resort hotel at Pietenberg Bay. A strong gale lifted the whale from the ground and it crashed down on Leonard's new car.

Buried Alive

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — After spending almost a month buried in sand up to her neck, a 36-year-old Aboriginal woman was flown to the Cairns Base hospital recently. According to aboriginals at the Edward River Mission, the buried had been advised by her husband, a local witch doctor, as a corrective measure for a hip injury she suffered in a fall at the mission, located 1,400 miles northwest of Brisbane.

ment, the Roman Catholic Church is "perhaps the most typically Canadian in its interconnection of two cultures."

Father Baum said it is an effectual by the economics and culture of Canada that it stands out as a national church in the international sphere of Roman Catholicism and contrasts sharply to the American church.

He said the Catholic Church in the United States is guided by a hierarchy dominated by persons of Irish stock, "all of one kind." Individual bishops were less autonomous and more influenced by a small number of powerful cardinals. The president of the American Conference of Catholic Bishops was chosen because he was the most powerful bishop.

By contrast, the Canadian bishops were of more diverse cultural backgrounds. Cardinals played a more minor role, and the presidency of the conference of bishops is passed on from one bishop to the next in a democratic manner. The Canadian conference was also less beset with bureaucracy and formalism.

Father Baum said the recent breakdown of a proposed union of the United and Anglican churches and the Disciples of Christ illustrated that the idea of corporate union that en-

But the demise of corporate union made possible more realistic work to expand current ecumenical action in the areas of theological education, chaplaincy work, social action and teaching.

Ottawa Researcher Questions Value of Athletic Competition

OTTAWA, (CP) — A University of Ottawa researcher has questioned the value of athletic competition for most young stars.

Terry Orlick says "We tend to think that sport was automatically good for all kids to build character. But research shows that it isn't automatically good. It can have positive or negative influences on children.

"The negative feelings can be as strong as to turn youngsters off sports."

Surveys conducted by Mr. Orlick and some of his students proved children at seven, eight and nine have soft sports. Many children see playing ball prompts gibe pressure and a lack of fun and playing time as the main reasons for not coming to return.

Mr. Orlick is a sports psychologist with the University of Ottawa physical education department. He has been studying the attitudes of children in sports, especially those who lose interest.

His work has resulted in a book, Every Child Can Win, written with Cal Botterill of University of Alberta. It is directed toward parents and coaches to help them understand youngsters' expectations in sports.

It calls for a shift in games that emphasize co-operation rather than competition to give children a chance to gain from sports more than the feeling that winning is everything.

His studies have alarmed him because of the role children play in sports. He thinks it is largely because sports do not fulfill the needs of most young children.

Competition may be satisfactory or enjoyable for highly-skilled and motivated young stars but too often, for most of the less others, it is just a way of being weeded out and dumped aside, left feeling inadequate and somehow inferior, Mr. Orlick says.

But with co-operative games "everyone would be involved."

Youngsters usually become involved in sports with the encouragement of their parents who hope to see their offspring learn the basics of games and sportsmanship, have fun and leadership and learn to get along with other children.

What parents want and what kids get in the sport environment often are often contradictory," Mr. Orlick says.

He thinks most amateur sports have become production lines geared to pro and athletes ready for professional competition. But "sports and recreation should offer something different than the concern with performance that dominates in work and school."

Granted that stress working together more than winning had additional potential for youngsters, Besides being more fun, they would teach co-operation important factor to Mr. Orlick.

"Co-operation is an essential part of our future in terms of the quality of our lives We are going to have to be more concerned with other peoples' interests and perspectives, to learn to co-operate more."

Mr. Orlick knows both sides of the sports debate. He says he has "had the goodies"—a gymnastic scholarship to an American university, but his experience working with children at summer camps prompted him to resume his studies of children when he went to University of Alberta for his doctorate.

Besides the book, Mr. Orlick has written several papers on the negative effects of sport for children. For a while, Mr. Orlick and Mr. Botterill feared they might never get the book published.

Canadian publishers said there was no market for it, but Nelson, Hall of Chicago published it last spring and reports good sales.

Mr. Orlick says a lot of concerned parents and coaches cannot fully comprehend children who quit sports because they don't like egotism their attitudes."

"In hockey, we lose between 90 and 95 per cent of the players by age 15." By that age many no longer play as much as they want to and they can find other more interesting activities.

Adults supervising the new co-operative games would have to focus "more on what a kid is doing right than wrong. It's much harder for a kid than to have someone always harping at him. It also produced massive self-esteem in children.

Long Point Residents Tell of Lake Ghost

PORT ROWAN, Ont. (CP) — Residents of Long Point, known as Lake Erie's graveyard, talk about a ghost that roams when winds whistle off the lake from the west.

The story is that when a ship was wrecked during a storm years ago a seaman was accidentally beheaded. They say his ghost still patrols the waters looking for its head.

The Dominion Wreck Register lists 36 known and ancient wrecks off the area say that since 1679, when the French explorer La Salle's Griffon sank, more than 300 ships have found their way to the bottom.

Hundreds of lives have been lost in these waters and in 1909 alone 249 seamen died. Cemeteries dating from 1830 were littered during the time of wooden sailing vessels.

From 1916 to 1926 one of five lifesaving stations on the Great Lakes was on the point.

Ships have been lost in huge storms, residents say. Winds and waves cause the sand to drift so fast that large objects often appear in less than 24 hours.

The first wreck was the Nanette, carrying passengers, which disappeared in 1799 off the point.

A British schooner sailing during the War of 1812 also appeared at the point, without survivors.

The Atlantic, a schooner from Buffalo, N.Y., collided with the Cleveland on Aug. 19, 1852, and sank in 142 feet of water taking 300 passengers and the gold with it. The money was later recovered.

Following the disaster of the Merrowdale, Rosemaker on Dec. 2, 1890, one of the lifeboats was found with nine frozen, lifeless bodies aboard. A year later the body of the captain, Robert McLeod of Kincardine, Ont., floated ashore.

Other ships that sank include the Glad Tiding from Detroit, on Oct. 31, 1879; the Fleetwing of Wallaceburg, Ont., on Sept. 29, 1877; the Mistral, N.Y., and Francis Palcor and the Wild Rover, all U.S. ships lost in 1881.

Abigail Becker lived on the point with her schooner Conductor ran into foul weather and came aground about a mile from her cabin during the night of Nov. 24, 1854.

Members of the crew lashed themselves to the ship's mast and spent hours hoping to survive the wind.

When Mrs. Becker saw the ship the next morning she urged the sailors to come ashore. The captain went first and almost drowned in the icy water where. The same thing happened but Mrs. Becker walked on shoulder deep and pulled the men to safety.

When Mrs. Becker saw the ship the next morning she urged the sailors to come ashore. The captain went first and almost drowned in the icy water where. The same thing happened but Mrs. Becker walked on shoulder deep and pulled the men to safety.

Later the sailors learned that Mrs. Becker could not swim.

She received many awards for her heroic action, including the Royal Humane Society medal. Also King Edward VII visited her at Long Point.

Not all the shipwrecks at Long Point ended in total disaster. When the City of Dresden sank Nov. 18, 1922, its illegal cargo of $60,000 worth of liquor was salvaged by area people.

Captain J. J. McGoun was afraid his rum-running trade would be discovered by the authorities so he had no objection to the people's help in taking the liquor.

The officials at nearby Simcoe, Ont., did not learn about the episode until the beach was cleaned up. Telephone lines had been mysteriously cut.

Swinging Room Really Swings

LONDON (Reuts) — When and the student immediately fell from the beam.

"The person in the room becomes a 'visual puppet'," Lee said. "We can pull him around as we want, without touching him."

The sensations are caused by the conflict between the way one sees and the way one feels. The psychologist now is starting more sophisticated tests on the phenomenon.

He is using a spherical room with a treadmill-type floor, and a visual projection system all around the walls on which pictures and films can be flashed.

"We'll completely control the occupant's visual world and the same monitor his muscles. He can lay on the spot, with images flashing past; a slight tilt in the images—and he'll stumble."

The findings may prove useful in designing equipment for the blind and in finding solutions to some traffic problems caused by motorists misjudging distances when braking or following another car.

TV Harts Canadian Dialects

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians may only do of the 128 different sounds they are capable of making, says Jack Chambers, a linguistics professor at University of Toronto.

The influence of television is destroying many distinctive dialects in Canada, he said, because it exposes viewers to an "unbroken ocean that goes straight across the country and is closely related to Midland American," a dialect that is tracted back to the United Empire Loyalists.

Mr. Chambers, who began teaching linguistics because he was dismayed at the disregard for the English language in literature, said interest in his subject is growing. At present, approximately 100 students attend his classes.

"I decided to study language because I felt I needed the tool for looking at literature precisely," said Mr. Chambers, who previously studied English literature.

He said few Canadians know how varied the English language is in Canada and it is important that different dialects be preserved because "a dialect is more colorful and interesting and it gives an area a sense of community."

Stanfield Defends His Position on Guidelines

TORONTO (CP) — Robert Stanfield told 1,300 Progressive Conservative party faithful Wednesday night that he has no intention of giving the Liberal government a blank cheque when it comes to its proposed selective wage and price controls.

Mr. Stanfield told the party fund-raising dinner gathering—termed by a party official as his last major political speech before he steps down as national leader—that the controls bill being introduced in Parliament and what the government has been talking about are two different things.

He charged that if and when the bill is passed the government can bring in whatever kind of federal program it chooses.

"The controls program being talked about today is not the bill," Mr. Stanfield said. "The bill strictly deals with sweeping powers and the government is seeking parliamentary approval for these powers so what amounts is an open-ended battle."

Mr. Stanfield charged that a year from now, with no reference to Parliament and no open committee consideration, the government could drastically change its guideline to something nothing like the one being introduced today.

The powers being asked for under Bill C-73 (the wage-and price-control bill) should "only be granted for a limited time," he said.

The party leader said that he was the first to propose the need for short-term controls to break inflation.

"We still stand by this need. This is quite a different thing from a longer-term incomes policy which attempts to contain the rate of inflation through an institutionalized

Gifts Cost

LONDON (CP) — Gifts have cost Bedfordshire ratepayers more than $19,000 on items ranging from watches to portable television sets for staff who have worked for the council for 25 years or more. So far this year the first year the scheme has been operated, 275 council men and women have received the gifts.

Stanfield turned to the question of leadership, in the gathering there were about six declared candidates who will be seeking to replace Mr. Stanfield at the leadership convention in Ottawa in February.

"It's party can win the next election or it can fall apart after the convention," he said.

Mr. Stanfield did not give a hint as to whom he would like to see take over his job but said that "every leader needs a team and every team needs a leader."

The $125-a-plate dinner was attended by Premier Davis and John Roberts, former Ontario premier.

Richardson Says Forces To Stay at 78,000 People

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson said Wednesday the size of the Canadian Armed Forces will remain at 78,000 and it will not be increased to provide more men for United Nations peacekeeping.

The minister said there are still immediate plans to close bases and, at any rate, bases will not be closed in areas where the needs of peacekeeping.

He said he will make some consolidation recommendations to cabinet in a matter of months. But he would not say whether this would involve the closure.

The minister was responding to questions inside and outside the Commons about remarks made Tuesday by Gen. J. A. Dextraze, chief of defence staff.

The general told a Commons committee the size of the forces has stabilized at 78,000 but he could use another 1,000 or so men because of the strains of peacekeeping.

He also told a reporter he might get them by trimming expenditures elsewhere and hinted that that trimming might come through base closure.

The possibility of base closure brought questions from J. Angus MacLean (PC—Malpeque) who was concerned about the base at Summerside, P.E.I., and also from Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East).

Provinces Recommend Plan To Regulate Land Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal-provincial committee has recommended a series of measures to regulate land purchases by foreigners.

A report tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Prime Minister Trudeau said foreign land buyers are not yet a problem in all areas but that most provinces want the means to control them if necessary.

So far, only Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan have legislation restricting the sale of private land to aliens or non-residents, the report says.

It was prepared on the instructions of the prime minister and provincial premiers, and completed more than a year ago.

Adequate statistics on foreign land ownership are unavailable, but Prince Edward Island appears to be the most vulnerable because of its recreational and tourist attractions, the report suggests.

An estimated 6.3 per cent of all available land and 11.2 per cent of total shore frontage is owned by non-residents—people who reside outside the province, it says.

Despite restrictions, land owned by outsiders will rise to 10 per cent by the year 2000 if current trends continue, it says.

Total land ownership would even half the province by 2000 if no regulation existed.

The document recommends the delegation of administrative authority" by Ottawa to the provinces over "acquisition of land by aliens."

This could be done through the Citizenship Act by giving provincial cabinets the power to decide who is eligible to buy land, it says.

Federal officials on the committee asked that no restrictions be placed on Canadian residents from one province buying land in another. But Prince Edward Island and Saskatchewan disagreed.

The document says control proposals that could be implemented very and could take the form of:

—Laws affecting access to prime recreational areas.

—Expropriation and tax laws to discourage outside purchases and protect local owners from higher taxes caused by increases in property value due to the extent of outside ownership.

—Tougher, rubberstamp standards for outside land owners and restrictions on corporate holdings.

—Harsher zoning rules and strict disclosure laws to determine the residence and citizenship of land buyers.

NDP Accuses Bell Of Bad Accounting

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party accused Bell Canada of practising highly-dubious accounting procedures and urged the Canadian transport commission Wednesday to reject Bell's request for $115 million in rate increases.

The NDP also renewed a long-standing party demand that the government nationalize the shareholder-owned telephone company.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) told a commission hearing on Bell's rate increase application the company has failed to prove a need for any of the higher rates contained in the application.

He called on the federal regulatory agency to "unconditionally dismiss the application as unacceptable" and to order Bell to put a freeze on outside investments and advertising.

Mr. Symes appeared for the NDP during the fifth week of public hearings on Bell's request for a package of higher rates that if approved by the commission, include a 15-per-cent increase in basic monthly residential and business telephone charges, a range of higher long-distance tolls, a 10-per-cent increase in some service charges and a $36 charge for suspending service, changing telephone numbers at the request of customers and removing listings from the directory.

The increases would affect 4.8 million Bell subscribers in Central and Northern Canada.

He said Bell's estimate of $171 million in increased costs this year is "totally unrealistic" because it does not take into account the recently-imposed wage and price restraints which will put a ceiling on future wage increases for Bell's 48,000 employees.

He said Bell should be ordered to discontinue all advertising because the utility has no competition.

Danson Goes to B.C. To Investigate Site

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson plans to go to Vancouver next week to deal personally with local opposition in the latest threat to the United Nations-sponsored Habitat conference.

Mr. Danson said outside the Commons that Vancouver will not be an "armed camp, as the mayor of Vancouver suggests," during the Habitat conference next June, despite the presence of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). He reaffirmed federal support for the UN meeting.

"I expect I will go out next week to speak with city council because I think there has been a lack of proper political communication. I must take responsibility for that."

Vancouver city council voted Tuesday to ask the federal government to cancel the Habitat conference.

Vancouver Mayor Art Phillips said there would be turbulence if the conference was held and he condemned the recent UN resolution declaring Zionism a form of racism.

Mr. Danson echoed External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen's comment in the Commons Wednesday that the circumstances surrounding the Habitat conference are different from the UN crime conference which was moved to Geneva from Toronto this summer following an unsuccessful bid for postponement by Canada.

Mr. Danson, the only Jewish member of the federal cabinet, said there has been no formal objection to the conference by the Jewish community.

Former Toronto mayor Phil Givens, a member of the Ontario legislature and a Jew, has spoken out strongly on the issue. Mr. Danson had this comment: "He wasn't speaking for the leaders of the community, I can assure you."

In the Commons, Mr. Danson assured Peter Bosanko (PC—Calgary South) that the government is giving no financial assistance to PLO representatives to attend the Vancouver conference.

Earlier Wednesday, he expressed surprise at the Vancouver decision. Only recently Mrs. Phillips was praising the government's assurance the conference would go ahead he said.

He had written a letter to Secretary-general of the conference indicating full support, Mr. Danson said to reporters.

Mr. Danson said the official Habitat conference will attract 3,000 representatives from 140 nations and a parallel conference of non-governmental groups will be host to 5,000 to 10,000 people.

The government is investing about $13 million directly in organizing the conference, he said.

Meeting Set with Province on Hillcrest Sewer Service Cost

The Queen's Park meeting long-sought by local politicians over the sewer cost issue has, finally been arranged.

Both Hugh O'Neil, MPP Quinte, and Mayor Ben Corke will meet Dec. 3 with Environment Minister George Kerr.

The meeting follows several days of wrangling which both men have sought a ministry review of a decision refusing provincial aid to ease the high Hillcrest taxes caused by sanitary sewer services.

Mr. O'Neil sounded an optimistic note over the minister's consent to the meeting.

"I'm very pleased the minister has agreed to see me," he said. "Although I've already provided him with considerable background . . . I feel sure that Mayor Corke and I will be able to clarify many aspects."

He said they will "underline the vital importance of providing aid assistance to the community — and the great need to relieve the tremendous tax burden resulting from the installation of these services."

Mr. O'Neil said a "very strong case" could be made for giving Hillcrest help, "which is so badly needed."

"Personally," he added, "I'm very hopeful that we shall have a successful outcome to our meeting with the minister."

Also waiting the outcome of the meeting are Hillcrest householders between College and Byron streets who have yet to receive sewer services. They petitioned council Oct. 26 for a meeting to explain installation costs before proceeding with the last phase of sanitary sewer servicing in the area.

At its last meeting council agreed to delay such discussion until Mayor Corke receives a final decision from the ministry.

Liberals Outline PC Policy Faults

MADOC — The provincial government's development policies came in for a double barrelled blast here Wednesday night.

The criticism was sounded at the annual meeting of Hastings-Peterborough Liberal Association.

John Eakins, MPP Victoria-Haliburton—and Liberal industry and tourism critic—hit out at lack of more assistance to Eastern and Northern Ontario.

Don Mullan, newly-elected association president, criticized the Davis government for not providing development incentives in such areas.

Mr. Eakins said he believed the future of Ontario's northern and eastern regions will depend a great deal on what happens "in that monster of Metro Toronto."

Complaints continue about Metro's problems in housing, transport and social services. Yet the city continues to expand seemingly without "any concrete steps" to control such development.

He disagreed with government proposals to create new cities. Instead the province should be assisting the development of existing small centres where a community instead must be established.

All that's needed is provincial support to help local governments develop services needed for expansion.

"Why should new cities be created when you have existing communities just dying for a little shot in the arm and a little help," said Mr. Eakins.

Some areas classified for tourism also receive little help,he said.

While it is costing money to develop and create tourist attractions in Toronto, other tourism areas could stand provincial government encouragement, he said.

Mr. Mullan (Marmora) based his newly-elected status as association president on statistics—a project a population of 10 million in Eastern Ontario by the year 2000. But it would not be along the Highway 401 corridor.

Discouraging such development in northern areas and classifying them as a tourist area, he said, elected in January convention in Toronto were: Ted Cournoyea, Trenton; Wilma Healy, Marmora; Joe Hanley, Tyendinaga; Jim Carruthers, Derbyville; Gerald Walsh, Read; Lillian O'Connor, Marmora; Gordon Heard, Rawdon; Richard Rashotte, Tweed.

Alternates: Breen O'Connor, Marmora; William O'Brien, Coe Hill; Laurie O'Connor, Derbyville; Lloyd Reynolds, Bancroft; Isobel Slisson, Norwood; Mike Galvin, Madoc; Ron Foster, St. Ola.

Police Warn Stores Of Daytime 'Till-tap'

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crabbe has issued a warning to city commercial establishments following the theft of $8 during a daytime "till-tap" at Bata Shoe Store at 253 Front St. early Wednesday.

Chief Crabbe said two male persons entered the store at 9:30 a.m. and asked the lone attendant about ladies' patent shoes.

He said the attendant went to the rear of the store for about two minutes to get a pair of shoes and while he was absent, the men opened the cash register, took the money and fled.

Chief Crabbe pointed out if employees of a commercial outlet have to leave the store front, they should lock the cash register and take the key with them.

In addition, he asks city residents to be on the lookout for the two male suspects. One is described as about 5'8" tall, 25 to three inches tall, in his early 20's with shoulder length hair and wearing casual dress. The other male is about 5½ years of age, five feet, two inches tall, very thin with black hair.

Tools Taken

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville are investigating the theft of $2,000 worth of tools from Richmond's Tea Lines at RR 1, Belleville located just north of Highway 401 off Sidney St.

Constable Tom Bergstrom, investigating officer, said the break-in occurred between 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday and 6:45 a.m. on Wednesday.

He said the missing items include mechanics tools, electric drills, power tools and various wrenches. They were located in the work shop area of the school bus building.

Quinte MP Appointed To Study Rent Bill

Hugh O'Neil, MPP Quinte, has been appointed to the legislature's select committee studying the government's rent review bill.

Mr. O'Neil, a realtor of long experience with business offices in Belleville and Trenton, said escalating rents are creating "very serious" problems for many Ontario citizens.

The situation is particularly acute in large urban areas, just as rapidly rising costs for other commodities and services are a matter of concern to everyone in the province."

The government's Bill 20 stipulates limits on residential rents from July of this year to August 1977. It also provides legislant subletting by tenants for a rent greater than that permitted by law.

Rent review officers would be appointed in various regions, and review boards for appeals against decisions made by the officials.

Construction Begins On 126 Unit Apartment

Work began this week on a $3 million, 126-unit apartment building on Haig Rd.

The building is being constructed by Maurice Rollins Construction Co. Ltd., and should be completed by next September, a company spokesman said Wednesday.

Describing the building, Mr. Rollins said it will stand three stories high not including a basement apartment level.

"The main attraction of the building will be a three-quarter acre park which will include a tennis court and shuffleboard pit," said Mr. Rollins.

A mix of one, two and three bedroom units will be in the building "which will likely be the largest apartment building in the city," he said.

Rents will range from $200 to $285 a month.

The apartment building will also include a common playroom for parties and recreation and each floor will have its own laundry room.

Footings for the building are now being poured.

Mr. Rollins said the strike of Rollins Lumber Co. workers will not interfere with construction.

Window Smashed

A marble thrown by an unknown vandal caused $800 damage when it smashed a large plate glass window, 15 feet by five feet in size, at a residence at 89 Bleecker Ave., Belleville police report.

Chief Douglas Crabbe said today the incident occurred between 11 noon on Tuesday and 11 a.m. on Wednesday.

Two Hurt In Crash

TRENTON — A late afternoon accident Wednesday sent two United States residents to the hospital and caused more than $7,000 damage on Highway 401, northwest of here.

Driver Richard Clark, 34, and passenger Barbara Gross, 31, both of Staten Island, N.Y. are under observation and in fair to satisfactory condition at Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Police said the 1975 yellow Porsche was travelling eastbound on the 401 when Mr. Clark lost control of the vehicle and the car rolled 1½ times before coming to rest on its roof.

Labor Council to Study Need for Strike Fund

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The Quinte District Labor Council will set up a committee next Tuesday to investigate the feasibility of a labor council strike fund from which all member unions may draw strike support.

Council president Doug Sword said during an interview Wednesday, "the idea will be given serious consideration . . . though there are many problems attached to the scheme."

At a labor council meeting three weeks ago, executive committee member Jack Thomas pointed out many strikes in the area are lost because the unions do not have the money to stay off the job for long.

During an interview today, Mr. Thomas said not much thought had been given to the amount of money that would be required for a fund.

"Obviously, to be effective, the fund would be a considerable amount," he said.

Mr. Sword said he agreed with the point and that a strike and contribution committee will be formed at Tuesday's council meeting to deal with the problem.

Though there are several problems attached to the idea, "it is a properly administered fund, it's a good idea," said Mr. Sword.

If a council strike fund is set up it will have to be administered separately from council funds by an executive body consisting of representatives of participating unions, said Mr. Sword.

He said the council strike fund is not intended to be a long term support for any striking union "but ideally it will be supplemental funding that will work in conjunction with other funds."

Until this point, the only council support to striking unions has come in the way of single donations and personal appearances on the picket line.

Mr. Thomas said the idea of a central strike fund had already been discussed by the Canadian Labor Congress and that no one event triggered the move locally for investigation.

"I think we'll be able to put support of the fund by labor councils across Canada," he said.

"A central fund is the principle of strong helping the weak," he said.

Torys Select Party Delegates

MADOC — Progressive Conservatives in Hastings riding Wednesday night received their broad guidelines for new political leadership qualities.

Ross Stevenson, MP Hastings, outlined his own criteria as his constituency organization selected delegates to the national Conservative leadership convention in February.

Some pundits seem to think a leadership candidate should come equipped with a "prefabricated support base" similar to securing the high cost of such conventions has caused debates. Aiming to break even for the upcoming leadership assembly in Ottawa, the party organization has increased registration fee, now standing at $150 for delegates, $85 for alternates, and $50 for registered observers.

Chosen as delegates from the two constituency conventions were: Mr. Kincaid, Madoc; Bill Ketcheson, Belleville; Parks, Thurlow; Robin Jeffrey, Belleville, women's delegate; James Airhart, Marmora; and Steve Wease, Belleville, young Conservatives delegate.

Alternates: Ewart Wannamaker, Bancroft; Gordon Benson, Belleville; Mrs. Ross, Marilyn Rollins, Ross McDonald, Mrs. Shi Meeks, all of Belleville.

No Decision Yet On Cheese Quota

If there is government control over the amount of cheese imported into Canada during 1976 the quota will be about the same as this year's, a federal ministry of industry, trade and commerce spokesman said in Belleville Wednesday.

"If there is a quota for 1976 it will remain about the same factor based on allocations to importers in terms of varieties along the lines of the 1975 quota," said Allen Christensen, commerce office, agriculture, Ottawa.

Mr. Christensen told about 75 persons at the 48th annual Central Ontario Cheese Producers Association that a decision has been taken by the Canadian cabinet on a quota for 1976".

He said the quota system was applied to cheese imports in 1975 after the year after Canadian cheese companies advised the government a price difference between Canada and United States "may result in import cheese from United States."

In a question and answer period ministry of agriculture official said that by the next year the process will be finalized by commercial chief makers experiencing losses will be milk.

"Occasionally a cheese maker experiences a slow day or even a dead rat and the question arises if there is contamination in the milk?" Ed Smith, director of milk quality program in the milk industry branch of the ministry, said at the 48th annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association.

He said the milk industry branch, 1423 Millstream Road, and Ontario Dairy Council have been working on a procedure that will involve taking of samples on milk going into cheese factories.

"Then if there is a cheese failure you will know exactly who to contact and the branch and the Dairy Council will know exactly what to do and what samples to take to the health lab," he said.

"Claims will be based on whether or not an inhibitor was in the bacterial culture, whether or not it was also in the product found at shop's and a sample of the culture will be taken to see if it was a strong active culture," Mr. Smith said.

Seminar to Outline Best Values for Food Dollar

Most housewives find the price coding stripes appearing on nearly all supermarket products mystifying, but they shouldn't, says Keith Allison, co-ordinator of tonight's food seminar sponsored by the Committee for Consumer Education.

"It has little to do with the consumer," said Mr. Allison Wednesday. Instead, it is a stock control device for use in manufacturers' warehouses. The blue stripes of varying thicknesses appear on all products—even a bag of peanuts, says Mr. Allison—and contain a stock number and a current price.

In the United States, the coding stripes are used by some stores in conjunction with a new type of cash register. Prices appear nowhere on a package, but all checkout counter a special electronic wand scans the stripes and a product's price is registered on a customers cash register tape.

However, the process, says Mr. Allison, was opposed in at least five American states, forcing supermarkets to price each product.

Code was introduced in Montreal, will be one of seven topics to be discussed by a panel of four speakers at tonight's food seminar at Quinte Secondary School at 7:30 p.m.

Giving a short, 10 minute talk on price coding will be Helen Gagne, consumer advisor for the Miracle Food Mart supermarket chain.

The speaker from Toronto will be followed by Margaret Barker, a representative from Ontario Food Council, Rich Williams, Loyalist College, and nutritionist Jane McNicol.

Topics to be covered during a round table discussion and a question and answer period range from food additives, to buying the best food for the smallest dollar, to grades, standards and weights and measures, and to comparison shopping techniques.

NDP Member Outlines Need For New Provincial Health Ministry

Responsibility of administrating occupational health regulations and standards must be brought under one new ministry, says Floyd Laughren, New Democratic member of the Ontario government opposition.

Mr. Laughren made this statement during his address to the provincial convention of the new Democratic Party for the Quinte riding Wednesday.

Representing the Northern Ontario riding of Nickel Belt, Mr. Laughren said he is particularly concerned" with occupational health— particularly as it affects the miners in his jurisdiction.

At the moment regulations of conditions people work in is spread through at least four ministries, he said, "if having two, one social ministry to handle occupational health problems isn't the ideal solution it would be a giant step forward."

He criticized current government thinking regarding the type of person permitted on the job before compensation benefits will be paid. "The important thing is that that person be rehabilitated and compensated while off work wherever the injury took place.

He also stressed the need to "fully investigate" new industrial chemicals to determine their relative danger to the worker before they are introduced to the factory floor.

"Sometimes we now know are dangerous to the worker cannot simply be taken out of industry without massive economic disruption," he said.

Speaking in general, Mr. Laughren told convention delegates "there is a new feeling in the house now that the public is fed up with official opposition."

He predicted the liberal party will face serious opposition if it doesn't stop "floundering around.

More Snow On Way

Winter reared its head early today.

Gary Rideout of the duty forecaster office, Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, reported that 4.5 centimetres — about an inch of snow fell during the morning hours. He added the warm temperature — 2 degrees above zero — turned the flurries into rain.

Slippery conditions are being considered by work crews from the Belleville public works department with wanders out for the first time this year.

Thirty men began work at 8 a.m. sanding main streets and hills and cleaning the slush away, said a works department official.

Several areas was hit hardest. The ministry of natural resources report 15 centimetres of snow fell and flurries are continuing. Bands of snow is plowed for the first time this year.

Mr. Rideout said the rain was expected to continue until afternoon. Snow flurries were expected again tonight.

Light rainfall began early this morning in Picton.

Picton Water Purification Plant received a half an inch of rain has fallen.

Audet Rink Tops Field

Eight-ender Bonspiel Highlight

A rare eight-ender highlighted the Colonial Real Estate Bonspiel held on the weekend at the Quinte Curling Club.

Winners of the two-day event had to go through quite a bit of competition to come up with the trophy in the end.

Final standings showed the rink of Ron Audet, Pat Audet, Don Brearley and Lynne Brearley on top. With the win went the Colonial Real Estate trophy. It is the first time the rink has been presented.

In second place were Dave Brown, Kathryn Brown, Rick McCaw and Keitha Christy, who formed a very competitive rink.

The eight-ender saw Ori Kruger, Joan Kruger, John Lindfegen and Vi Lindvegen come up with eight rocks in the house during one of the matches. Although Mr. Kruger did not advance to the finals, the eight-ender is one of very few in the curling club's history.

"It is very unusual to see an eight-ender at any time," said club member Vern Goodwin.

Hosting the bonspiel was Vi Lindvegen, who represented Colonial Real Estate. She presented a trophy to the winners and other prizes were also handed out.

Bobcats Face Stiff Test

Belleville Bobcats are up against a four-point game on Friday night. They need to beat Pickering Panthers at the Memorial Arena if they are to stay within range of the Central Division leaders.

Currently the Panthers have 34 points on 11 wins and two ties in 14 games. Belleville has 30 points on nine wins and two ties in 14 games. If the Cats beat the Panthers, they keep their two games in hand and move within two points of first place. If the local Metro Junior B squad drops the encounter to the visitors, Cats' two games in hand would be meaningless because Pickering would then be six points in front of them and in first place would be out of reach.

The Cats only meet the Panthers once more after tomorrow night's contest. Therefore it is imperative, if Belleville is to stay within running distance, that they win the big game tomorrow.

In the previous two meeting of the clubs, the Cats have earned three of a possible four points. The first time around, at home, Belleville scored five times to the visitor's three to pull out a 7-5 win. Last Friday in Pickering, the Cats tallied a third period power play goal and hung on for a 3-3 draw. That tie pulled the local squad out of a three-game slump.

Friday the locals will be without the services of captain Wayne Calberry, forward Pat Tilley and defenceman Neil Turner, all serving suspensions.

Game time is 9 p.m.

BILL GOLDSWORTHY

Goldsworthy Asks: Who Wouldn't Look Good?

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rookie Bryan Trottier of New York Islanders looked very good Wednesday night against Minnesota Stars.

But then, says Minnesota rookie Bill Goldsworthy, looking good against the world North Stars doesn't mean all that much.

"Sure he looked great," said Goldsworthy, "but who wouldn't have against us."

The 20-year-old Trottier scored his 16th goal of the season and assisted on four others as the Islanders hammered the North Stars 7-1 in National Hockey League game.

Trottier started the season with three goals and two assists in the first game and, says coach Al Arbour, he has been good since then.

"He's got a great intelligence for the game," said Arbour. "We knew he was a very strong kid but I suppose you have to be a little surprised about the way he has turned on."

In Wednesday's other NHL games, Washington Capitals stunned Los Angeles Kings 7-2, Montreal Canadiens downed New York Rangers 6-4, Pittsburgh Penguins stopped Detroit Red Wings 5-3, California Seals edged Vancouver Canucks 3-2, Toronto Maple Leafs tied Chicago Black Hawks 4-4, Philadelphia Flyers trimmed Atlanta Flames 7-3 and Kansas City Scouts tied St. Louis Blues 3-3.

Washington's win left the Stars and Capitals tied with the lowest point-total in the league.

The North Stars have lost nine of their last 10 games and 11 of 12 this season.

Billy Harris scored two goals for New York while Jean Ratelle, Brad Park, Dave Stewart, Jean Potvin, Clark Gillies and former North Star J. P. Parise and Dale Rolfe added one apiece.

Washington goaltender Ron Low stopped 26 shots to earn his first NHL victory.

Washington defenceman Bill Goldsworthy scored two goals and added an assist as the Capitals ended a seven-game losing streak.

Goldsworthy, who has been criticized by Washington coach Tommy Ivan for lack of hustle, scored his first NHL goal in the second period. Jim Sherritt and Francois Rochon were the other Cleveland scorers.

Can't Catch Hull and Jets, Cincinnati Has No Sting

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cincinnati Stingers didn't get much chance to rough up Winnipeg Jets on Wednesday night.

They had their hands full just catching the fast-skating Jets, who bounded Cards 11-3 in a World Hockey Association game.

Winnipeg's Bobby Hull accused Cincinnati coach Terry Slater of ordering rough play early earlier this season, but Slater said the Jets weren't in any danger Wednesday night.

"We're not going to hurt anyone intentionally," said Slater. "We're going to go out and body-check people, but you have to skate with them to do that. We sure didn't do that tonight."

BOBBY HULL

Hull said Wednesday he felt sorry for the Cincinnati players. "Sometimes they must go out and follow the coach's wishes."

Hull, who set out one game earlier this season in protest after a incident in a Cincinnati-Winnipeg game, was penalized for tripping after he was twice decked by Cincinnati players.

Denver Spurs blanked Cleveland Crusaders 3-1 in the only other game of day's only other game.

The top-sided win moved the Jets into a tie with Quebec Nordiques for the Canadian Division lead. Quebec has played one more game than Winnipeg.

Anders Hedberg scored three goals for Winnipeg and Bill Lesuk and Terry Miller two each.

A crowd of 4,327 saw Denver goalie Cam Newton stop 22 Cleveland shots, 11 of them in the first period.

Rookie Ron DeLorme, playing his second game after being recalled from Tucson of the Central Hockey League, scored his first WHA goal to break a scoreless tie early in the middle period. Jim Sherritt and Francois Rochon were the other Cleveland scorers.

Greys Connect

HAMILTON (CP) — Owen Sound Greys scored three unanswered goals in the third period to gain a 6-4 decision over Mount Hamilton Junior A's in the only Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League game Wednesday night.

Rob Thomas and Bill Brown led the Greys with two goals apiece and Blaine McCutcheon had Mike Hanna get the others.

Rob Mount and Steve Haslett each scored a pair for Mount Hamilton.

The teams were tied 2-2 after the first period and Mount Hamilton led 4-3 going into the third.

Owen Sound outshot the A's 39-27 before 267 spectators.

Play resumes Friday with Welland Sabres meeting Guelph Platers and Chatham Maroons travelling to meet Niagara Falls Flyers.

Ratelle Wants Security

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran Jean Ratelle, after talking things over with his wife and Boston Bruins management, returned to action with the National Hockey League club Wednesday night after a one-game absence.

Ratelle took a relay from Bobby Orr and Ken Hodge to score a first-period goal in the Bruins' 4-1 victory.

The 37-year-old centre, in his 13th NHL season, wanted to sit down and talk to his wife Nancy, and general manager Harry Sinden after an afternoon meeting ended.

The fact wanted to know if the possibility of a future exists in Boston," Sinden said.

Ratelle had spent his entire career with the Rangers, becoming their second-leading all-time scorer before being dealed to Boston with defencemen Brad Park and Joe Zanussi in a March 7 deal that brought centre Phil Esposito and defencemen Carol Vadnais to New York.

Ratelle said he wanted to be assured that he would be playing with his present linemates, Esposito and Wayne Cashman, and Esposito and Vadnais didn't figure in Wednesday's trades, and Esposito was on the sidelines with an injury.

Penguin goalie Michel Plasse extended his personal unbeaten streak on Pittsburgh ice, stopping 28 shots in an easy victory over the Red Wings.

Vancouver's Don Lever moved in the last minute to deprive California goalie Gilles Meloche of a shutout. Wayne Merrick, acquired from St. Louis in a trade earlier this week, and Dennis Maruk scored the Seals' goals.

Rick MacLeish and Reggie Leach scored two goals each for the Flyers, who regained their first place status in the NHL standings two points ahead of Atlanta Flames.

Toronto and Chicago battled to a 4-4 draw at Maple Leaf Gardens. Lanny McDonald and Errol Thompson scored two goals apiece for the Leafs, while Stan Mikita, Pit Martin, Cliff Koroll and Dennis Hull replied for the Hawks.

Defencemen Bobby Orr scored one goal and assisted on another as the Bruins beat the Rangers at Madison Square Garden in the only meeting between the two teams since the Phil Esposito trade earlier this year.

Ex-Ranger Jean Ratelle, acquired by Boston management before the trade deadline, also had an assist.

Ratelle had missed a Tuesday night game, apparently without any problems, to meet with his wife Nancy and discuss their hockey future.

The Rangers sent Ratelle, Park and defenceman Joe Zanussi to Boston for defencemen Carol Vadnais and Esposito.

Voyageurs Fall to Richmond

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Richmond Robin, with goaltender Jacques Mrazek leading the way, handed Nova Scotia a 9-3 attack Wednesday night for the Voyageurs' sixth loss in the American Hockey League this season.

The defeat trimmed Nova Scotia's first-place lead in the Northern Division to five points over Rochester Americans who fought to a 5-5 overtime tie against Baltimore Clippers.

In other games, Hershey Bears shaded New Haven Nighthawks 5-3 and Springfield Indians beat Providence Reds 6-2.

The Voyageurs, with 14 wins and two ties after 23 games, have 30 points. Rochester has 35 points, three more than Providence and 15 ahead of Springfield. Richmond leads the Southern Division with 32 points, while Baltimore has 27, Hershey 18 and New Haven 16.

In Halifax, Mrazek stopped 44 of 46 shots before 2,055 fans. The 26-year-old Prince Albert, Sask., native made 14 saves in the first period as the Voyageurs took a 1-0 lead. He stopped 14 saves in the second and 16 in the third.

Larry Wright paced the Robins with two goals while Norm Salmer, Alex Pervelle and Bob Stretz added the others. Guy Chouinard scored for Nova Scotia in the first period and Paul Woods got one in the third.

Goalie Ed Walsh of the Voyageurs made 26 saves.

Rochester's Paul O'Neil scored an unassisted goal with 2:32 left in regulation time and Jim Pettapiece and Jim Rogers then battled through a scoreless five-minute sudden-death period for their tie.

Jack Paul Peter McDuffe at 8:31 of the final period.

The Bears led 1-0 after the first period on a goal by Guy Gratton. The Nighthawks tied the game early in the second period on Jim Mahoney's unassisted goal, then the Bears went ahead 2-1 as Gary McAdam scored.

Fogolin gave the Bears a 3-1 lead before Scott McPhail scored for New Haven before 4,039 fans in Hershey.

The Indians scored four consecutive goals on their way to the win over the Reds.

Bill Inglis scored twice for the Indians with Jerry Kemp, Don Selling, Norm Dube and Murray Kunz getting one each. Dale Lewis and Bernie Lukowich replied for the Reds before 1,333 fans in Springfield.

Lorange action resumes tonight with New Haven at Richmond.

She Has Support in Fight Against Suspension

OTTAWA (CP) — Joan Wenzel is appealing her life suspension from amateur track and field events and the Canadian Track and Field Association "will support her all the way," its executive-director said here Wednesday.

Kim Twiz said Mrs. Wenzel decided to launch her appeal after meeting Tuesday with the association executives.

Mrs. Wenzel was suspended because a urine test after the two-s 880-metre race at the Pan-American games in Mexico City last summer revealed traces of amphetamines, a banned drug.

The Waterloo, Ont., woman explained that she had inadvertently taken an antihistamine pill the night before the race.

Dr. Ted Percy, the Canadian team medical officer, said the pill, a common cold tablet which can be bought without prescription, apparently became mixed up with the slimming pills Mrs. Wenzel was taking.

Mrs. Wenzel returned the bronze medal she won in the race and assumed she would be eligible for future competitions. A telegram Friday from the International Athletics Federation in London, England, informed her of the suspension.

"We're very sympathetic about the whole thing and will help Joan if we can," Twiz said.

"But, the appeal may not be heard until an IAAF meeting in April. What it means immediately is that Joan will miss the indoor track season, unable to compete because any one who runs against a banned athlete risks suspension as well."

The CTFA has not suspended Mrs. Wenzel, although she has been declared ineligible for competition to protect other runners from suspension.

Ballard Not Around Long

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — George Foreman, former world heavyweight champion, stopped Jody Ballard 56 seconds into the second round of a benefit bout for the United States Olympic Fund on Wednesday night.

Foreman, weighing in at 220 pounds, took control early and never let up. He had the 202-pound Ballard on the mat as the bell sounded ending the first round and put him down again early in the second round before referee Arthur Mercante ended the fight.

He started off with a series of fast jabs to the face of Ballard, a 30-year-old boxer from Houston, who has a 23-3 professional record and had won his last eight fights. A series of lefts and rights had Ballard on the ropes late in the round, and he finally went down from a left-right combination.

Ballard was climbing to his feet at the count of two when the bell sounded, ending the round.

Foreman went right back at his opponent at the start of the second round, unleashing a series of combinations that sent Ballard back to the canvas. The while Ballard was still down, Mercante stepped in and halted the exhibition.

USSR-NHL Series

Buildup of Animosities? Not Likely Says Morrison

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Scotty Morrison, National Hockey League referee-in-chief, said Wednesday he doesn't anticipate any abnormal rough play for the forthcoming NHL-USSR series against two Russian teams.

"Unlike the two previous series against the Russians in 1972 and 1974, I don't think there will be as much of a chance for a buildup of animosities in this series," Morrison said in a telephone interview.

The coming series features the two Russian teams playing four games each against four different NHL clubs.

The Soviet Army team will visit New York Rangers on Dec. 28, Montreal Canadiens on Dec. 31, Boston Bruins on Jan. 3 and Philadelphia Flyers on Jan. 10. The Soviet Wings visit Pittsburgh Penguins on Dec. 30, Buffalo Sabres on Jan. 4, Chicago Black Hawks on Jan. 7 and New York Islanders on Jan. 10.

The 1972 and 1974 eight-game series featured the Russian national team playing against a Canadian team made up of NHL players in 1972 and World Hockey Association players in 1974. The 1972 series especially saw tempers flare and several incidents broke out between opposing players. Both series were played with amateur referees.

Morrison said the entire upcoming series will be played under NHL rules with the possible exception of the curved stick ban. It is expected most of the Russians will have sticks with blades curved more severely than allowed in the NHL but this matter will be discussed further, Morrison said.

While he hasn't set the assignments for game officials, Morrison said he has selected a lineup. Two Russian officials will each work two games as referees and two games each as linesmen. When they work as referees, they will be accompanied by NHL linesmen.

Marlies' Goalie Decides Hockey Is Not for Him

TORONTO (CP) — Steve Tenco returned to the Toronto Marlboro Rexup after a leg injury long enough to decide he had had enough at hockey.

The 19-year-old goaltender from Oshawa, Ont., came to one of the most difficult decisions of his young life during the weekend, a decision that caught Marlboro management by surprise.

"It was a tough decision to make, and I thought about it a long time," said Tenco, whom the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A Series team was looking to as their No. 1 netminder.

"But I wasn't enjoying the game anymore and was just making myself miserable because I wasn't helping the team. I thought the best thing to do was quit."

Tenco was in his third year with the Marlboros, compiling a 4.31 goals-against average in 38 games in his first year and was 4.22 in 28 1-3 games last season. He suffered a severe knee ligament injury in the opening day of training camp this year.

"It was that injury that helped me make up my mind," the young goalie said. "It opened my eyes to the fact that a career in professional hockey is dangerous with one quick injury. So why count on it?

"There's no security and I do think it wasn't the kind of life I wanted."

That also hastened his departure could have been a boredom TS goals scored on him in the 3 2-3 games he played before returning to the bench.

Tenco, who enrolled for the year at Scarborough's Sir Wilfrid Laurier Collegiate, has since transferred his academics back to Oshawa and G. L. Robarts high school where he has "a little freedom from worrying about hockey."

"We had hoped Steve could do the job for us this season," said Marlboro general manager Frank Boucha. "He had the experience we need. It's unfair to judge what he did in those three games this season because of the injury. We thought he could get back . . . eventually."

Marlboro still have three goaltenders in camp—Doug Carty, Steve Weeks and Dave Hillier—but all are inexperienced and Boucha says they'll wait to "see who can do the job."

"I hope we just get lucky and one will come up and take charge."

Five-minute Major Hurts Smiths Falls

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Brockville Warriors capitalized on a third-period high-sticking penalty Wednesday to defeat Smiths Falls Bears 7-4 in the only game played in the Central Junior Hockey League.

Moving from a 4-4 second-period tie the Warriors got goals from Bill Maxwell and Bob Mitchell after Gary Turner of Smiths Falls took the five-minute major at 8:31. Turner had to sit out the whole penalty.

Maxwell scored three times in the game, the other Brockville goals going to Trevor Crawford, Fred Martin and Bruce Northrop.

Pete Hunter, with two, Tim Torrance and Steve Shawler scored for Smiths Falls.

The victory moved the Warriors ahead of Nepean Raiders into third place in the six-team league in the only game of the night.

Tonight the Raiders are in Hawkesbury to play the league-leading Nationals.

Herron Blasts Patriots' Coach After Being Dropped by NFL Club

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Running back Mack Herron, formerly with New England Patriots, said Thursday he was invited from the National Football League team because of a personality clash with coach Chuck Fairbanks.

In a copyright story Wednesday in the Quincy Patriot-Ledger, Herron said Fairbanks had "lied to me" and "has a lot to learn about working with men."

Herron, a former star with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League, was cut on waivers about two weeks ago and picked up by Atlanta Falcons.

"The real problem was a personality conflict between me and Fairbanks," he said. "He was wrong about me and I want to clear his name."

Herron also said he was used as scapegoat by Fairbanks.

"He seemed to blame me for the way the whole season was turning out," he said. "Not that I'm good, I wonder who he will blame!"

Herron maintained Fairbanks said they would discuss a pay raise at the end of the pre-season.

"Fairbanks lied to me," Herron said. "He and (assistant general manager Peter) Hadhazy tricked me. They kept putting me off and when the season started to go bad and I got some more injuries, they never spoke to me about it again.

"Hadhazy indicated the Patriots had given me enough just by giving me another chance at pro football. I was thankful for that and I showed it by playing as hard as I could and having the kind of year I had.

"I made a mistake Four years ago when he was arrested on drug charges in Canada and I admitted it and I paid for it. But they expected me to keep on paying for it."

Celtics 'Throw' the Game To Seattle Supersonics

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Coach Tom Heinsohn did not like the way Boston Celtics threw the ball away Wednesday night in a National Basketball Association game against Seattle Sonics.

"We threw the ball away 2, ton times in the first half," he said. "We just threw the ball away, that's all."

For their generosity, which included 12 turnovers in the first period alone, the Celtics received a 118-98 defeat by the Sonics. Guards Slick Watts and Fred Brown scored nine points in the last three minutes as Seattle won in the closing minutes.

In Wednesday's other games, Detroit Pistons beat Kansas City Kings 120-104, Atlanta Hawks defeated New Orleans Jazz 113-108, Houston Rockets topped Washington Bullets 97-91, Phoenix Suns shaped Buffalo Braves 107-103 and Portland Trail Blazers beat Los Angeles Lakers 118-101.

In American Basketball Association games, Kentucky Colonels downed Denver Nuggets 113-107, the Spirits of St. Louis trimmed Indiana Pacers 96-94 and San Antonio Spurs beat Virginia Squires 141-132.

The Boston-Seattle gas e was marked by a fight between centre Dave Cowens of the Celtics and Tom Burleson of the Supersonics midway through the fourth quarter. Both players were ejected.

Brown led all scorers with 30 points and Watts had 16. Jo Jo White topped Boston with 25.

Beavers Turn It on In 3rd Period Blitz

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Sherbrooke Beavers saved their scoring muscle for the second half of their Quebec Major Junior hockey League game Wednesday night before romping an eight-goal barrage and recording an 8-3 trouncing of Shawinigan Dynamos.

Following a scoreless first period, the Beavers handed the Dynamos the first goal when Jean-Marc Rosanski beat Sherbrooke goaltender Guy Bouchard at 9:17 of the second period.

Less than a minute later at 10:03, the Beavers went to work, getting a goal from Fernand Leblanc. Before the period ended, Ron Carter with two goals and Daniel Chicoine with one put Sherbrooke ahead to stay.

In the third period, Chicoine and Leblanc each scored their second goals with Peter Marsh and Daniel Hade contributed singles to round out the Sherbrooke onslaught.

Yvan Hamelin and Rene Hamelin scored third-period goals to complete the scoring for the Dynamos, who were clobbered 36-25 by the Beavers before 3,488 spectators.

The game had originally been scheduled for Dec. 22 but was moved back to allow the Beavers to compete in an international junior hockey tournament in Halifax Dec. 22 to Jan. 4.

Pope Blesses New King

MADRID (AP) — Flanked by European royalty and their Common Market presidents, King Juan Carlos received the highest blessing of the Roman Catholic Church and the cheers of thousands of countrymen today as Spain paid official homage to its new leader.

Shouts of "Long live Spain" and "Long live the King" greeted the 37-year-old monarch and his wife, Queen Sofia, as they rode through the capital's streets to mass at the 16th-century Church of Los Jeronimos ahead of a full military parade.

The ceremony, one week after the death of Gen. Francisco Franco, underscored Europe's new view of Spain and the king's hopes to begin moving toward more democracy.

Security was tight. The royal couple smiled and waved at the crowd from a closed car.

Balance Jumps

MONTREAL (CP) — Mercantile Bank of Canada's balance of revenue for the year ended Oct. 31 jumped to $11,402,344 or $1.57 a share from $3,130,134 or 44 cents a share last year, the bank announced Wednesday. Revenue rose by 26.8 per cent to $94,154.64 and expenses increased by 12.4 per cent to $75,581,770. Total assets reached $1,268,162,567 at Oct. 31, an 84.3-per-cent increase from the corresponding date last year.

Will Charge Interest

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for Master Charge reiterated Wednesday that credit card holders will be charged interest on unpaid purchases during the postal strike dispute. A Royal Bank spokesman said Wednesday that Chargex card holders across Canada who normally pay their bills on time will not be charged interest during the postal strike. However, customers who are frequently tardy in paying their bills will be charged interest, he said.

Workers to Invest

HAMILTON (CP) — Employees of Essex Packers agreed in principle Tuesday to invest in the meat-packing company rather than lose their jobs. Under the measures it would be compulsory for the 600 employees to invest between $400 and $1,000 each—a total of about $300,000—in the financially-troubled meat-packing firm. The move is an attempt by the employees to attract another $1.5 million in federal and private aid in order to save the company.

Legislation Urged

GUELPH, Ont., (CP) — The Guelph Chamber of Commerce urged federal and provincial government members Wednesday to introduce legislation eliminating the right to strike of employees in essential public services. In a news release, the chamber said the private sector no longer can tolerate the threat of serious disruptions which the country is increasingly less able to afford, the release said.

Announces Contract

NEW LISKEARD, Ont. (CP) — The Temiskaming board of education announced Wednesday the signing of two-year contract agreements giving its 160 elementary teachers pay increases of 10 per cent and its 180 secondary teachers a 15-per-cent increase.

Firm May Close

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Jack McDonald, president of Sovereign Group of Companies said Wednesday the firm may have to close permanently because of heavy losses if the country-wide postal strike is not settled soon. The company, which has laid off 220 of its 300 employees since the postal strike began Oct. 21, has lost most of its Christmas sales, he said. Sovereign, a manufacturer and distributor of goods ranging from radios to cutlery, relies entirely on mail service to advertise, receive orders and deliver products.

Negotiate Contract

TORONTO (CP) — Contract negotiations are under way here between representatives of 18,000 non-professional hospital workers in Ontario and the provincial government. A spokesman said the meetings, which began Tuesday, mark the first time the workers have bargained together for a single wage package. The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), include registered nursing assistants, electrician, cleaners, orderlies and kitchen help in 47 hospitals across the province. In the past, each hospital negotiated its own contract.

Inquiry Adjourns

CLEVELAND (AP) — A U.S. Coast Guard board of inquiry adjourned Wednesday and until Dec. 10 after hearing testimony that the ore carrier Edmund Fitzgerald is lying at the bottom of Lake Superior in at least two pieces.

Two Killed

HEARST, Ont. (CP) — Police said Wednesday that Marie Morin, 31, and Aline DuFour, 48, both of Hearst, were killed Tuesday on Highway 11 just west of here after the car in which they were riding collided with a dump truck. Three other persons were injured in the collision near this community about 70 miles northwest of Timmins.

Consumes More

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is producing more butter and consuming less, eliminating the need for any more imports, dairy commission chairman E. J. Powers said Wednesday.

He said in an interview after testifying at a Commons agriculture committee that there have been no butter imports since the 1975-76 dairy year began April 1. Imports in the previous two years averaged between 60 and 65 million pounds.

Prof to Fight

PROF TO FIGHT

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — Marsha Fyvel, a professor of the human relations and counseling department at the University of Waterloo, said Wednesday she has been notified that her contract at the university is to be terminated. Mrs. Fyvel said in an interview that her contract is being terminated as of June 30, 1976, because of a judgment by senior faculty members that it did not merit renewing.

Two Languages

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial courts will operate in two languages here next month under a pilot project announced Wednesday by Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry in a speech to an Alliance for Bilingualism conference.

Cabbie Stabbed

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Peel regional police said Wednesday a Toronto cab driver was robbed at gunpoint Tuesday night by a man he picked up in Mississauga. Police said the 26-year-old driver, whose name they did not release, was robbed of $20 by a passenger he had driven to a shopping centre.

Producer Admits Importing Eggs

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Jos Hudson, a director of the Ontario Egg Producers' Marketing Board, said Wednesday he imported more than four million eggs from the United States this year.

However, in a telephone interview from his home in Lyn, Ont., Mr. Hudson denied that he sold the eggs to the board.

He said he imported Grade A large and extra large eggs. The eggs he sold to the board during the same period were Grade A medium and small.

Looking at the Future

Convicts, played by Steve Rose (left) and Peter Carpenter, look at the young Restaurant, portrayed by John Wentworth, who represents the future in the Christmas production My Three Angels. The comedy-drama will be performed 8 p.m. Nov. 27-29 and Dec. 3-6 at Pinnacle Playhouse.

Latest Guild Play Christmas Comedy

By SUSAN McCONNELL
Staff Reporter

The Belleville Theatre Guild has bowed to an old tradition of welcoming the festive season with a Christmas production.

My Three Angels opened Wednesday night under the direction of Ernst Knobel.

The comedy-drama isn't a study in technique. It's simply two hours of family entertainment.

The year is 1910 and the place is a colony in French Guiana where the worst criminals were sent to pay for their crimes.

It's about three talented and friendly convicts who repair the roof on a home belonging to Felix Decotat, a local shopkeeper played by Fred Webster.

The criminals — two are murderers and one a swindler, repair more than the roof. With the help of their pet snake "Monsieur" contortionist Lechevalier, miserly uncle played by Jim Alexander and his nephew played by Jim Spence, who were out to ruin the Decotat family.

Iris Sanderson as Emilie Decotat, the wife of the jolly stubbornly honest Felix and Debbie Kinmont as Marie Louise, the innocent daughter, gave creditable performances.

Using line similar to the Vaudeville era, the actors worked hard to make them sound new and refreshing.

The town influence was played convincingly by Susan Dawes while John Wentworth performed briefly as a young lieutenant.

Despite a shaky first act, the best performance belonged to Mr. Kitcher as Joseph the convict who swindled, wheedled and dealed his way into jail. "The world is full of our kind," he says. "The only difference is that I get caught."

The music was written and performed by John Kidd.

An excellent set, complete with bamboo shades and tropical plants, was designed by Marie Vacinca and Barry Howard.

For an evening of Christmas entertainment the admission is modest for My Three Angels — $2 adults and $1 for senior citizens and students. The curtain will rise at 8 p.m. for Nov. 27-29 and Dec. 3-6 performances.

LONDON (AP)—Covent Garden, one of the world's leading opera houses, issued its annual warning Monday that it is heading for financial problems unless it gets more money.

Chairman Sir Claus Moser told a news conference after presenting his annual report for the end of the current financial year, the Royal Opera House Covent Garden is officially known—will be $800,000 in debt unless more government grants are forthcoming.

At the moment, the Royal Opera House's income is from ticket sales, donations from banks and business houses and an annual grant from the Arts Council, the government body that acts as a patron for the arts in Britain. In the last financial year, ticket sales brought in nearly $4 million following an increase in prices. Donations produced $440,000 and the Arts Council grant was $5.1 million.

Moser said this was enough to give Covent Garden, which also houses the Royal Ballet, a surplus of $84,000 at the end of the financial year that ended last March 31.

LONDON (AP)—Ballet star Rudolph Nureyev has signed a contract to make his film debut as Rudolph Valentino.

A United Artist spokesman said Nureyev, 37, would star in a film biography of Valentino to be directed by Ken Russell. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Ronnie Milsap doesn't want to be remembered because he is blind.

"I'd rather be accepted for my music," he says.

Despite his blindness, he has accomplished more in the last two years than some sighted stars do in 20. In 1974, he was voted male vocalist of the year by the Country Music Association (CMA) and this year for Legend in My Time.

Milsap, 36, said in an interview his blindness has helped his career to some extent.

"It wins immediate attention," he said, "But acceptance is another story. You've got to work for that, too.

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Flames burned through the nostalgic Andy Hardy street set on an old MGM motion picture lot, charring to the ground the church Mickey Rooney attended when he starred in a 1937 series, authorities said.

No one was hurt Friday night as the fire hit the old set on a 6-acre set which MGM said two years ago to developers, firemen said.

IN THE STAR

Shamu, a two-ton killer whale who lives at San Diego's Sea World in San Diego, Calif., has been given the part of Yankee Doodle Whale for a special half-hour salute being made to mark Bicentennial celebrations in the U.S.

IS A FIRST

Dracula, a film based on the Dracula story, is the first over made for the deaf and hard-of-hearing. It recently had its debut in Toronto. Directed by Peter Weinberg who lost his hearing in the Second World War, the film uses both sign language and a voice track.

WAS FIRST CENSUS

The first census of Canada was taken in 1666 and showed 3,215 inhabitants exclusive of native Indians.

When you're offered a money-back guarantee on rustproofing. The last thing you want is your money back.
A lot of new people selling rustproofing are coming out and offering you 10 year guarantees, lifetime guarantees, even "we'll fix it" guarantees. But how do you know if their rustproofing works if they've only been rustproofing for a few months? You don't.
But you do know that Ziebart has been protecting cars in Canada for over 10 years. Ziebart works. And we've proved it. So we give you a 10 year, money-back guarantee.
But we don't think you'll ever need it.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol
Friday, Nov. 28, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Bargains or agreements today will be advantageous to you provided they're in a area where you have some past experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you apply yourself today, you have the ability to focus your talents toward a profitable end. Concentrate on things that bring results.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have a commanding air about you today. It will draw the respect of others. They'll go along with you, and you can even the little pros you give.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Complex tasks won't faze you today, nor will knotty problems. You field everything—and make it look easy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're equipped for problems that challenge the brain, not brawn, today. Others will find you're long in utilizing the old gray matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This could be a very profitable day if you are dealing with those you can trust and with whom you have reason to profit in the past.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Although you may get the idea that people aren't listening to your ideas, they are. They will give you credit when your hunch bear fruit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) For best results, keep your commercial dealings to yourself today. Don't let others know your financial position or what you're planning for.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your knack with words will have a catalytic effect on contemporaries who are around you today. They'll enjoy following your example.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) You can be very successful today in accomplishing business. The opposition will find it hard to overtake you. You'll know instinctively what power they have.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your powers of observation today will prove to be keen what others have in mind. You will listen and this knowledge to your advantage.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Thinking in bold terms and following through with plans you have weighed carefully will pay off in extra income soon.

Vote For Ordinance

RENO, Nev. (AP) — City council has passed an ordinance calling for private citizens for wedding chapels. It provides for adequate roofing of fees and control of outdoor advertising. Dan Crulle, Reno Business Bureau, says deceptive price quoting and misleading advertising are the two major complaints about wedding chapels.

Ladies Welcomed

LONDON (CP) — One of Britain's last two country inns in Glamorgan, Wales, has been opened to women and the men who regrets it most is a woman. Elizabeth Davies is 44, has retired after 44 years as licensee of the bar, said that women wanted a drink she would serve them in her kitchen.

Ombudsman Investigates Training School Brutality

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario ombudsman Arthur Maloney said in a news release Wednesday his office is investigating alleged brutality in the province's training schools.

The ombudsman's announcement came after William Bercuse, dismissed last April from his job as an Ontario probation officer, charged that staff at the schools routinely assault children in their care and encourage brutality among the children themselves.

Change to Cigars Not Good Solution

By G. C. THOMPSON MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband quit smoking. He's not smoking cigarettes, that is. Now he smokes cigars, and that's quite proof of his accomplishment. The only trouble is wrong is that he (I'm sure of it) inhales the cigar smoke. I think this just as bad as, inhaling cigarette smoke? I can't convince him of this—Mrs. M.T.

I have never bought the idea that you can quit smoking by finding some other substitute product to smoke. Somehow this doesn't square with my logic.

There is a lot of evidence that smokers who switch to cigars do continue to inhale, however in the hope without even realizing it.

A recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association confirms this suspicion. In fact, according to the report, inhaling cigar smoke may be more harmful than inhaling cigarette smoke.

Perhaps if you can't convince your husband, Dr. Allen L. Goldman and he conducted a study in which subjects were treated for a blood factor called "carboxyhemoglobin." This, when present in certain levels in the body, is considered a risk to health. The substance was found to be four times higher among cigarette smokers than among cigar smokers. Of cigar smokers, it was found to be eight times higher.

Conclusion: If your husband wants to quit, he should quit altogether. Many cigar smokers do not inhale at first, but gradually fall back into old cigarette-smoking habits. The cigar also indicates, incidentally, that cigar smokers who were never habitual cigarette smokers do not inhale usually.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My question concerns a douche that was prescribed for my vaginitis. It contains iodine (from the label information). The problem is that a while ago there was some talk about iodine in relation to my thyroid condition. Will iodine uptake was found to be somewhat low in a test.

It all confuses me. I am 31, and am supposed to start on a medication for my thyroid problem—S. H.

Some medically prescribed douches do contain iodine in small concentrations. Although you mention thy brand name in your letter is one of them. The presence in the douche solution would not affect your thyroid function either way, nor would it affect the thyroid medication you are to take.

You may find, incidentally, that bringing your thyroid condition under control may ease your vaginitis problem. The thyroid gland helps to regulate with hormone regulation and tissue chemistry.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the relationship between allergies and chicken pox? Can an older person go through from a child with chicken pox? Can children have allergies? Can older persons have chicken pox? Is allergies a nerve disorder?—L. T.

Both are virus-caused diseases and the symptoms are very similar but not identical. There is always some confusion over this. Both diseases are spread by droplets as are colds, flu and other viruses. Although the evidence is not clear, adults have been known to contract shingles after being exposed to a child with chicken pox and children have been known to develop chicken box after exposure to an adult with shingles. Both diseases can occur at any age.

Shingles is considered a form of herpes virus, since the virus attacks a ganglion—a knot-like nerve. The medical term is zoster. The symptoms usually occur at the waist area, usually on one side.

Both chicken pox and shingles provide lifetime immunity after one attack, but neither provides immunity against the other.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Eight months ago I had a complete physical, and other than finding a marked nerve loss in my left ear I was told I was in good physical condition for a 55-year-old woman.

Then about four months ago I had the experiencing dizzy spells upon getting out of my chair after sitting short distances. The sensation lasts about 10 to 15 seconds and I feel a little woozy for a few minutes. I've even had a bout when I got up from a sitting position. Could you kindly explain?—J.L.V.

I can only speculate on possible causes, although your earlier visit to your doctor strongly suggests an infection of the inner ear, the labyrinth, which has caused disturbance in the balance mechanism located there.

Without such a history, one would suspect postural hypotension—a drop of a drop in blood pressure when you adjust from a sitting to a standing position.

After eight months it is time to return to your physician and ask him to investigate further the hearing problem and the dizzy spells. Perhaps you should see a specialist in these disorders.

Sale Led to Study

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says a $100,000 sale of seven mobile homes to the controversial building Mr. Olympic village led to a police investigation of Paul Kichkedjian.

Mobile homes for exorbitant prices," th newspaper quotes a source as saying.

The mobile homes have been sold as on-site offices by the developers said the source refers to the combined squad of RCMP and Quebec Provincial Police officers who carried out nearly 60 raids Tuesday and Wednesday on homes and offices of key officials associated with Terrasses Caserini-Communautaire building the Olympic village project.

The newspaper says investigations began when two city councillors, making security checks of contracts issued by the Olympic organizing committee, were asked to verify allegations surrounding the sale of the mobile homes.

The councillors verified the allegations and made a report to their superiors who in turn transmitted the information to the provincial police, said another police source.

Meanwhile, the owner of the firm which sold the mobile homes to the developers said the sale price was not out of the ordinary and offered to make public all documentation pertaining to the transaction.

One Price System Needed by 1976

OTTAWA (CP) — The price freeze will have to decide whether to stick to a one-price system for domestic oil before expectations open early next year on new increases, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Wednesday.

The question of price freezes imposed by some provinces this year would have to be ironed out before the haggling starts on how much prices will go up when the agreement runs out June 30, he said.

Domestic oil prices went to $9 a barrel from $6.50 on July 1 following an agreement reached by Ottawa and Alberta. But freezes imposed by Ontario and Manitoba delayed the increase in their provinces until mid-November.

In addition, British Columbia and Nova Scotia forced the oil companies to go below public prices boards to justify the increases, finally allowing them less than the $4 cents a gallon obtained in the other provinces.

"The provinces have got to realize that the companies need a price increase to pay for additional exploration needed to find oil for the country," the minister told the Commons resources committee.

He said most of the increases expected only I should go to the companies. In recent years, the oil industry has complained that most of the price increases went to governments in taxes and royalties.

But he added the additional revenue would be provided "on the clear understanding that it will be spent in Canada on exploration and pipelines to carry oil and gas."

Companies would be monitored closely by the government and if the money was not being spent as anticipated, "other measures would be taken."

Parents May Pray

LONDON (CP) — Children have caused damages estimated at $100,000 since 1971 at Chiltern district council's estate in Buckinghamshire, and parents may have to pay for their children's vandalism, Council is considering the idea following a complaint by Jack Simmonds of the Federation of Chiltern Tenants Associations.

French Post Office Is Sharp Contrast To Striking Canadian Counterpart

PARIS (CP) — While Canadians wrestle with postal strikes and post-office workers balk at automation, the postal system in France offers a study in contrasts.

•A new postal code is being used by 87 per cent of the population, says Jean Decocon, a senior official with the government's Postes, Telephones et Telecommunications—known universally as "les PTT."

•And a recent survey by the PTT found that 97 per cent of those questioned believe postal workers in France are competent while 70 per cent regard the mail service as "well-organized."

•Small wonder, when the French are treated to twice-daily mail delivery in most urban centres and a letter posted at one end of France can be routinely delivered to an address at the other end of the country the next day.

Behind the efficiency of delivery is the PTT's private fleet of 22 aircraft, which criss-cross France every weekday night, channelling mail to central distribution points for local processing.

When the PTT began its projected 13-year program to introduce major technological change in mail processing in 1974, the government was greeted with a six-week strike.

Since then, the government has held information meetings with the three main unions involved, started a campaign to keep postal workers abreast of changes and broadened its public information program.

The 1974 strike also resulted in the replacement of Pierre Laroq by Aymar Achille-Fould as minister responsible for the PTT.

The government has provided the unions with assurances that automation won't mean layoffs. While the number of workers involved in sorting is expected to decline to about 25,000 from the current 28,000 by 1985, the reduction will be effected through normal retirements and attrition.

Having decided not to fight automation, postal workers have focused their attention on salaries and working conditions—neither of them enviable by Canadian standards.

The postal unions have begun a series of work stoppages and slowdowns to back their insistence on a reduction in the current work week of 41 hours spread over five days.

Salaries are pegged to a system which takes into account whether a worker is married and how many children he must support.

A single postman starts at the equivalent of $468 a month, with another $80 added for "risks of the trade"—dogs and bad weather are included—and about $438 a year in bonuses. A married postman with two children gets about $530 and extras.

After 15 years, the single postman would be earning $518 and after 35 years $580. At the lowest rate, however, the single worker's income tax would be only about $600.

PTT officials report that postal workers turn to that line of work mainly because of declining job opportunities in the rural regions from which most of them come. A substantial number insist on working in their native region.

And public respect for the postal service is reflected in the fact that postmen—at least the older ones—express pride in their distinctive uniforms.

If the postal system is affected by Canadian standards, her in France would make the same claim for the telephone system, which the PTT also administers.

Local calls continually go astray. Public telephones often cannot be operated without the tokens known as "jetons"—and tokens are not always available.

Long-distance calls can be even more tormenting, with hour-long waits for a connection even to a country as close as England.

The waiting period for installation of a private telephone in a French home can be two years or longer. Influence and even bribes are widely believed to play a role in getting an earlier phone connection.

Postal Conflicts Narrowed Down

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The record-long national postal strike appears destined to last at least one more weekend with Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey at home in Montreal until Monday.

Both sides jockeyed all day Thursday—the 28th of the strike—but were unable to agree on ground rules that would allow them to meet for the first direct negotiations since Nov. 4.

Resuming negotiations during the weekend, Mr. Mackasey said, would be "inconvenient but not impossible."

Paul Mitchell, spokesman for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPE), said the union had decided "there would be nothing to say publicly until Friday at the earliest."

Mr. Mitchell said the national executive would remain in Ottawa today in an attempt to decide on a reply to a post office offer delivered Tuesday.

A post office spokesman said that offer outlined the three areas where the post office was willing to bargain—equal wage status for part-time workers with full-time workers, injury compensation and reclassification of mail handlers.

Mr. Mackasey said outside the Commons that "the issues have been narrowed down to one or two clauses but I can't say what they are."

He said he was "tired of living on rumors" and denied categorically that any secret negotiations had been going on.

"There are no direct talks," he said. "It's just a ploy by the executive to keep their members from returning to work."

Mr. Mackasey was asked by reporters if he had altered his original offer of $1.70-an-hour increase over 30 months with a 40-hour work week.

"Don't ask me that," he replied.

Union officials refused to comment on rumors they had lowered their demands for a $2.73-an-hour increase over 27 months and a 35-hour week.

The union rate now is $4.38 an hour.

Meanwhile, the department of supply and services said Thursday that sold ups security and other federal pension cheques were to be delivered by letter carriers to recipients by Dec. 11, about two weeks ahead of the normal delivery date.

Family allowance cheques, combining payments for November and December, will be delivered Dec. 4 in most areas.

Ottawa Spends Over $1 Billion On Patrol Aircraft and Tanks

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government plans to spend at least $1 billion on a fleet of new patrol aircraft and between $80 million and $200 million on tanks while generally giving a higher priority to defence spending.

Defence Minister James Richardson announced the decision Thursday, adding it is hoped purchase of the aircraft from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. will result in $200 million in business for Canadian industry.

The government hopes to gain industrial benefits totalling $580 million from the aircraft purchase but has only $383 million in work for Canadian industry tied down by agreement. Lockheed is obliged to give its "best effort" to get another $285 million in work through aircraft sales. Lockheed, meanwhile, issued a statement saying there will be $886 million in benefits—$238 million of it at Canadair of Montreal. It said the contract will create 2,500 jobs, one-third of which in turn would create another 2,500 jobs.

Under the minister's announcement the budget for defence this fiscal year is almost $3 billion when supplementary estimates are taken into account. Capital spending is about $430 million.

Meanwhile, defence will have to find about $50 million through some economies to make latitude payments on the LRPAs and tanks.

Capital spending will eventually reach 20 per cent of the defence budget.

Mr. Richardson said the P-3 will cost $642 in 1975 dollars. Other costs would take that to $826 million.

The aircraft would be used for NATO work and Canadian sovereignty protection.

He was vague on industrial benefits for Canadian industry resulting from what is believed to be the largest single Canadian military contract in peacetime.

He said he would leave details to Don Jamieson, trade and industry minister, who is expected to make an announcement today on restructuring of the Canadian aerospace industry, possibly involving de Havilland Aircraft of Canada in Toronto and Canadair in Montreal.

But the Lockheed statement said 90 companies in six provinces will get work as a result of the contract.

These included Canadair, CAE Industries of Montreal, Canadian Marconi, Litton Systems of Canada Ltd., Bristol Aerospace, Northwest Industries, SPAR Aerospace Ltd., and Hermes Electronics Ltd.

Car-bus Collision Sends 8 to Hospital

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Eight people were injured and total property damage was estimated at almost $15,000 in a car-bus collision at the intersection of Catherine and Yeoman streets in Belleville Thursday.

City police said Chung Fei Wong, 22, of 38 Dunbar St., in Belleville was charged with failure to obey a stop sign.

A Belleville General Hospital spokesman said Wong, driver of the car, is listed in serious condition in the intensive care unit with a dislocated right elbow and fractures to his left rib and left collarbone.

The spokesman said that of Wong's five passengers, who are all residents of 38 Dunbar St. as well, three were admitted to hospital.

They are: Ming Pok, 19, in serious condition with a fractured pelvis and a concussion; Maileund Tso, 22, in serious condition with chest injuries; and Muukyeng Ying, 22, in fair condition with a back injury and possible internal injuries.

The other two passengers, Henry Kwond, 17, and William Ying Tong Ld, 19, were treated and released for minor injuries.

Also treated and released were Wally Vesterveil, 23, of 19 King George Square, driver of a Belleville Transit Commission bus and his passenger, Lyn Connolly, 19, of 19 Benjamin St., both of Belleville.

Police said the bus was northbound on Yeoman St. and the car was eastbound on Catherine St. when the accident occurred at 12:40 p.m.

Constable Ken Gutoskie estimated between $8,000-$10,000 damage to the bus and $4,000 damage to the 1975-model Chevrolet Nova.

Air Canada Executive Leaves with Bitterness

MONTREAL (CP) — Yves Pratte left his post as Air Canada's top executive Thursday with bitter words for the federal government and its lack of support for the airline's embattled senior management.

He became the second major executive to leave the airline this year. Yves Renaud, vice-president of marketing, resigned in February following revelation of a $100,000 payment made by Air Canada to a travel agent.

The 50-year-old Mr. Pratte quit as chairman and chief executive at a difficult time for the airline, as it faces rising fuel costs and slumping passenger demand. The Crown corporation had a deficit of more than $9 million in 1974.

Following Mr. Pratte's resignation, Transport Minister Otto Lang told the Commons that Pierre Takcbereau, chairman of Canadian National Railways, will head Air Canada until a successor is chosen.

Mr. Lang later told reporters that it is important for the management of the airline to name a successor but he would not commit himself to a deadline.

In his letter to Mr. Lang, Mr. Pratte said Air Canada's senior management had faced "unprecedented charges of alleged incompetence and inefficiency," which had not been answered by the government.

In recent months, opposition MPs led by Elmer Mackay (PC—Central Nova) have been asking tough questions about some of the airline's financial dealings.

Mr. Mackay had described Mr. Pratte as unfit for his job and said his "penchant for hard work" complicated matters because the airline chairman did not delegate enough responsibility.

Mr. Pratte had been a lawyer in private practice before his appointment in 1968 and had no previous experience in the airline industry.

He said in his letter the attacks had been "more than schooled by the media," and had been given "some aura of credibility" by the lack of government response.

But it was the establishment of the Estey commission which indicated clearly to "many of us" that the government had lost confidence in "my stewardship" of the airline, Mr. Pratte said.

The commission was created after Mr. Menard left the airline with disclosure of the payment in the travel agent.

Groom Killed By Brother At Party

WESTLAND, Mich. (AP) — A wedding reception ended in tragedy Thursday when the bridegroom was killed while trying to break up a fight between his two brothers.

Westland police said the fight broke out outside the wedding reception for Robert Lee, 22, and Sandra Nicosi.

Witnesses said the scuffle involved Carl Lee, 25, and his brother Terry, 20. It was their third fight during the reception, said police, who were called to break up the first two encounters.

Witnesses told police that Carl struck Robert when he intervened and that Robert's head hit a wooden column, his died at the scene.

Police said charges may be laid.

HAMILTON, Bermuda (Reuter) — After two years of investigation, a coroner's jury named two convicted armed robbers Thursday as the killers of Bermuda Governor Richard Sharples and his aide de-camp in March, 1973.

No More Co-operation

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Thursday night even if there is a settlement of the nuclear dispute with India there will be no further nuclear co-operation with that country.

Tests May Be Mandatory

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said today he will recommend to Ontario that breath-analysis tests be mandatory for all drivers involved in traffic accidents causing injury or death. He told the legislature that the Criminal Code now gives the policeman the option of whether to give the test. Mr. McMurtry said the test should be mandatory where practical.

Cheques Delivered Dec. 5

TORONTO (CP) — Family allowance cheques for November and December are to be delivered Dec. 5 across Ontario by letter carriers called in to work, Ed Howorth, regional information officer for the post office, said Thursday. About 250,000 of the 1.3 million Ontario cheques have arrived at postal stations and the rest are expected to arrive within the next week, he said.

Britain's Medical System In Crisis

LONDON (AP) — Britain's system of socialized medicine faced the greatest crisis in its 27-year history today after thousands of doctors began a work slowdown Thursday.

Hospitals prepared to close thousands of non-urgent admissions were turned away.

Some of Britain's 19,000 hospital doctors, particularly in Scotland, refused to join the protest, but first reports indicated a majority had carried out their threat to put themselves at once or to put in a nine-to-five, 40-hour week. They normally work twice that many hours.

On Monday 11,000 specialists are to join the slowdown.

The crisis followed weeks of bickering between doctors' representatives and Britain's Labor government.

The hospital doctors, whose pay starts at about $8,000 a year, are demanding more money.

The specialists are battling for the right to treat private patients in hospitals operated by the National Health Service (NHS). Social Services Minister Barbara Castle wants them to work only for the state.

Miss Castle said the doctors' action is aimed at breaching the government's anti-inflation policy, which limits annual pay raises to £6 (about $13) a year.

The Weather

Synopsis: The light snow or drizzle hitting most Ontario areas will clear later in the day. Northern regions generally will receive some sunny periods as opposed to their dull southern neighbors. Temperatures in the south, however, will be mostly above freezing today, dropping below zero only at night. The North will be colder.

Cheese Sales High

Darlene Morgan is assisted by longtime district cheese producer Harold Elliott at the once-a-year-only sale in Belleville that follows British Empire Dairy Show. Some of the best cheddar cheese in the country is on sale — attracting steady volume customer like Lorene Reid, of Carrying Place.

Annual Cheese Sale Here Sells 950 lbs. First Day

BY HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

It's that time of year again—when cheddar cheese fanciers are lucky to live in Belleville.

Some of the best cheddar in the country is available to them. And they're buying it.

Cheese at the annual British Empire Dairy Show went on sale Wednesday afternoon after the judging was over.

By last Thursday Harold Elliott, longtime district cheese producer, estimated about 950 lbs. of cheese had been sold over the counter at the Front Street location.

By that time 150 lbs. of curd—all that was in stock—had been bought up, and they'd sent to a cheese factory for more.

Mr. Elliott—34 years in the business and former owner of Elliott Cheese Factory—will empty the show shelves of 3,000 lbs. of cheese before the sale ends Saturday at noon.

"This is the best chance you have of buying quality cheese," said Mr. Elliott, "It's the best — and maybe the biggest — cheese show in Canada with the top cheese in the country."

Biggest demand is for old cheddar. Mr. Elliott — helping Darlene Morgan of Foxboro with sales—says it sells as fast as medium and mild cheese together.

Not that all the cheese is sold. There was an estimated 60,000 lbs. of it — in different shapes and sizes — in the show.

With the show sale over — a certain amount of the cheese is reserved — to be matured for a year more.

Course Teaches Children to Cope with Handicap

By AL HARAS
Staff Reporter

Some asthmatic children sit "in the corner" and don't participate in school sports because they fear an attack that will take their breath away.

And that is one problem that a six-week conditioning program at Belleville General Hospital has tried to end, says Margaret Hallam, executive secretary of the Hastings-Prince Edward Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association.

"Some children withdraw," she said Thursday, "they sit on the sidelines and watch."

The conditioning program, the second held in Belleville by the association, is aimed at teaching asthmatic children diaphragmatic breathing and increasing the child's exercise tolerance.

Besides actually teaching the correct course's 19 children, their parents are given the opportunity to learn to cope — through lectures and demonstrations — with their child's breathing problems.

Children who suffer from asthma — a form of muscular constriction that blocks the flow of air into the lungs — are taught through the exercises to breath from the diaphram.

Belleville hospital physiotherapist Wendy Sunderland said Thursday, children when they are having difficulty breathing, tend to overuse the upper part and underuse the lower part of the lungs.

The course, which ended its series of six one-hour sessions Thursday night, is aimed at teaching children to concentrate and be aware of their breathing.

It also aims to increase, by means of gradually raising the number and duration of exercises, a child's ability to participate actively in sports and exercising.

EFFECTIVE DECEMBER 1,1975 THE UNINSURED MOTOR VEHICLE FEE IS $60. BUT IT'S STILL NOT INSURANCE.

Owners wishing to buy 1976 licence renewal stickers must pay $60 into the Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Fund unless they have insurance.

The fund was established by the Ontario Government to compensate innocent victims of uninsured owners and drivers. It does not protect the uninsured owner or driver.

When innocent victims collect from the fund, uninsured owners and drivers must pay back to the fund every penny paid out on their behalf. The uninsured owner and driver's licence is suspended until arrangements are made to pay back all judgements and costs.

A bad accident can result in judgements of $50,000 or more. This means that insured owners and drivers are taking the risk of losing all their savings and property and a lot of their future earnings.

Uninsured owners and drivers should think twice about the gamble they are taking and decide to buy insurance rather than pay the $60 fee.

Only by buying insurance can you protect yourself against the possibility of major claims resulting from accidents in which you are at fault.

Remember, the Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Fund is not insurance. It compensates the innocent victims but not the uninsured owners and drivers.

So, before you buy your 1976 licence renewal sticker, ask yourself: Can you afford not to have insurance?

Transition Period Suggested For Seat Belt Law

PICTON — Ontario motorists will be forced to buckle up next year because of recent legislation making the use of seat belts mandatory.

A poll of six Picton area residents concerning the new law that will become effective January 1, shows that the majority of the drivers interviewed do not support the government's decision. Five of the six do not wear seat belts on a regular basis.

ROBERT TOLLEY

An employee of the Picton Public Utilities Commission, Robert Tolley, says he does not feel that the use of seat belts should be compulsory for motorists.

Mr. Tolley, who owns and drives a truck, says he does not use the seat belts in his vehicle. His wife does, however, when the family takes a long trip.

BUD COURNEY

Bud Courtney, a PUC employee, commented that there are two points of view regarding the use of seat belts. He feels that in some cases use of this safety device can save a motorist from being thrown from his vehicle. On the other hand, he may risk being trapped inside in the event of a fire.

He said that he does not wear a seat belt now and "never thinks of one" when driving.

LAVERNE BANNISTER

Laverne Bannister of RR 2, Picton, a Picton PUC employee, disagrees with the decision to make use of seat belts compulsory. He considers it the motorist's right to decide whether or not he will buckle up.

"The government is telling us too much now," he remarked.

He said he and his family use seat belts in his truck occasionally when on long drives.

HERMAN HAWLEY

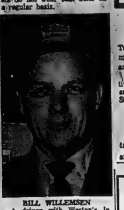
Herman Hawley of RR 1, Bloomfield said he does not wear a seat belt when driving the family truck but added that the new legislation will definitely change his habit.

He noted that he has never taken the time to use this safety feature but will comply with the new regulation as soon as it comes into effect.

JOHN MULRIDGE

John Mulridge, an employee with the Picton Public Utilities Commission, commented that he does not wear a seat belt and seldom thinks of buckling up.

He added that he feels the new law should be introduced with a 60 day period to warn drivers contravening the regulation. No fines should be imposed during this transition stage as many motorists are bound to forget in the first few weeks after seat belts become mandatory.



BILL WILLEMSEN

A driver with Weston's in Belleville, Bill Willemsen, said he supports the new legislation fully and he termed it "the best thing that ever happened."

Mr. Willemsen noted that in a freak accident a driver might be trapped by his seat belt but such occurrences are rare and in the long run many more lives are saved than lost by this safety feature.

Repairs Now Complete On Burttdale Homes

TRENTON — After more than half a year of complaints about poor construction and structural faults, homeowners in the Burttdale Heights say they are satisfied with repairs made by the builder, Rollins Construction Co. Ltd.

A representative of the group, Jack Rittwage, has presented a letter to Maurice Rollins, president of the company, thanking him for the "prompt attention in getting the problems resolved."

"I am but glad the whole thing has been finished and that everyone is completely satisfied with the work the company has done," Mr. Rittwage said Thursday.

"Representatives of Rollins spent last week at the subdivision checking and examining all the work that was done to make sure everyone was satisfied and it was completed before the agreed upon deadline," he said.

Maurice Rollins said he was pleased he was able to rectify all the problems to the satisfaction of the homeowners involved. He said part of the problem could be attributed to growing pains that the company has been experiencing for the past three years.

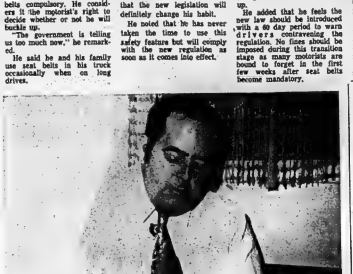
"If we know of a problem we will rectify it, regardless of cost, because this is how we have successfully built our business in the past 28 years," Mr. Rollins said.

The controversy at the subdivision came to a head in August when homeowners complained builders were not keeping their word about promised repairs. The Burttdale Height subdivision was built under the supervision of the Ontario Housing Corporation (OHC) and is a HOME Ownership Made Easy (HOME) plan.

Stephen Lewis, NDP leader of the provincial opposition, stopped at the subdivision during the last election to examine the problems.

Complaints at Burttdale ranged from tile and wall crack problems to sagging roofs and basement walls that were cracked and bowing and needed reinforcing.

Because of the problems encountered at Burttdale Heights, both the OHC and the town of Trenton have inaugurated more efficient inspection procedures. The OHC has added an additional 97 per cent completion, pre-occupancy inspection that one builder recently termed as "the most thorough he has ever heard of." Trenton has completely restructured its building inspection department, adding another inspector and revising the procedure to prevent such problems from occurring again.



8 Face Liquor Charges

MADOC — Ten charges have been laid against eight persons for contravention of Ontario Liquor Licensing Act after a raid last Friday at Madoc Hotel by provincial police and liquor law enforcement officers.

Charged with permitting persons under 18 years on licensed premises is owner and manager of the Madoc Hotel, Joseph Bosnic, 61, of 147 Elgin St., Madoc.

Madoc provincial police said Thursday when charges were first released, that bartender Carl Spaiola, 25 of Madoc was charged with knowingly serving liquor to persons under 18 years.

The two men and six youths will appear in Madoc provincial court Dec. 9.

Also charged with being on licensed premises while under 18 years of age are: Scott Alexander Nickle, 17, Dennis Bruce Rooney, 16 Richard Scott, 17, Donald Holmes, 17, John Parks, 16, and Alex Casselman, 17, all of Madoc.

Additional charges have been laid against Rooney and Casselman, the former for having liquor in a place other than a residence, and the latter for intoxication in a public place.

Letter of Thanks

Jack Rittwage, chairman of Burttdale Heights homeowners committee signs the letter presented to Maurice Rollins, builder of the subdivision, thanking him for the prompt attention in getting the problems resolved. Two subdivision has been the scene of controversy involving the Ontario Housing Corp. Trenton building inspection department and was a campaign issue in the last provincial election because of complaints that work at the site was poor and there were structural faults.

Police Weren't Aware of Murder When Suspect Taken in Custody

WARKWORTH — The suspect charged in connection with the Tuesday death of an 81-year-old pensioner here was being detained for a driving offence by police in Brighton during the murder investigation.

Bruce Joseph Chisholm, whose last listed address was the Village of Warkworth, is in intensive care at Kingston General Hospital where he was taken by Brighton OPP after he collapsed during interrogation of a car accident.

Chisholm was picked up by police while walking down the road 1½ miles outside of Castleton at 5.30 a.m. Tuesday. Police were investigating an accident that occurred minutes before when an automobile went out of control, left the road and rolled over. The driver was not at the scene.

Chisholm was taken to the Brighton Clinic after he collapsed during the investigation. Police said they thought he was suffering from a heart attack. He was transferred to Trenton Memorial Hospital and then to Kingston General.

It was during the transfers between the hospitals that Brighton police received a request from the Campbellford OPP to watch for a car seen leaving the murder scene. Police realized the accident victim and the murder suspect may be the same person.

Hasn't the Time Come for Parliament to Act in Ending the Mail Strike?

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

When an essential public service can be halted by a strike for more than a month, that's an emergency.

Yet that fact has escaped the militant leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers and the industrialists postmaster-general.

No one can count the cost to older people dependent on pensions, to small businesses that cannot survive without postal delivery, to people of every kind who are out of touch news of distant families and friends.

But no one directing the strike negotiations cares enough about such problems to take a realistic position.

The union negotiators have been offered a host of contract improvements, including a wage increase of 30 per cent or $1.80 an hour—the increase given to the letter carriers earlier this year.

Mail sorters have been promised job protection in the event of technological change, plus big premiums for working on Saturday or Sunday.

The government, for its part, has the power to pass legislation requiring the mail sorters to end their strike.

Stubbornly, it refuses even to consider such legislation until "kingdom come" in the prime minister's words.

Why? Presumably because forcing the union members back to work would allow the CUPW leaders a pose as martyrs—and let them come in off the limb on which they have perched since they rejected the government's last offer.

Those reasons may be valid from a tactical standpoint.

But both sides are forgetting that they are not participating in a political game. They are dealing with a real situation that is causing an intolerable degree of real human suffering.

Perhaps the reality of the situation has come to be ignored because of the deep-seated rivalry between the post office and the railways. Just three months after Pierre Elliott Trudeau became prime minister in the spring of 1968, a strike by the rail clerks put postal system for 25 days.

Since then there have been Canada-wide mailing strikes in 1970, a wildcat strike in April, 1972, and a three-week letter carrier last February—not to mention several regional work stoppages in between.

Mr. Trudeau, his ministers and his backbenchers were elected to represent the people—and public-opinion polls taken over the past several years have shown a steadily increasing opposition to the right to strike essential services.

It's true that public-service employees as a legal right to strike—but it's also true that, having accepted that right, they have a responsibility to maintain the service that the public needs.

In the postal strike, it appears that a substantial number of workers wanted to carry out that responsibility. But union leaders won't divulge the results of the strike authorization vote nor put the government's offer to a membership vote.

The government, too, has a responsibility to do its part in maintaining a reasonable standard of essential services.

The fact that the country has managed somehow to survive other postal strikes since 1968 is no justification for putting the Canadian people through a still greater endurance test in 1973.

Whether an inept CUPW negotiating team or the prime minister is responsible, the present need is to use the power of Parliament to restore postal service now.

Classroom Politics

Contemporary events, as well as the span of history are important to a student's development.

Some recent television footage from Kingston is interesting in this context. On the wall of a high school classroom interior were large poster-size pictures of China's Chairman Mao Tse-tung, Fidel Castro of Cuba, and a third man, with a mustache, may have been the late Salvador Allende of Chile.

These are leaders who have had a significant impact on the events of our time, and countries with which Canada has maintained diplomatic and trade contact for some years now.

At the same time, let's hope that the leaders and trends of countries of other political persuasion are receiving equal attention in our schools — the leaders of the western world, including our own Prime Minister Trudeau, Ford of the United States, Wilson of Britain and others.

Events in Spain too are of consuming interest in the wake of General Franco's death and the restoration of the Monarchy with King Juan Carlos as more than just a figurehead. Will he rate some attention in the school curriculum at this time?

The Kingston school, incidentally, is one which is absorbing some students from strike-bound Metro Toronto, whose parents own cottages in the Muskoka area.

'Ex' Stands its Ground

The Quinte Exhibition is not going to be stampeded from its present location — by the city or anyone else.

That's the message which comes through loud and clear from statements by Belleville Agricultural Society officials.

They cite agreements concluded with the city "in good faith," and financial arrangements including grants from the city which they say, however, are not now being made. And far from moving out to permit the city increased living space, Society officials are talking about a need to expand and an obligation by council to support them.

There is a clear implication here too that such support should include financial backing.

The officials have presented some cogent arguments for staying put, including the virtually prohibitive cost of moving elsewhere, in the straitened circumstances of the moment.

Perhaps the most valid reason was advanced by Society president Lyle Vanclief. He said the exhibition grounds provided a buffer zone between industrial and residential areas.

At a time when city planning should consider, among other things, recreational and open space — thereby avoiding overcrowding and the long-term prospect of problems of law enforcement — this is a factor that should be taken seriously.

As Mr. Vanclief predicts, the days ahead are going to be interesting.

A Look at the Arts

Anyone who has not yet seen the Belleville Art Association's ninth annual exhibition should take advantage of these last couple of days for there is a wealth of interesting and imaginative work.

It ranges from Muriel Andrews' award-winning oil, "Sundown," and Margaret Rickaby's "Dancing Dolphins," another oil painting which gained the judges' recognition, to Florence Lennox's striking "Gifts from the Sea," a study involving the use of seashells and other marine bric-a-brac, to a pen and ink of Moira church by Jerry Bagley and Anton Lassing's remarkable steel sculpture of Don Quixote.

The exhibition is at the Corby library and it forms part of the gathering mosaic of the arts in Belleville this winter which, incidentally, might include tomorrow's Christmas parade in the city.

Whatever the medium, initiative and creativity are the critteria, and the Christmas parade reflects this as much as anything.

It's a good time for all branches of the arts here, for the Concert Association has just announced its winter program too, with performances by the Scotland on Parade group, the Orpheus Trio, and pianist Rico Saccani.

Nothing to do in Belleville? Activities such as this are further proof that the city is not wanting in the arts. Whatever the interest: cultural, commercial, industrial, or recreational, there is something for everyone in a growing community.

Legislature Makes Heavy Going On Pay-drop and Union Voting

TORONTO — Future:

A year ago members of the government took a voluntary five-per-cent reduction in pay.

The cut ends at the first of the year.

Word is that the cabinet will then drop the reduction and take back their five per cent.

Lord please spare us that.

Give your servants at the helm of government some sense.

Yes, it's only five per cent. And yet, the members of the government probably earn their full stipend and more.

But the public can hardly see it that way, particularly today. It can only look on the restored five per cent as a pay increase.

And what mights this do to our inflation program.

Certainly it would submerge the argument of our leaders here that we are in an economic crisis.

Dear Lord, give them wisdom. Please.

Also wisdom and courage about those now getting to be infamous public trade union rules on labor relations.

Such public votes have been a great equalizer in labor relations for more than three decades.

They open the door for demagogues and keep it open.

Religious Freedom Issue

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

I am a concerned reader about our Sabbath Day and its honor. Rightly so it does deserve honor and respect but who are we to force this law on someone who is supposed to have religious freedom.

Jesus himself never forced anyone to keep his laws. He asked us to love them if we loved Him. It does no good to force this Sabbath keeping law on someone who neither respects nor understands the meaning of this day. But really is Sunday the Sabbath Day of the Bible?

Christians are so ready to defend the ten commandments but ignore the fourth which says "Remember the Sabbath day . . . but the SEVENTH day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." (Ex.20:8-10). Check your calendar. Is it Sunday? Certainly not. Concerning the commandments which God spoke he said: "My covenant will I not break nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. My word shall never change."

A lot of people said Jesus changed the law, if so, why did he say none of the law would be destroyed until heaven and earth pass away? Matt. 5:18 For those who are interested a trip to the library may reveal the plain fact that Sunday came to us not from the Bible but from the ancient sun worshippers of paganism and was later established them by the church in the 4th century A.D.

I wonder, if Sunday keepers were in a minority how would they like it if a government law enforced no trying or selling on Friday or Saturday. Lets have religious freedom!

Unions 'Greedy'

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

According to reports, postal employees are demanding $2.73 pay increase in addition to their average $4.56 hourly wages — and other benefits.

This is fantastic — the waiting to get rich out of the taxpayers money is simply greed. Many of us simple workers would be happy to earn half that much. If post hope taxpayers, most of whom are hard workers with small pay only, will hang on to their purse and not be brainwashed by greedy union leaders.

Many thanks to conscientious postal workers who had the courage to cross the picket line.

Seatbelt Mandate

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

"We stand on guard for thee" ends our national anthem and also could mean the end of our freedom of choice. This phrase appears to be the continuous line that politicians feed us when they are planning a new law down our throats.

Such is the case with seatbelts and don't get me wrong. I definitely believe in seatbelts. But, I fail to see the justification for a law that will be as difficult to enforce as laws on prohibition or laws on the use of cannabis.

Don't shake when they pass a law restricting the singing of our national anthem.

Perhaps Mr. Breault should take his map of Quinte and "shut up" until the Homebuilders' lawyer finishes explaining it — it is obviously beyond them.

Canada's Military Needs Estimated to Cost at Least a Billion Dollars

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The never-over land of government policy on spending ceilings is the department of national defence and its pressing commitments to buy new equipment for our armed forces.

What is required could cost around $1.4 billion, which is as the military say, a "real park figure."

But it's probably not as far from the final amount. Here's the shopping list presented not only to the serving defence minister, James Richardson, but to his predecessors back in 1970.

Replacements for the shockingly old Argus Long Range Patrol Aircraft,—21 of them to cost about $800 million.

—New tanks. Let's say we buy 50 of them at about $1.5 million each and that's another $75 million.

—Replacement aircraft for the obsolescent and dangerous-to-fly CF-104 Starfighter plus the C-131 Voodoo tactical jets which could easily add up to another $1 billion.

Now all these replacement needs have been around for a long time, almost back to 1949 when Prime Minister Diefenbaker made his famous and still-appealing plea for a policy affecting our role in NATO.

As you know this included a 10-per-cent cutback in our NATO air and ground forces which made an integral Canadian military strength in Western Europe into a meaningless rump as far as effective fighting strength is concerned.

And since then there has been a kind of albatross around the government's neck, but one which so far hasn't taken a large enough bit to remind Ottawa that it's really there.

On the other hand, the armed forces have had to make do with aging equipment maintained within at least two government financial restraint programs.

The first of these was the so-called freeze imposed on government operations in certain departments, including defence, by the then minister Sharp in 1969 and 1972.

That freeze was hardly over when the international oil crisis emerged escalating the cost of essential fuel for aircraft and ships of the armed forces.

In late 1973 and early 1974, the defence minister was forced to pull back essential military services because of record high fuel costs. These affected anti-submarine air sweeps over our Arctic and the fleet manoeuvres of the anti-submarine units of Atlantic Command.

Since then our NATO allies have lost much patience with us to the extent NATO secretary general publicly blasted Canada for not pulling its weight in NATO and for having a defence budget so lower in NATO, only that of Luxembourg was lower.

The Trudeau government and Ottawa are finding out the hard way that if we think there are only two Russians in the Kremlin and in uniform around Western Europe's borders, the Western Europeans don't think so.

The realization is coming as we ask for special deals with European Common Market on trade and economic ties with us and the Europeans respond that a strong Canadian military role in Europe is part of any arrangement we want to make.

So Mr. Trudeau the renowned anti-military prime minister—will have to put up or shut up. And the way the cost of military equipment is escalating—will have to put up or buy it he will have to work like hell to pay for it from any new revenue tracks.

If we're lucky, we could break even but no better.

Predicts Higher Gas Prices

TORONTO (CP) — A Shell Canada Ltd. executive Thursday warned that Canadians can expect to pay at least 10 cents more a gallon a year, every year, until the early 1980s for gasoline and other petroleum products.

George Bevan, Shell vice-president of marketing, said Canadian crude prices will have to rise to meet world levels in the next five years.

"This means that we can look for price increases for gasoline and other petroleum products of about five cents per gallon—every year to the early 1980s—and possibly as high as seven cents a year if we don't get inflation under control."

Using his figures, this means Canadians might be paying from $1.35 to $1.80 for a gallon of gasoline in eight years.

Delays Switch

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario will not switch highway speed limit signs to kilometres an hour until Canada adopts the metric system in about two years, Transport Minister James Snow said in the legislature Thursday. Harry Worton (L—Wellington South) has suggested that the changes be made now because the transport ministry now is changing highway signs to lower speed limits.

Urges Action

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government has shown irresponsibility and lack of initiative in its handling of the mercury pollution problem in the English-Wabigoon river system of northwestern Ontario, Ray Haggerty (L—Erie) said Thursday. He told a committee studying the estimates of the department of natural resources that "the government refuses to believe the hazard is real. Vigorous action must be taken." He said compensation must be paid to the Indians of the Whitedog and Grassy Narrows Reserves who have suffered from mercury pollution.

Fined $100

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Judge A. E. Newall fined Normand Henry, 24, of Toronto $100 Thursday after he was convicted of operating a car without pollution controls required under the provincial Environmental Protection Act. Court was told an air-cleaner system and vent lines which carry gasoline back from the carburetor were missing when Henry's 1972 car was inspected at the enrichment ministry's testing centre in a spot check last March 3. Henry was charged after he did not make repairs during the month he was given to have the required parts installed.

Proposals Rejected

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Both sides in the city's transit strike, which began Sept. 4, rejected suggestions Wednesday aimed at ending the dispute. The executive of the union rejected a city proposal for an intermediary to settle the wage issue, while the city refused a union suggestion that all issues be submitted to binding arbitration.

No Extension

TORONTO (CP) — It is highly unlikely that Ontario's $1,500 grant to first-time home buyers will be extended beyond the Dec. 31 deadline, Premier William Davis said Thursday.

Mr. Davis told the legislature that the program has been successful with only a small percentage of the grants going to those buying homes worth more than $100,000.

Credit for Women

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation to enforce equal credit for women will be enacted if provincial guidelines for credit granters issued earlier this week are consistently violated, Silvio Handfield, consumer and commercial relations minister, said Thursday. Mr. Handleman said the major credit firms agreed voluntarily to accept the guidelines, designed to provide women with equal access to credit.

First Chance

OTTAWA (CP) — Those who bought the 26-coin collection of 1976 Olympic coins will be given first chance at the proof quality 25-coin Olympic Coin Program announced Thursday.

A maximum of 350,000 of the 26-carat $100 coins will be minted, a spokesman said. Reservations to buy coins, which contains one-half ounce of gold and sell for $150, also start Dec. 1. The coins will go on sale April 1.

Considers Names

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Thomas Wells said Thursday that his ministry is considering names for two vacant positions on the education relations commission but said it will probably likely that one will be filled during the current Ontario Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers.

Trap Kills Dogs

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — Innisfil Township council agreed Wednesday to find out what power it holds over hunting and trapping in the area. Murray Daulman of Churchill, Ont., whose dog was killed in a trap Nov. 18, asked council to ban hunting and trapping. The Ontario Humane Society and the provincial police department are investigating the incident.

Talks Break Down

TORONTO (CP) — John Wessinger, chief negotiator for Ontario's 733 special education teachers, said Wednesday the dispute might strike in January if a salary agreement with the province is not reached soon. He said talks broke down Wednesday.

B.C. Social Credits Clouded by Controversy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Social Credit party is embroiled in The Case of the Missing Message and another mounting convention controversy as the Dec. 11 British Columbia election campaign enters the home stretch.

The message was an eight-page telex to Premier Dave Barrett from federal Transport Minister Otto Lang detailing Ottawa's participation in a multi-million-dollar rail expansion in northwestern B.C.

The message disappeared from the briefcase of government consultant John de Wolf, who, incidentally, is a former Progressive Conservative leader in B.C., and a copy wound up in the hands of Social Credit leader Bill Bennett.

Mr. Bennett used the document to steal Mr. Barrett's campaign thunder by revealing the details of the telex one night before the premier planned to.

Mr. Bennett then called for a judicial inquiry into the business of government documents. Mr. Barrett told him to stop reading other people's mail in public.

Tuesday consultant Kenneth Tryon said he took the message from Mr. de Wolf's briefcase after a building commissionaire found the briefcase and asked him for help in tracing its owner.

Mr. Tryon said he made a photo copy of the rail documents and delivered them to Social Credit headquarters in a plain, brown envelope because the provincial election is "total war at the moment."

Mr. de Wolf has his briefcase back but the circumstances surrounding its disappearance and return remains a mystery.

Meanwhile, Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace said the briefcase mystery has made integrity an issue in the campaign.

"It is almost necessary for various leaders and candidates to carry their briefcases chained to their wrists," he told a campaign meeting in North Vancouver.

Without naming Mr. Bennett, he said the document was used in "the cheapest political way by a leader who then has the gall to ask for a judicial inquiry."

Mr. Bennett said he made the document public so the premier wouldn't enter into a rail agreement with Ottawa during an election campaign.

Mr. Barrett said he wouldn't have done that anyway and rejected Mr. Bennett's call for an inquiry.

In another campaign issue, Herb Capozzi, former general manager of B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League and one of the Social Credit candidates when the NDP took power in 1972, is campaigning alone in the two-seat riding of Vancouver Centre.

Mr. Capozzi decided this week to campaign apart from Alan Lau, a wealthy former Hong Kong businessman accused of stacking the nominating convention and of having insufficient knowledge of B.C. politics.

Army Chief Dismissed Following Leftist Revolt

LISBON (CP) — The moderate-leftist government of President Francisco da Costa Gomes has dismissed the army chief of staff and threatened further reprisals following an abortive leftist revolt.

A presidential announcement late Thursday said Col. Rosa Coutinho Xanes has replaced Carlos Fabiao as army chief of staff. Premier Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo blames Fabiao for inciting leftist discontent.

The government also dismissed commanders around the former headquarters of Otelo Saraiva de Carvalo, the radical military security chief who was stripped of his command and demoted to major after the revolt was crushed by loyalists.

Military sources said Carvalho left Lisbon "for his own safety" after being given an open-ended furlough, but other sources said later that he remained at his home.

A senior official said the government has evidence that the plotting involved many officers and civilian activists not yet arrested.

"The coup was much more profound than anyone could have dreamed," he said, behind four banks around the capital in the short-lived revolt Tuesday.

Military authorities published a list of 51 people, including 45 individuals but organizations, implicated in an army stockade in Oporto, 175 miles north of here. Several other officers, including Col. Antonio Ramalho Eanes, who was promoted to general, is known to have planned the loyalist account on the dissident paratroopers who seized control of the Portuguese capital in the short-lived revolt Tuesday.

King Carlos to Name New Parliament Head

MADRID (CP) — Sources say King Juan Carlos was poised Saturday to name a new head of parliament in another test of his political program to liberalize Spain.

Top political leaders said the king's selection to replace—or extend the term—of Alfredo Rodriguez Valcarcel might indicate the course he plans to follow.

At the same time, the king faced mounting evidence that not all Spaniards are happy with his reign, despite joyous scenes as he drove through the streets of Madrid after Thursday's accession ceremonies.

Juan Carlos and his wife, Queen Sofia, presided over the official ceremonies with flag-flying at half mast for the first time since the death of Gen. Francisco Franco Nov. 20.

The king met with Rodriguez Valcarcel after the ceremonies on Thursday, but there was no word on what the two discussed.

As rich conservative, Rodriguez Valcarcel was named president of parliament six years ago by Franco. He still legally ended his term Tuesday.

The king has the power to keep him on for eight more days, reappoint him to the job, or replace him.

Spain's centre-left opposition has said Rodriguez Valcarcel's removal is necessary because he is a hangover from the Franco regime.

Meanwhile, demonstrations in Madrid, Barcelona and San Sebastian demanding total amnesty for political prisoners marred the spirit of national harmony sought by the king.

RCMP Investigates Fake Olympic Coins

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP is checking the authenticity of Olympic silver coins left behind by coin dealer Chuck Nahas who left his Montreal home four days before the RCMP could lay fraud charges against him.

A spokesman for the Olympic Coin Program said Thursday in Ottawa that "in any bankruptcy of a rare coin shop all coins are routinely inspected to make sure they are not fakes."

The organization said in a statement the 30 people who have placed orders with Nahas's Inter-Exchange Rare Coin Shop will probably not get their money back.

"The program has no responsibility to intervene on their behalf," the statement said, because Nahas was not an authorized Olympic coin dealer.

Nahas, his wife and their four children disappeared near Toronto Nov. 4, four days before Montreal police charging him with 11 counts of fraud and false pretext.

The next week his coin shop in Montreal's Westmount district was padlocked by the Canada Dry Corp. for Canadian Investment Ltd., a creditor seeking payment.

Writs have been filed in Quebec Superior Court by Canadian Investment Ltd. for payment of $318,886, by Guardian Trust for $322,000 and by Montreal coin dealer Jack Hinselwright for $28,500.

Program officials said Nahas, who came to Canada from the U.S. by way of Lebanon and Germany, applied to be an official coin distributor in the Olympic Coin Program, but was rejected after failing to clear the program's security check.

Newman Says Boards Subject to Guidelines

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture Minister William Newman told the legislature Thursday Ontario has agreed to place commodity marketing boards under what he called the spirit of the federal anti-inflation guidelines.

The minister, reporting on a meeting in Ottawa with federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald, said the subject of marketing boards was discussed and it was agreed in principle that they should adhere to the spirit of the guidelines.

"In the case of provincial marketing plans, the Farm Products Marketing Board and the Milk Commission of Ontario will be responsible for ensuring that provincial marketing boards follow the spirit of the guidelines," Mr. Newman said.

The statement seemed at odds with a speech he made Tuesday to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture (OFA) annual convention in Hamilton. In that speech, the minister said, marketing boards should not be brought under the federal anti-inflation board.

Outside the legislature Thursday, Mr. Newman said the boards will not come under the anti-inflation tribunal led by Jean-Luc Pepin and Bert Descarie.

They would be expected to follow the guidelines in a general way but there will be flexibility that would not otherwise be available, the minister said. He said the federal program allows cost increases to be tacked on to a commodity price.

Under his system, there would be allowances made for increases beyond those needed to cover rising costs, Mr. Newman said.

There occasionally is a need for extra increases to spur production and those would be allowed under the "spirit of the guidelines" system, Mr. Newman said.

Mr. Newman said individuals or groups who feel victimized by a marketing board price increase can complain to either the board or the milk commission. Those bodies would produce their decisions in writing and these decisions would be submitted to Ottawa.

Chretien Says Medical Services Will Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — Medical services are bound to decline at least temporarily because of federal government spending cuts, Treasury Board Chairman Jean Chretien said Thursday.

Productivity in hospitals is dropping and co-operation from doctors on the federal government's proposed ceiling on salaries is not guaranteed, he told the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee.

Mr. Chretien was answering Dr. Philip Rynard (L—Simcoe North) who asked how long it would take for medical services to adjust to economic pressures.

OSSTF Demands Increase Suggested by Fact-finder

TORONTO (CP) — Striking secondary school teachers, who had offered to revise their contract demands, were told by their federation Thursday that their negotiators will not settle for less money than recommended in a provincial fact-finder's report.

Robert Boothroyd, executive secretary of the Toronto district of the teachers' federation, said in a tape-recorded message for teachers that a newspaper suggesting teachers lower their demands by $1,000 was incorrect.

John Volpe, chief negotiator for the 8,000 teachers, said Wednesday teachers would alter their demands and drop a complaint that the board was bargaining in bad faith if the board would resume bargaining with Stanley Hartt as mediator. Mr. Hartt, was the provincial fact-finder who wrote the report on which the teachers have based their latest contract position.

However, the Metropolitan Toronto school board refused Wednesday to negotiate with the teachers, on strike since Nov. 12. The strike affects 140,000 students in 135 schools.

William Ross, board chairman, said at a news conference that no negotiating will take place until the education relations commission has dealt with the issue of how wage guidelines will apply to teachers.

The anti-inflation board probably will announce some clarifications today, a spokesman said.

When negotiations broke off, the teachers were asking for a 12.9-per-cent increase and a full cost-of-living clause in a two-year contract. The board has offered 38.3 per cent over two years.

Mr. Boothrope said in his message to the teachers that some teachers feel that as the strike continues, teachers will have to increase their demands to recoup their losses.

Teachers are not requesting more money than in their previous proposal but the longer the school board delays negotiating, "the greater the frustration increases," he said in an interview.

Spokesmen for the teachers and the board said they did not know the total cost of negotiations but that hotels had given them discounts.

Cross Country Skiing Boosts Industry

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's ski industry is anticipating one of its best seasons in several years buoyed by the boom in cross-country skiing, Chuck Roberts, president of the National Ski Industries Association (NSIA), said in a recent interview.

The association, composed of ski manufacturers, distributors and retailers, reports that annual retail sales of ski equipment and clothing in Canada exceed $100 million.

A fitness-conscious public is turning to cross-country skiing because it offers safe, inexpensive outdoor exercise. Cross-country equipment sales have trebled during the last two years and now surpass sales of downhill gear for the first time.

About 30 per cent of cross-country equipment sales involve package deals with prices starting as low as $40. Mr. Roberts said. The small cost has made cross-country skiing a popular family sport.

Mr. Roberts predicts faster growth in downhill skiing as a spinoff of the cross-country market. Non-skiers may be attracted to the simplicity of cross-country and later move on to Alpine skiing as their enthusiasm increases.

About five years ago, the retail ski market began to change significantly. There was a move towards mass merchandising and million-dollar investories were offered at reductions as high as 50 per cent.

The trend towards mass merchandising and price cutting is beginning to level off, Mr. Roberts said, but some of the lasting effects is that ski shops survive on the sale of clothing which permits greater markups.

Women's Year Honors MPs

TORONTO (CP) — Flora MacDonald, Progressive Conservative MP for Kingston and the Islands, and Ellen Fairclough, first woman cabinet minister in Canada, were among 25 Ontario women honored Thursday by the provincial government as part of International Women's Year.

Miss MacDonald is a candidate for the federal leadership of the Conservative Party. Mrs. Fairclough held a number of cabinet posts during the time John Diefenbaker was prime minister.

Judy LaMarsh, a former Liberal MP and cabinet minister, was also honored for her achievements but did not attend the dinner Thursday because of illness. At present she is head of the provincial government's royal commission on violence in the media.

Four women representing the Toronto Women's Action Group protested outside the hotel in which the dinner was held. One woman said they were unhappy with the government's lack of progress on issues affecting women such as equal pay and day care.

Promote Safety

Mrs. Fairclough — "If we can save the life of one kid in one year, it's a big thing," says Conrad Winkler, principal of Village Junior Public School in Willowdale, Ont. The village is a place where children learn to shoot safety. It has child-sized buildings and one of every kind of traffic situation, including stop lights, a one-way street and a pedestrian crossing.

Toronto Student Will Be Deported

TORONTO (CP) — Nehemiah Richards, 19, a Grade 12 student, will be deported to Jamaica next week because the man serving as his father is not considered his father under immigration regulations, immigration authorities say.

They say immigration law defines Nehemiah as an illegitimate child fathered by Lloyd Richards and born to a woman living in England.

Authorities say Nehemiah, who was left with the woman's brother, was turned over to Mr. Richards when he was three years old. Mr. Richards had married another woman two years previously.

After Mr. Richards obtained landed immigrant status in Canada in 1972, he applied to the Immigration department to sponsor his wife, their seven children and Nehemiah. The application on behalf of Nehemiah was turned down but he came to Canada as a visitor and

At Seminar

Price Codes, Expiry Dates Explained

Unit value pricing, code dating and universal price codes were discussed by consumer advisor Helen Gagen Thursday night at a seminar co-sponsored by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Gagen said that code dating is a response to the desire people have had for "quite a time" to know how fresh a product is.

All products carry a date which marks the time a product should be removed from the store shelf. "This date doesn't mean the food isn't enjoyable or wholesome after that date but that that is the last date which would allow a reasonable length of time for usage in the home," she said.

Universal price codes, she told the audience, are the black and white lines with numbers which are marked now on most food packages. The lines, she explained, refer to manufacturer, type of product, size and grade but make no specific reference to price.

"They look forward to time when there are electronic scanners at check out counters. The cashier will pass the product code over the scanner and this will retrieve from a central computer the price of that item."

She said that in areas where the scanning has been tried, shoppers don't seem to mind that individual items are not priced. There are, Mrs. Gagen said, prices on each shelf.

The advantages she outlined include speedier check-outs, more accurate price recording, and detailed register tapes. Mrs. Gagen also added that it is a more simple procedure to subtract items with the new system.

Unit value pricing, which lists price, product name, size of package and price per unit, is not legislated, Mrs. Gagen says, but added that Steinburg's, the chain she represents, marks more than 1300 items in this fashion.

Advice for Eating

Nutritionist Jane McNicol had some suggestions for community groups and supermarkets to help encourage shoppers to save money and eat nutritously.

Speaking at a food seminar, Mrs. McNicol told the audience that packages of vegetables grouped together for sale would allow people on limited incomes or those who live alone to have a variety of vegetables on hand without little waste or spoilage. She also suggested that supermarkets give small discounts when foods which compliment each other nutritiously are purchased together.

"A delivery system of parcels of groceries broken down from bulk quantities purchased at a good price and divided among senior citizens" would be a useful project for a community group, she said.

Rick Williams of Loyalist College told the audience that traditionally we have believed that exercise and nutrition build a healthy body while education and learning promotes a good mind.

However, he said, research is beginning to show that nutrition has an effect not only on brain growth but on behavior and learning ability.

"Malnourishment of a fetus or a baby in the first six months of life has a permanent effect on brain size and capacity," he said.

Malnutrition in later life may be reversible but can result in retarded motor development, irritability, low stress tolerance and even hyperactivity in children, he said.

Mr. Williams said that vitamin supplements for a three to four-year-old malnourished child can alter his IQ by 10 to 15 points.

"The development of more interest in convenience foods, the use of more food additives and higher prices on basic foods," he said is endangering the possibility for each Canadian to maximize his capabilities.

Good Nutrition Needs Planning

Margaret Sexter, of the Ontario Food Council, said Thursday night that people resent higher food prices because they are becoming afraid that they won't be able to eat the way they are used to eating.

"Some people began to worry about whether they were going to be nutritionally well-fed," she added, addressing a group of about 40 persons gathered at Quinte Secondary School for the second in a series of consumer seminars sponsored by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Yet in spite of these things, Ms. Sexter said a study has shown the consumption of milk has dropped while the consumption of soft drinks has increased; the consumption of snack foods has increased while the consumption of fruits and vegetables has decreased.

"Family and personal preferences accounted for food choice of 85 per cent of the persons in the survey. The fact that a food was "good for you' influenced only 13 per cent of the people."

Ms. Sexter told the audience that it is possible to eat well for less than many Canadians spend on food "if you are willing to change some of your food habits and purchasing patterns."

She told people to realize that snack food are an expensive impulse item.

"A survey of over 7,900 shoppers showed that over half the purchases of snack items were made by shoppers who didn't plan to buy them when they entered the store."

Wasted foods are the biggest thief of your food dollar," She warned consumers that shoppers drive up food prices by munching an apple or candy bar without paying and by damaging perishables by pinching and squeezing.

To save money, she advised shoppers to plan meals, become familiar with Canada's food guide, make a shopping list, shop in an organized fashion and store foods properly and for short times only.

"Planning is the key to getting the best food value for your dollar. The ultimate goal of this planning should be a nutritious diet."

Consumer Committee Food Seminar Held

About 80 persons gathered Thursday night to hear the second in a series of five consumer education programs organized by the Committee for Consumer Education and chaired by Fred Beeby.

Food, Thursday's topic, included addresses by Helen Gagen, Miracle Food Mart; Margaret Sexter, Ontario Food Council; Jane McNicol, nutritionist; and Rick Williams, Loyalist College.

The committee includes Les Backus, chairman, Quinte Secondary School; Rick Williams; Wilfrid Mennings, Hastings County Law Association; Leona Walford, Quinte Information Centre; Keith Allison, Belleville Chamber of Commerce; John Miller, Queen Elizabeth Public School; Fred Beeby, Pensioner's Concerned; Mary Ann Blaind and Carson McLauchlan, Quinte and District Labour Council.

Money management, housing and credit will be topics of future seminars in the series.

Down In The Mine

NEW YORK (AP) — More women are becoming miners, according to a special survey conducted by Engineering and Mining Journal. Among the jobs they are being hired or trained for are truck driver, mill operator, cage operator, drill operator, welder and dozer operator, says the magazine. Though fewer in numbers, professional women also are joining miners' ranks as analysts, engineers, geologists and assayers.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hodgson

Hodgson — Smith

Karen Ann Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.L. Smith, Trenton; and Kenneth Wayne Hodgson, son of Mrs. Kathleen Bronson, RR 1 Corbyville, were united in marriage Nov. 22 at Holy Rosary Church.

Father George and Rev. Jack Morrison performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of jersey knit with high collar and full sleeves. The empire waist gown was gathered to the neckline and her matching head-dress was trimmed with pearls. She wore an elbow length veil. She carried a single red rose trimmed with fern and ribbon.

Sheila Scouten, was maid of honor in a coral dress and carried a single white rose. Bellinda Smith, Karen Hodgson and Bridget Smith also attended the bride in coral and white.

Groomsman was Mike Hayes assisted by ushers Ken Jensen, Glen Thompson and Steven Hodgson.

After a wedding reception at the Trenton country club the couple left on a wedding trip for Niagara Falls and around Lake Ontario.

The couple resides in Belleville.

HOSPITAL CONCERT

Patients and their friends attended a variety concert at Belleville General Hospital on Monday evening. Sponsored by the BGH Auxiliary and the Belleville Musicians' Union, the performers were the Singing Post Family, Norman, Ken and Debbie Post, Joanne and Harold Errington and Bill Walker kept their audience toe-tapping and singing along with their music.

This entertainment marked the last of the current series of patient concerts which have been presented during the past months. The Auxiliary hopes to carry on with this type of "change for the patient" therapy in the near future. Auxiliary volunteers assisted in the transportation of patients.

A birthday party, also arranged by the Auxiliary, was attended by a large number of patients in the extended care section of the hospital on Tuesday. The party included a meal and refreshments and a singsong.

BELLEVILLE WRITERS' GUILD

The first meeting of the Belleville Writers' Guild took place Wednesday evening at Corby Public Library. Several local writers of fiction attended, to discuss plans for the guild's future activities.

Donna Whalen, who has organized the guild, has applied for a government grant with which the members will pay for guest speakers. There are also plans for a local literary magazine, in order to give writers in the Belleville area more exposure.

The Writers' Guild will meet regularly at the library each month. The next meeting will be December 17, at which Barry Gulls and John Grieve will read selections from their own work.

All writers of fiction, published or unpublished, are invited to attend, to discuss all aspects of their craft with other writers.

PARKDALE HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

A meeting of the Parkdale Home and School Association was held at the school on Monday, November 24.

The meeting was chaired by President John Gibson, and the evening's program introduced by Frank Jefferson.

Parkdale teachers gave a presentation on the theme 'Curriculum', with emphasis on French instruction, Language Arts, Mathematics, and use of library facilities.

Eating Revolution May Replace Meat

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Soy-supply. Soybeans are the biggest American agricultural export.

But nearly all of the crop still is fed to animals, soybean processors say. Less than five per cent will be used in such things as margarine, cooking oil and other soybean products for people.

Increasing direct human consumption of soybeans would be of tremendous significance in helping to solve the world's growing food shortage, scientists agree.

It takes several pounds of vegetable protein fed to livestock to produce a single pound of animal protein. Yet in all but a few poorer countries most of the population gets most of its protein from meat.

The problem is that soybeans straight out of the pod have what consider a bitter, unpleasant taste. Few other than vegetarians eat them plain.

The solution is to make soybeans taste—and even look and feel—like something else.

In this effort, the pliable nature of the soybean itself is a help.

A processed 60-pound bushel of soybeans yields about 48 pounds of meal and 11 pounds of oil. The rest is waste.

The oil has been used commercially since the 1920s as an ingredient for paint and plastics.

Soybean meal was thrown away or used as fertilizer until the early 1930s.

"We were just submerged in corn and no one knew what to do with it," said Atkinson, who has been working on ways for the soybean through his research career as a chemist.

In the 1930s, however, soybean meal began to be used as a protein supplement in feed for cattle, hogs and chickens, helping them grow bigger, faster and more cheaply.

A protein supplement for human consumption was also developed around 1930. It was in the form of a relatively tasteless powder, more than 50 per cent pure protein, which could be mixed with virtually any food to boost its nutritional value.

"We thought, 'Everybody is going to grab this stuff.' Boy, were we wrong. "People won't eat food just because it's good for them. People eat things because they're fun to eat, and we couldn't have much fun eating a powder."

The breakthrough, in terms of increasing human consumption of soybeans, came in 1970, when processors invented a "way of cooking the powder into a plastic-like form and forcing it through small holes to make Textured Vegetable Protein (TVP).

In one form TVP can be shaped, colored and flavored to resemble hamburger. Treated in different ways, it can be made to look, taste and chew like stew meat, and scientists are working on ways to imitate chicken, mushrooms and other delicacies.

Existing meat prices in 1973 sparked the appearance of many areas of ground beef mixed with TVP. Priced 10 to 20 per cent below the cost of pure ground beef, it is still available in some stores. One major midwestern supermarket chain, which calls its version of the product Tend-R-Ized, said sales dropped off slightly when meat prices declined, but have remained steady since.

"Now that we've got a way to give soybeans texture, there's no limit to what we'll be able to do with them," said Atkinson, who thinks young people who acquire a taste for soybeans by eating them in school.

"These beans are a wonder," he said. "You're going to be eating a lot more of them in the future."

Ann Landers

Watching Disasters Is Dangerous, Stupid

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a fireman who needs to get a message across to millions of people. Perhaps 1.5 billion people. Please take it to your attention. Stop being "spectators of any disaster you care to name."

Just exactly what are you doing there? Obviously, you are looking for excitement. A fireman has his hands full thinking of the fire and trying to protect himself and his fellow firemen from smoke, heat and poisonous gases. Have you thought about the congestion you create when you park your car and run to the rubbernecking? Do you realize ambulances and emergency equipment need to be as close to the scene of the accident or fire as possible? I shudder to think of the people I've seen smoking cigarets around gasoline tank leaks. They must be nuts.

If you want to help, folks, please join your local volunteer fire department or emergency unit. If you want to see a fire, show up home and turn on the TV. We'll both be a lot safer.—A Fireman Who Wants To Do His Job

Dear Fireman: Here's your letter and a special plea from me to all who read it. It might be YOUR home or child in the accident who cannot be reached in time because gawkers blocked the street. Please think about this, folks, the next time you are inclined to chase a siren looking for kicks.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for all those kids who complain because they are the oldest or the youngest or the one in the middle:

Dear Nuts; Quit griping. You are lucky whether you know it or not. Let me tell you what it would be like to be a only child.

When there are errands to run, chores to be done, the gang to be wheeled — it all falls on one head. Theres no Tom, Dick or Harry or Mary to take turns with. You have to do everything. When it comes to gifts you don't get one many because they don't want to "spoil you." I know what it's like because my best buddy is an only child and he hates it.

I'm the one in the middle. Wherever I get to feeling a little crowded I tell myself I'm lucky to have someone bigger to look up to and someone littler who leans on me. — Got It Made

Dear Got It: Thanks for a good letter. I especially appreciated the last part where you feel like the idea that someone is leaning on you. Makes you feel useful, doesn't it?

Bigfoot Sightings Increase in B.C.

THE DALLES, Ore. (AP) — Three bear hunters had a fearful that they were being followed or watched the evening of Oct. 1 as they trudged back to their camp on Pinegrass Ridge near Yakima, Wash.

Later they started hearing noises.

Tom Gorstmar, 17, aimed his flashlight across a small pond and caught the reflection of two yellow-green eyes. A few minutes later they pointed the light in the same area and saw the eyes again—this time housed in a huge, furry, man-like body.

They fired shots to scare it off, they later told sheriff's deputies, but the creature growled and screamed at them.

That was enough.

They piled into their jeep and headed for civilization, leaving their equipment behind.

Ninety miles to the south, in the Columbia River town of The Dalles, Peter Byrne logged another report of a sighting of the legendary Bigfoot or Sasquatch, as the Indians called it.

Skepticism still flourishes, but more and more reports of Bigfoot sightings are dribbling in from the wilds of the Pacific Northwest. Some scientists are stating their belief that the vast wilderness might indeed be home for a handful of sub-human holdovers from another age.

Byrne, a 50-year-old former big-game hunter in Nepal, has never seen a Bigfoot. But he has worked full-time for more than four years to determine whether Bigfoot is real, a hoax, or dark sights playing on the imagination of people in lonely places.

The number of reports has grown in recent years along with the rising use of the northwest wilderness for recreation, Byrne said there have been three reported sightings this year that he considers good and several more he and others are checking into.

The rise in interest appears to have loosened the tongues of people who had kept quiet about what they had seen in fear of being ridiculed. Byrne said there have been several reports this year from those who said they had seen Bigfoot, in some cases many years ago.

More than 300 sightings have been reported since the first white explorers visited the Pacific Northwest in the early 1800s.

Last July, six persons reported watching a grey, ape-like creature on a ridge south of The Dalles for several minutes before it ambled out of sight.

The description matched that of seven other men who reported one closer to The Dalles in 1971.

Other reports have come this year from British Columbia and northern California.

Some doubt, some believe and some say they aren't sure, Jack Cochrane, a logger, was in the latter category until an April morning in 1974, when he was operating a logging crane on Fir Mountain.

He said the boom of the crane partially blocked his view, but that he chanced to peer under it and saw two long legs walking toward the timber.

"I asked myself, 'What's Tom doing out there.'

Then I looked again and I saw it. I told myself, 'This is something else,' and a cold chill went up the back of my neck."

Whatever Cochrane saw had huge shoulders and walked upright with a gliding motion into the timber, he said.

"I told the other boys, 'You won't think I saw Bigfoot out here,' but they told me I had had too much ash, so I dropped the subject."

Co-worker, Fermin Osborne, was walking toward the timber when he reported seeing what he later described as "some kind of monster."

"Well, Fermin, he's from the South and gets kind of hot headed, so he took out after it," Cochrane related.

He said Osborne followed it to the brink of a hill and rolled rocks down after it, hoping to see the face when it turned around. But it didn't turn.

"Fermin saw me later and said, 'Jack, I guess you weren't crazy because I saw it too.'"

Byrne, hold he later went to the area and found rocks that had been rolled down the hill and others that had been pressed into the ground by some great weight.

Tales of this type are not new to the region.

In 1811, David Thompson, an explorer and mapper, wrote in his diary of finding footprints 14 inches long and eight inches wide. Thompson and his Indian guides "were in no humor to follow them."

In 1904, newspaper accounts told of numerous sightings by miners of "The Shasa wild man" near the southwestern Oregon town of Sizes.

In 1924, prisoners in the Mount St. Helens area of western Washington reported their cabin bombarded with large rocks thrown by ape-like creatures.

Scores of other reports have come in over the decades, and they vary only slightly.

They describe an ape-like creature between six and eight feet tall that runs upright when it knows it has been spotted. Colors vary from grey to red-dish brown to dark brown or black.

Plaster casts of footprints and several seconds of film shot in northern California in 1967 provide most of the physical evidence. The film was shot by the late Roger Patterson in Del Norte County, Calif.

Patterson and a companion were on horseback looking for a Bigfoot when they saw one, they said, squatting by a water course.

The horses panicked but Patterson regained control in time to aim the camera and press the trigger until the remaining film was gone. It's jerky in places and many of the frames are blurred but many scientists say it appears to confirm the existence of an ape-like creature.

Dmetri Donskoy, chief of biomechanics at the Central Institute of Physical Culture in Moscow, said his study of the film indicates the movements to be natural, unusable and "without any sign of the artificial."

Estimates of the number of Bigfoot creatures it would take to maintain the species vary from 100 to 1,000.

Byrne said his goal is to get control of a Bigfoot long enough to study and photograph it and let the camera. But, most of the time tracks and sightings have been hallucinations, why haven't reports come in from other parts of the Northwest? Why just in remote areas where people are not likely to be, "And if all these sightings are these reports?"

Carpet.
Among the most expensive, least understood, purchases you can make.
One store tells you one thing. Another store another thing. You ask a salesman the difference between $4.98 pile and the $8.98 pile and he says, "One's better".
So you prepare yourself for things like this. But there's one thing you can't prepare for. One thing you can't know until it happens. Fear, like when you write a cheque for a lot of money and you start thinking: "Will it really last years?" "Will it resist stains?" "Will they stand behind it if something goes wrong?"
INTELLIGENT QUESTIONS DESERVE INTELLIGENT ANSWERS
We don't think you need us to tell you that $10.00 carpeting is better than $5.00 carpeting. You need us to tell you why. You need us to tell you why nylon might be all right for your bedroom but not for your den.

Book Deals with Nursing Sister

By R. J. ANDERSON
The Canadian Press

To servicemen the world over, she is an angel of mercy, the "girl in blue," as the Canadian called her, whose skill and devotion, whose very touch and kind word at the casualty clearing station, brought the sick and wounded soldier toward recovery.

She is the nursing sister, an integral part of all military forces since the mid-1853 century when Florence Nightingale, the famed "lady with the lamp," founded the military nursing service.

The story of Canada's military nursing services since it was founded in 1885 is told pleasingly and without embellishment—none is needed—by Col. G. W. L. Nicholson in Canada's Nursing Sisters, a record from the second Riel rebellion in the Northwest through four wars and all the services into the post-war period.

Col. Nicholson writes:

"Canadian nursing sisters are justifiably proud; to have borne their share, alike with officers and men, in the great contribution made by the medical services. Of these dedicated women it may be truly said: "They served and equally."

The Ottawa military historian, author of many books on the part Canada's forces have played in war, was commissioned by the Nursing Sisters' Association of Canada to write the history of the women who served in war and peace with Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen. It is based upon unit diaries, scrapbooks, old letters and other personal records and interviews with many veteran sisters across the country. It is replete with by photographs and by the names of the fronts where they served.

The indomitable Florence Nightingale, appalled at reports of medical conditions in the Crimea in 1853, fought army hostility and brass-hat stupidity in Whitehall to form the first "brigade of nurses"—all strong—in the British Army.

In the first seven months of the Crimean War there were 16,000 deaths in the army's force of 25,000 men. Of one huge Turkish barracks set aside as a hospital but which was little more than a huge cesspool, Miss Nightingale was to say: "Abandon all hope, ye who enter here."

A small group of volunteer civilian nurses formed Canada's first "corps of nurses" brought into being during the North West Rebellion that began March 26, 1885, when mounted Metis repulsed a small force of mounted police and Prince Albert Volunteers at Duck Lake on the South Saskatchewan River. The nurses travelled across the prairie from Winnipeg in a wagon.

From 1901, with establishment of a Canadian Nursing Service, Canada gave military rank to its nursing sisters. In the British Army, where nurses were auxiliaries, they were not made an integral part of the service until 1949—and did not receive the equivalent pay.

The outbreak of the Boer War in 1899 found Canada with a fully organized military nursing service and four sisters accompanied the first body of Canadian troops. Many more followed.

Canada's Nursing Sisters carries the Canadian nurses, first in khaki, then in blue, in detail through that war and into the First and Second World Wars and then into Korea, with tribute also paid to those who are in naval hospitals and with the air force.

It's a fascinating history and as Col. Jean D'Eggerdi, matron-in-chief of the Canadian Forces, says in a foreword:

"It is appropriate that the first published history of the nursing sisters who have served for almost a century with Canada's armed forces should make its appearance in this year, designated International Women's Year."

Col. Nicholson, who came to Canada from England in 1911, was a high school principal in North Battleford, Sask., when the Second World War broke out and served with the Canadian army. He was director of the historical section of the army's general staff from 1950 until he retired in 1961.

He's still writing at 77. His next work, due early in 1976, is a history of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps' 79 years.

The subject of dreams has fascinated mankind from the beginning of recorded time. Ancient pictographs drawn by Indians on rocks show spirits which they first saw in dreams. And at Maimonides Hospital in New York, at the present time, scientists are studying sleep and dreams under controlled conditions.

Howard E. Smith, who has written several science books for children, has collected in Dreams in Your Life, an interesting assortment of facts and theories about dreams. The book appears to be written for juveniles, but covers such adult ideas as the beliefs of Freud, Jung, Perls and others on dream interpretation; theosophy and dreams, and scientific dream theories.

Mandate in Jeopardy Says Liberal

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Three Ontario Liberal leadership candidates met with local party members in Belleville Thursday in search of January leadership convention support.

The three spoke at a joint meeting of the federal riding of Hastings and the provincial riding of Quinte where 12 delegates were named to vote at the upcoming provincial leadership convention.

Only David Peterson of London Centre riding currently holds a seat in the legislature. Many local Liberals said they consider him as the only serious contender of the trio.

The other two, Toronto high school teacher Ted Culp and Ottawa businessman Michael Houlton, are regarded as "fringe contenders", they said and likely will drop out in early balloting.

Both men tried for party leadership at the last convention and dropped out.

Mr. Peterson, described as a "promising new recruit to the caucus" works as the party's energy critic.

He carried local Liberals the party is at the crossroads and "I'm very concerned the party will lose its mandate if it does not reach out renewed and refreshed," he said.

The next election in Ontario will be fought on the basis of leadership, he said.

Mr. Culp came under attack by members of the audience when he suggested the province "nationalize" petroleum and natural gas companies in the face of what he referred to as an energy crisis which now exists.

Mr. Houlton, highly critical of current leadership, said Mr. Nixon "was more like a vicious animal attacking a foe than a politician providing solutions," during the last election.

"We had our chance in the last election and we blew it," said Mr. Houlton.

He urged delegates to consider the "horse control" of economy as "the number one issue."

Though Quinte MPP Hugh O'Neil preferred not to comment on the three candidates, one leadership delegate said he was "doubtful" that Mr. Culp or Mr. Houlton would stand a chance and that Mr. Peterson's lack of experience in the legislature would also work against him.

Election Preparations Under Way Says O'Neil

Its never too soon to start preparing for the next provincial election, says Quinte MPP Hugh O'Neil.

The Liberal member of the legislature made the comment during a meeting of the Hastings and Quinte Liberal Associations in Belleville Thursday.

"We've already had a few executive meetings in preparation for an election we are going to win," he told a crowd of more than 100 area party supporters.

"We just want to be totally prepared," he said.

Getting Ahead

Young Bill MacFarland had gotten ahead of about 200 other youngsters at the Belleville Armories Thursday and was able to get a costume and clown's head with which to march in tomorrow's Santa Claus parade. The youngster was among about 100 who received costumes while another 200, some after waiting for hours, went without.

Santa Claus Parade Will Encircle Downtown with Over 140 Entries

Saturday morning's Santa Claus Parade will be the biggest spectacle of its kind ever arranged in the city, said John Lewars, chairman of the organizing committee.

The parade will include more than 140 entries such as bands, cars, floats and majorette groups.

The parade will move off at 10 a.m. from Wallbridge Ave., along Moira St. to the upper bridge, south on Front St., through the market square then north along Pinnacle St. to disband in the Station St. area.

"At one point — due to the length of the parade — the complete downtown section will be encircled by marchers and floats," said Mr. Lewars.

"There is an enormous number of people who will be participating in the parade," he said.

If by chance you miss the 10 a.m. parade, you'll have a second chance at 8 p.m. via cable television.

The technical crew doing the taping will be members of Cablevue's program volunteers. Again this year the mobile unit from the Sir James Whitney School's teacher education centre, is being used for videotaping.

Other showings of the parade on Cablevue will be 8 p.m. Dec. 12 and 7 p.m. Dec. 17-18, said Cablevue 4 program director Lee Jourard.

S.A. Armstrong Staff Accepts One-year Pact

E. A. Armstrong workers will return to their jobs next Monday with their first union contract as members of the United Steel Workers Union.

Approximately 40 employees at the plant walked off their jobs last Monday in support of wage and fringe benefit demands.

The strike lasted only two days with union ratification of a contract Wednesday night. The contract gives workers a variety of fringe benefit improvements and an hourly wage increase of 55 cents over a contract which will expire December of 1976.

The plant manufactures cast steel pump and heat exchanger parts which are relayed to Toronto centres for machining and assembly.

E. A. Armstrong began operations in Belleville nine months ago with its plant situated in the city's north west industrial park.

The contract signed this week is the first to be secured by the employees who organized their union local last August.

The pay hike will bring the plant's average wage from $4.37 to $4.92 an hour with added provisions for improved shift bonuses, said Walter Stethem, vice - president of engineering and manufacturing.

Seniors' Home Gets Loan

DESERONTO — A Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation loan of $237,500 has been approved for construction of a senior-citizen housing project in Deseronto, Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, reports.

The funding, to Ontario Housing Corp. is for a 35-apartment building for which rents are geared to income.

Work began on the site this week with a start on excavation.

Keeping on Your Toes

Dancers Peter Locke, 21, and Donna Kelly, 16, of the Ecole Centre, go over their routine for a special performance Saturday in Ottawa.

The Belleville couple will dance the Second Movement in the Bizet Symphony at a benefit for the Ottawa United Way campaign.

Milk Producer Says
Imports Hurting Cheesemakers

BY CLIFF KENYON
Staff Reporter

Pressure must be exerted to stop imports of excessive amounts of cheese into Canada a local Ontario Milk Board spokesman said in Belleville Thursday.

If less cheese was imported, said Allen Ketcheson, more domestic dairy products could be sold in the form of cheese.

"If we allow imports of cheese at the rate it has been for the past two years it will be the greatest threat the industry has faced," Mr. Ketcheson of Madoc told delegates at the 48th annual Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association convention.

"We are going through a period of time when producers are not going to like what is happening," said Mr. Ketcheson.

Milk producers have been encouraged over the years to increase production and they have responded: "If we don't protect the producers and the industry at large it will go back faster than it came up in the past few years."

Richard Price of the Canadian Dairy Commission said it is expected there will be a drop in 1976 milk production in Canada compared with this year.

"There is a world-wide surplus skim milk powder and low prices and this is likely to last about two years," said Mr. Price at the convention.

Production of Canadian cheddar cheese dropped 6¼ per cent this year compared with amounts produced last year.

Consumption has stopped increasing, said Mr. Price, for the first time in several years, because general economic conditions, higher prices and growth of imports."

Price increased for one pound of cheddar cheese in Belleville, are indicated by figures taken over the past three years in October: 71 cents a pound in 1973, 88 cents in 1974 and $1.06 this year.

"We hope to see fewer price increases and recover of cheddar consumption in 1976," said Mr. Price.

"There is still a real demand for Canadian cheddar for which there is no substitute."

Mr. Ketcheson said the Canadian market is as good as any according to population "but can only be as it is if it is protected.

"Many of us (milk producers) knew last months ago it wasn't going to be easy. It's easy to live in a growing market."

Police Seek Aid Finding Suspects

Belleville Police Chief Dourley Crosbie said today he is asking city residents and merchants to be on the outlook for two shoplifters and a suspect vehicle following an incident at Walker's Stores Ltd. at the Front St. Thursday.

Chief Crosbie said police seek information on a white female, about 20 years of age, five feet tall, 100 pounds with light-colored shoulder length hair.

The other person is a white male about 25 years, six feet, one inch tall, 180 pounds with dark curly hair.

The vehicle is a 1969-model, gold, two door hardtop Mercury and Chief Crosbie added that police believe "these people are professionals" due to their method of operation.

He said two persons asking suspicions in the store at about 2:30 p.m. fled through a rear door, dropping a large, bundle began to approach them.

Chief Crosbie said the purse contained four pairs of men's dress trousers valued at almost $80.

Delegates Elected

At a meeting of the Hastings and Quinte Liberal associations held in Belleville Thursday, twelve area people were selected as voting delegates to the January provincial leadership convention to be held in Toronto.

Delegates from the Quinte Association are: Brian Knudsen, Jim O'Brien, Kerry Sadek, Kathy Brady Shirley Birt, Betty Henley, George Bunn and a final delegate from the young liberal association.

From the Hastings Riding are Tom Lally, Nancy Walker, Yvonne Harrington and Bob Vigil purse, after a stall Ross.

Mayor Guest Speaker

Belleville Mayor Bea Corke will be the guest speaker at the Quinte District Labor Council's meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Labourers Hall.

Mayor Corke said Wednesday he is not sure what subject he will discuss at the meeting but said he will entertain a question and answer period.

Schools Entered

Holy Rosary Elementary School on East College St. here, after entering an attempted break-in three nights ago, has been the object of unknown vandals for the past two nights.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today that $182 worth of classroom equipment and a Canadian flag were stolen Wednesday night but it is unknown what was stolen Thursday.

He said entry was gained on both occasions by pushing a stiff wire through a key box and using the bent end of the wire to trip the panic bar on the front door.

Grade 7 student Churchill Elementary School on Macdonald Ave. was also broken into sometime between closing time on Wednesday and 8:30 a.m. Thursday setting thieves a record player of undetermined value, Chief Crosbie said.

He said the intruders inflicted $25 damage by smashing an outside window during entry and breaking a soft drink machine.

Needs Protection

Canadian milk and cheese industries need protection against imports, Allen Ketcheson, Madoc Ontario Milk Board representative, said Thursday. He was speaking to delegates at the 48th annual Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association convention.

One Hurt as Car Rolls

A 26-year-old Toronto man was treated and released for minor injuries from Belleville General Hospital Thursday after the car in which he was a passenger overturned on County Rd. 36, one mile west of Belleville.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville identified the man as Bruce Dodds of 128 Heath St. and the driver as Celia Godkin, 27, of 40 Avenue Rd. in Toronto.

Police said the car was eastbound when it went into a right skid on the pavement and the driver, who has limited experience in driving in Canada, could not pull out of it.

Dodds attempted to assist Godkin in steering but their efforts worked against each other and the vehicle rolled over once, landing on its roof in the ditch on the north side, police said.

Constable Gary Roberts who estimated $1,000 - $1,200 damage to Godkin's 1972-model Volkswagen, said the occupants were seat belts which probably saved them from serious injury.

Dodds' shoulder harness was loose in the 11.31 a.m. mishap, causing him to bang his head on the windshield and suffer other minor injuries.

Convict Surrenders

A 21-year-old former Belleville resident surrendered to Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville here late Thursday after he escaped from a federal penitentiary at New Westminster, B.C. on Nov. 2.

Police said Arnold Stone was serving a five-year sentence after he was convicted of rape in Belleville almost two years ago.

Police said Stone gave himself up to Cpl. Bill Reid and Constable Brian Skinner at his mother's residence at 224 East Moira St. at 11:45 p.m.

Mohawk Candidates To Meet Voters

TYENDINAGA — Both parties contesting the council election for the Quinte Mohawk reserve here will stage meet-the-candidate nights.

The Mohawk People's Party, led by Willard Hill, has scheduled a meeting in the reserve's community centre from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday.

The Mohawk Progressives, led by Chief William Brant will hold their meeting Monday night.

The election is set for Dec. 6.

Deseronto Councillors Tackle Council Chamber Facelift

DESERONTO — Town council here has literally hammered down the cost of rebuilding its years-old municipal chamber.

When council decided on renovating some time ago, tenders from contractors averaged about $12,000 says town clerk Sam Knapp.

For this village of 1,800 where a buck on the tax rate is $1,300, councillors felt the project would create an undue burden on taxpayers.

Their solution: If councillors wanted the job done they best do it themselves. They allocated $1,500 in this year's town budget for supplies.

Now the nine-man council — including Mayor Peter Beckinson and Reeve Georgia Lyons — have gone to work in their spare time ripping out partitions, hammering in council chamber and main office.

A town truck hauls the debris to the town dump.

The job is still not finished but at least the town got a bargain, indicates Mr. Knapp. With labor costs the job would cost 10 to 11 mills, he estimates. "This way we get it done for about one mill."

Pride in Defensive Play Keys Canadiens Streak

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Canadiens, running away from their opponents in the Norris Division of the National Hockey League, strengthened their Thursday night and broke a jinx with a 5-1 win over New York Islanders.

It was the first triumph for the Canadiens over the Islanders since March 17, 1976, when Montreal won 4-2 at home. Thursday's win enabled the Canadiens to increase their lead in the Norris Division to nine points over second-place Los Angeles Kings. It was also the fourth consecutive victory for the Canadiens, who have outscored their opponents 16-3 in that span while recording two shutouts.

In the only other game Thursday, Kansas City Scouts defeated St. Louis Blues 3-2.

In Philadelphia, N.Y., where the Canadiens last defeated the Islanders on Dec. 4, 1975, Rick Chiott scored the winning goal at the 8:11 mark of the third period after Montreal had taken a 2-0 lead in the first period and added a pair more in the second.

Goalie Billy Smith had made a save as a shot by Serge Savard got out was caught out of position when Richard Martin hit for his ninth goal of the year.

Garry Howatt and Don Awrey both were benched for a first-period fight that left Awrey with an injury.

Before the game, the Islanders had their jersey worn three times against the Canadiens in their last six regular-season games.

Larry Robinson gave Montreal a 1-0 lead in the first period before Billy MacMillan tied the score less than two minutes later for the Islanders, who remained second in the Patrick Division with 25 points. 15 behind Philadelphia Flyers.

Last year we took no pride in our defence, but now we're the best defensive team," said Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden who stopped 38 shots. "We played to give Montreal its 10th straight win and its 16th in the big defensive play. You seem to come up with it when we have to."

Will Paiement, Gerunds Gainey and Garry Bergman each scored second-period goals to lead the Scouts to victory.

Paiement's goal, his fourth of the year, came on a breakaway only 40 seconds into the second period. Gagnon added to the lead with a power-play goal at 6:32 of the period.

Bargman gave the Scouts a 3-0 lead at 9:21 of the second period. Garry Unger scored for St. Louis with his 18th goal of the season and Tom Irvine closed the scoring in the second period with his fourth goal of the season.

Goaltender Denis Herron saved the game for the Scouts with 2:23 remaining when he stopped Unger on a breakaway.

Two games are scheduled tonight with Montreal visiting Atlanta Flames and Buffalo Sabres at California Golden Seals.

Bills Secondary Turns In Surprising Effort

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Breaking Jim Braxton of Buffalo Bills did most things right Thursday and St. Louis Cardinals most things wrong.

Not really so surprising then was that the two meeting when considered, added up to a Buffalo win in the National Football League.

"This game is made in the running and Buffalo Coach Lou Saban after his Bills, 7-4, beat the Cardinals and moved to within a half-game behind leaders Dolphins in the American Conference East.

In the only other Thanksgiving Day game, quarterback James Harris fired three touchdown passes as Los Angeles Rams beat Lions 26-6, giving the Rams their third consecutive National Conference West title.

Buffalo's triumph, dropping Cards to 9-2, came on the rampaging runs of Braxton.3 yard mid-way through the third period. Fran Tuck assisted on tour of Cardinal defence.

Murray Heasley and Kim Clackson scored their first goals of the season and Randy Vyazunis got his eighth as Indianapolis beat Capitals.

Bobby Hull scored the lone Winnipeg goal.

The Mariners scored three unanswered goals in the second period to defeat the Nordiques. Gary Goodall opened the scoring in the second period snapped a 1-1 tie and gave the Mariners the win.

League action resumes tonight with Winnipeg at Toronto, Edmonton at Houston, Denver at New England and Indianapolis at Cleveland.

Buffalo yielded an early touchdown in the first quarter when a Leypoldt field goal try was blocked and returned 29 yards to the Bills' 28 by Pete Barnes, setting up a one-yard dive into the end zone by Tom Metcalf, who added another touchdown in the fourth quarter.

A drippy dome made the Pontiac Stadium turf a soggy synthetic in Detroit, but the Lions weren't able to throw a wet blanket on the Rams' Thanksgiving Day party.

Although all 80,835 tickets were sold, 11,086 persons decided not to show up for the traditional holiday battle.

While the Rams raised their record to 9-2, Detroit fell to 4-6 to see its flickering wild-card playoff hopes hood vanish. Minnesota Vikings, meanwhile, didn't even have to leave their climber table to clinch the Central Division title in the National Conference. The loss by second-place Detroit did that.

Connelly Matches WHA Mark For Most Goals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Warren Connelly became the fifth player Thursday night to score five goals in a World Hockey Association game.

The 30-year-old Connelly, who had six goals before the contest, led Minnesota Fighting Saints to a 9-3 win over Cincinnati Stingers. It was the seventh straight win for the Fighting Saints, who share first place in the Eastern Division with Cleveland Crusaders, both with 13 points.

Connelly's five goals and one assist against Cincinnati a couple of weeks ago and couldn't get his name in," said Connelly, who now has six goals in his last two games after only scoring six times in his first 17.

In other games, Indianapolis Racers beat Winnipeg Jets 3-1, Calgary Cowboys defeated Phoenix Roadrunners 5-1 and San Diego Mariners beat Quebec Nordiques 5-1.

Connelly's five goals matched the WHA single-game record shared by Cleveland's Ron Ward, who established his mark in the league's first season in 1973-73 while playing for the now-defunct New York Raiders, Ron Climie of Cincinnati, Michel Whalen, Andre Hinse of Houston and Vaclav Nedomansky of Toronto. Climie scored his goals with Toronto Toros.

The National Hockey League's record for most goals by a single player is seven, set by Joe Malone of Quebec Bulldogs in 1920. Six other players have scored six goals in a game, the last being Red Berenson in 1968 while he was playing for St. Louis Blues.

Connelly nearly got a sixth goal in the third period when he clanged a Mike Antonovich shot, but the puck rolled just wide of the post.

He scored his first goal at 9:37 of the first period, but Cincinnati's Gene Sobchuk tied the game at 1-1 at 11:30 of the period on a power play.

A pair of Connelly goals, one coming late in the first period and the other early in the second gave Minnesota a 3-1 lead. Connelly, who plays right wing at centre, added a power-play goal at 13:13 of the second period to make it 4-3 and put the game out of reach with a final goal mid-way through the third period. Fran Huck assisted on the play.

Murray Heasley and Kim Clackson scored their first goals of the season and Randy Vyazunis got his eighth as Indianapolis beat Capitals.

Bobby Hull scored the lone Winnipeg goal.

The Mariners scored three unanswered goals in the second period to defeat the Nordiques. Gary Goodall opened the scoring in the second period snapped a 1-1 tie and gave the Mariners the win.

League action resumes tonight with Winnipeg at Toronto, Edmonton at Houston, Denver at New England and Indianapolis at Cleveland.

Canadian Team Punched Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian boxers won only two bouts of 11 they entered, including one by default, in the Montreal International Competition, an amateur boxing tournament Thursday night.

Sid McKnight, a 19-year-old flyweight from Prince George, B.C., knocked out Italy's Giovanni Gamperoni in the first round of their fight.

Fred Jernigan of Tel River, N.B., won by default when his opponent, John David of the United States, failed to show.

Among the nine Canadians beaten were North American light welterweight champion Clevland Denny of Montreal and two other Quebecers, flyweight Tony Salvatore of Montreal, voted the best Olympic Games prospect at the Canadian amateur championships here earlier this year and light heavyweight Roger Tavitis of Blaie Comeau.

Denny regarded as a potential Olympic medal winner for Canada if he receives clearance from his native Guyana, was dropped in the third round by left-hander Valeri Limarev of the Soviet Union.

Salvatore, a 19-year-old bank clerk, lost to Canadian flyweight champion, was outpointed by Derek Dawkins of the U.S. while Fortin bowed to Nigeria's Albert Iyar, who has been trained by former world featherweight champion Hogan (Kid) Bassey.

Serge Romanus of France ousted Jimmy MacMillan of Kingston, Ont., in a feather-weight bout, while British Columbian Gordon Lavan lost to Ron Wiggard of Holland in a light middleweight meeting.

Robert Pinel of Kitchener, Ont., won a close decision to France's Jean-Claude Ruiz in a light welterweight bout, while Jean Rodgers opting for Ruiz and two for Fronte.

Tommy Yamaguchi of Japan took a 4-1 decision over Canadian Garry Beatty in their light middleweight encounter.

Clarke Didn't Bother to Box, Yet CABA Has Him Fighting

HALIFAX (CP) — Chris Clarke of Amherst, winner of the gold medal in lightweight boxing at the Pan-American games, was suspended indefinitely Thursday by the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association (CABA) for not accompanying the Atlantic team to Montreal for an international tournament.

The CABA said in Montreal the suspension will remain in effect until Clarke shows the cause why he did not attend the tournament when he was scheduled to be there.

The young boxer said he has no intention of going before the CABA to explain his position because "they suspended me I back to Monday without his knowing.

"I don't know what they can do me—that they can tell me everything that can or will do. I didn't do anything wrong and I won't go cringing to them."

Taylor Gordon, CABA's Atlantic region technical co-ordinator and coach of the Atlantic boxing team, was instructed to investigate the situation and report to the CABA's board of governors.

Clark said he did not make the trip because of his diabetic father's illness. He also said he had been told the team would not leave until Wednesday, Nov. 26, but the departure was set

Investigation into Brawl Continues in London

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police took statements Thursday from players and officials of the St. Catharines Black Hawks hockey team in connection with a brawl with spectators at a hockey game two weeks ago in London, Ont.

Cpl. Bill Litowski of the London detachment of the provincial police said no charges have been laid against members of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A club. He said some players and spectators probably will be served with summonses within a few days.

The statements were taken from 15 players, coach Paul Gardner and trainer Vince Walker.

The fight started when a fan allegedly threw a cup of coffee at Hawks forward Andy Whitby

ICKX RETURNING

BRUSSELS (AP) — Belgian driver Jacky Ickx, who dropped out of Formula One racing last season because he was disappointed with the Lotus car, announced Thursday he would compete in the 1976 world auto makers' championships at the wheel of a Group Five type 512 Carrera Turbo. Ickx, who will be entered on Feb. 1 at Daytona Beach, Fla., will team up with Jochen Mass of West Germany.

RENT REVIEW AND SECURITY OF TENURE

A Select Committee of the Ontario Legislature has been established to give detailed consideration to Bill 20, An Act to provide Rent Review and Security of Tenure in Residential Premises and to Bill 38, An Act to amend The Landlord and Tenant Act.

The Committee invites written submissions from all interested individuals, groups, and organizations wishing to comment on the Bills. Twenty-five copies of any briefs are requested to be submitted to the Clerk of the Committee and will be received so long as the Committee is considering the Bills. The Committee will hear oral presentations from groups and organizations that wish to appear before the Committee must so indicate to the Clerk of the Committee by Monday, December 1.

Due to the mail strike briefs may be dropped off at the Legislative Building, Queen's Park, given to your local member of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, or any Provincial Government office.

Mr. John Williams, M.P.P., Chairman.

Mr. Alec McFadden, Clerk of the Committee, Room 151, Legislative Building, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ontario.

No Place Like Home?

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The home court advantage hasn't been very advantage for Cleveland Cavaliers so far this season.

In fact, the way the season has been going, it's been a disadvantage for them to play at home.

"Two baskets in a row in the late going every time we play at home seem to mean the ball game," said Cleveland coach Bill Fitch after his Cavaliers dropped a 98-91 National Basketball Association decision Thursday night to Kansas City Kings.

The defeat plunged Cleveland's home-court record to 1-4. They've been more prosperous on the road, spilling 10 games.

In other games, Golden State Warriors edged Milwaukee Bucks 106-105 and, New York Knicks defeated Washington Bullets 98-94.

In the only American Basketball Association game, Utah Stars nipped Kentucky Colonels 128-126 in overtime.

Jimmy Walker and Nate Archibald, a couple of old hands, combined for 53 points to pace the Kansas City offence.

Along with Walker's 30 points and Archibald's 23, the Kings got a clutch basket by rookie Bill Robinzine with 27 seconds left to beat the Cavaliers.

Rookie Gus Williams scored 23 of his 25 points in a furious fourth-quarter rally that gave defending NBA champion Golden State its victory over Milwaukee.

Earl Monroe scored eight of his 20 points in the fourth quarter to lead New York over slumping Washington.

Chances Always Better With Goegan in Lineup

The Belleville Bobcats have their work cut out for them tonight when they take on the division leading Pickering Panthers at the Memorial Arena at 8 p.m. But one thing that'll make their task a little easier is the leadership of 20-year-old Grant Goegan.

GRANT GOEGAN

A veteran of three Metro Junior B seasons, "Goe" (pronounced gogo) sat out nearly three games recovering from a back injury. During that span, the Cats lost all three starts — their only three losses of the year.

Even though he's been out, officially, for two games, he still leads Bobcat scorers with 33 points. The hustling, 20-year-old centre has 15 goals and 18 assists — both tops on the club — in 12 games.

If you happen to be looking for him at tonight's game, don't look for the man standing in front of the net. Despite his size (five-foot-eight, 185 pounds) Goegan spends most of his time setting up his teammates and digging the puck out of corners.

Reid's Still Undefeated

Reid's Dairy continued their dominance over their Quinte Hockey League opposition Thursday night as they toppled Belvedere Hotel 7-1. In the other contest, O'Brien-Steele defeated Devolin Motors 4-2.

Moe Hunter tallied twice in the leading Reid's to the victory. Singles went to Gerry Lucas, Carl Boomhower, Bob Hunter, Rick Rosebush and Al Ray. Jason Morris replied for the losers.

Kevin Allen tallied twice and drew an assist in O'Brien-Steele's win. Joe Clark and Al Earle got one goal each and John Baker, and Ray Johnson scored for Devolin.

Local Ladies Edged

Belleville Ladies Squash League team suffered one of their rare defeats Thursday night as Kingston 'Y' edged the locals 5-2.

Judy * Rappel and Sandy Clark won their respective matches, but their teammates found the going much rougher.

Rappel downed Joyce Dawson 9-2, 9-2 and 9-1 and Claus bounced Wanada Gurdi 9-1, 9-1 and 9-7.

Jane Vombrenell lost to Janet Mahoney 9-3, 9-5 and 9-6; Eileen McLaughlin went the distance before bowing to Janet Fennemore 9-0, 9-7, 3-9, 4-9 and 9-5; Judy Pultz lost 6-9, 7-9 and 9-10.

Nicks Power May Be Deceiving

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Nicholson Catholic College appears little bigger than a drop in the education system's bucket. However out of this tiny academy stems a basketball giant.

"They have to be the team to beat," said Bay of Quinte Basketball convenor, Bill Miller. "I'd consider them one of the best in Ontario."

It's Nicholson's senior squad Miller refers to. The Nicks amassed an amazing record last season in regular and tournament play and capped it off with the all-Ontario A Championship.

This season the same five starting Nicks that captured the provincial title are together again for the 1975-76 campaign.

However, coach Gary Duggan says he feels the team is not as strong as it was last season. While the Nicks still have their big five starters, their awesome bench has gotten up and walked away.

Two of the players, including Duggan's sixth man in the lineup, graduated. Two others transferred to other high schools and a fifth player hung up his uniform because of knee problems. That leaves the Nicks with a two-man bench.

"That's what we're going to go with during regular season games," said Duggan, "a seven man team."

Duggan has begun a process whereby he hopes to increase the stamina of his "magnificent seven". "We're going to go with that number of players eventually. It's a top physical condition," he explained.

Even with this limited squad, the Nicks will likely live up to Miller's predictions. The five returnees are: ball scoring forward Jeff Boyle at six-foot-two; centre Dale Wilson at six-foot-four; ball handler Bruce Collins at six-foot-one; guard Dave Hollands in his third year of senior ball and baseline driver Danny Krasowski at six-foot. His two-man bench consists of forward Martin Seemungal, in his first year out of junior, but with some senior tournament experience, and second year ball handler Mike Lynch.

Boston No Longer NHL Teddy Bears

NEW YORK (CP) — These are salad days for coach Don Cherry as he enjoys the resurgence of the Boston Bruins on the sophomoremets of Bobby Orr and Brad Park, on their power play.

"They know when they skate on the ice, they're going to win," says Cherry, "I like that attitude."

The Bruins' fortunes began to change for the better after the big Nov. 7 trade with New York Rangers—Phil Esposito and Carol Vadnais for Park, Jean Ratelle and Joe Zanussi.

Twenty-two games into the season, the Bruins are unbeaten in nine, rate near the top of the National Hockey League in power-play goals, and are within six points of first-place Buffalo in the Adams division.

Cherry won't disagree with the suggestion that the Orr-Park power play, new as it is, has become the most devastating in the NHL.

"I should say so, the way they shoot 'em from the points and, they've only been together six or seven games. Wait until they've been together about 40 games and they're on those points, they'll get the shots past. We've got a lot of goals on that power play since they started."

Park, who stood in the shadow of Orr as the NHL's "second best" defenceman while with the Rangers, feels Orr's example has helped make the new game much stronger. He said Orr puts the puck almost on the net.

Orr has become much more deliberate on the ice since his fourth knee operation. After missing the first 13 games of the season, Orr has taken up where he left off after winning the scoring championship with 101 points last season. In 19 games, he has five goals and 13 assists.

How Many Times Should Wenzel Be Punished?

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Middle distance runner Joan Wenzel was angry in Mexico City last month when Pan-American Games officials took away her bronze medal and barred her from further competition.

A slight trace of a banned drug was found in her system after she finished third in the 800 metres.

"I was punished twice for the same offence," she said at the time.

Now Mrs. Wenzel, who lives in Waterloo, Ont., has been published a third time. The International Amateur Athletic Federation has barred her from competition for life.

The suspension was automatic under IAAF rules but Joan regards it as unfair and has appealed to the federation.

Her trouble started when the night before her race in Mexico City, she took a pill that turned out to be an antihistamine which happens to contain a tiny quantity of ephedrine, also known as speed.

Dr. Ted Percy of Montreal, chief Canadian medical officer with the Pan-Am team, explained what happened.

Joan brought some tablets down with her from Canada, cold remedy (Dimetapp) which anyone can buy over the counter without a prescription.

"Unfortunately, she had these mixed up with a collection of vitamins and iron tablets and the assumes that what happened was that the night before the race she must have taken one of these tablets inadvertently.

Joan thought that when she returned her medal that would be the end of it. But after Pan-Am officials sent their report—without including any explanation of the circumstances—the International Federation, there was no alternative but to ban her for life.

Ken Twigg, executive director of the Canadian Track and Field Association, says Mrs. Wenzel now will have to prove her innocence and that won't be easy. He adds that the International federation probably won't hear her appeal until April.

Since Joan is prevented from competing in any competition, because those who run against her would be in danger of suspension, her chances of reaching her peak for the Olympics are almost nil.

Petes, Canadians Get Easy Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Last - place Peterborough Petes in the Leyden division of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A league downed Toronto Marlboros 4-1 Thursday to gain their fifth win in 22 starts this season.

In other contests, Kingston Canadians outscored Windsor Spitfires 7-4 and Oshawa Generals dumped Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds 4-3.

Play resumes tonight with St. Catharines at Kitchener, Hamilton at London, Oshawa at Sudbury and Hamilton at Ottawa.

In Peterborough, the Petes scored two unanswered goals in the third period after taking period leads of 1-0 and 3-0.

The Petes got goals from Vic Batley, Dave Skead, Tony Casolaito and Scott Hunter.

Mike Kitchen replied for Toronto, outshot 35-28 before 2,100 spectators.

Toronto remains tied with St. Catharines for fourth place in the Emms Division.

Canadians 7 Spitfires 4

Mark Sunor scored two third-period goals to pace the visiting Canadians to the win which moved them into a third-place tie with Oshawa in the Leyden division.

Sunor's first goal, in the third minute of the period, broke a 3-3 tie and his second, 15 minutes later, completed the scoring before a crowd of 2,324.

Kingston's other goals came from Barry Scully, Larry Mc-Illmoyle, Mike Simurda, Mike Crombeen and Ron Davidson.

Guy Lanier led the Spitfires with three goals and Joel Quenneville had one.

Windsor held a 37-26 edge in shots and remained in last place of the Emms division.

Generals 4 Greyhounds 3

A two-goal performance by Oshawa's Paul Gardner helped to hand Sault Ste. Marie its first home-ice loss this season before 2,282 spectators.

Greg Malone and Alec Jeans got the other goals for Oshawa in its seventh road victory in 14 outings.

Tony Cuomo and Doug Patey replied for the Greyhounds, who had won eight and tied four in 12 previous home games.

Sault Ste. Marie, second place in the Leyden division, outshot Oshawa 45-36.

Oshawa built up a 3-1 first-period lead and increased it to 3-1 after two periods.

ELSINAR RUNNING

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (CP-AP) — Elsinar, owned by George Henderson of Montreal, will run out of the No. 3 post Friday night when nine horses clash in the $100,000 American Trotting Classic at Hollywood Park. Saturday, the sports' seventh million-dollar with earnings of $1,017,261, will leave from post No. 1 in the 1¼-mile race.

COOLS and HEATS your home

Westinghouse heat pump system can now be added to most gas, oil and electric furnaces

Here's how it works:

SUMMER — In hot weather, the Westinghouse Hi/Re/Li Heat Pump removes warm, muggy inside air to the outdoors—leaving your home cool and comfortable.

WINTER — In cool weather, the Westinghouse Hi/Re/Li Heat Pump absorbs available heat from outside air and transfers it into your home.

In colder weather, your furnace supplements the Westinghouse Hi/Re/Li Heat Pump to keep your home warm and comfortable.

If you are building a new home or replacing your present furnace, consider an all-electric Westinghouse Hi/Re/Li Heat Pump System. You'll enjoy year round home comfort and be ready for tomorrow's energy crisis.

Westinghouse helps make it happen

In Memoriam

VANCE — In loving memory of a dear mother, Sarah Myrtle Vance, who passed away December 4th, 1973. Days of sadness still come over us, Tears flow down unseen, But memories live forever near us, Of our dear mother, Sarah Myrtle Vance. Sadly missed by her family.

ROSS — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mary Ross, who passed away nine years ago, November 30, 1966.
There is a link death cannot sever,
Love and memories last forever.
Sadly missed by husband Jack and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

We would like to express our sincere thanks to all our relatives, friends and neighbours for their floral tributes during our bereavement. Also for the cards, visits, telephone calls and prayers. Special thanks to Rev. Cherrington, Dr. Avery and the staff on the 2nd floor, Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital.
— Jim and Marcia Cress.

MORGAN — Special thanks to everyone who remembered us during our St. Patrick's cards and gifts and to those who sent flowers, especially Dr. Bowerman and Dr. Jones. Also to express our thanks to friends, neighbors and relatives, who remembered us during our sad bereavement, with expressions of sympathy, cards, flowers, telephone calls, donations, food and to the many who brought food to the house, to the ladies of the UCW at North Trenton Church, to Rev. Cherrington for his visits and for words of comfort and to Mr. Hoskin who arranged, staff and students at Trenton High and the Faculty of Technical service from the staff at Hospital, Dr. Bowerman and Dr. Jones, pallbearers, flower bearers and honorary pallbearers, Bert's Aunt and Dad, absentees, Mrs. Lyons, Toronto, and Lee Haigh.

I take to express my deepest thanks to my family, relatives and friends for the flowers, cards, gifts and visits and the many phone calls, both to myself and to Mrs. Ross, to Dr. Bowerman and staff at Belleville General Hospital, staff at Belleville Central Hospital, Dr. Jones and staff at Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital, to Lt. and Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Ross' friends at the Legion, Ladies Auxiliary and Mrs. Ross' friends at the hospital, for help at home during my recent convalescence and the later at home. To congregation of Trenton United Church for the prayers that are on my behalf. Thank you very much.

WHAT'S A REMNANT?

It's what's left from a ninety-foot roll of 2 foot wide carpet after several pieces have been sold. Because of odd sizes, low prices, business is terrific at 301 Pinnacle St. (next door to the A & P) and we now have over a hundred remnants ranging from 2 feet by 12 feet to 12 feet by 19 feet, all greatly reduced below our regular low prices. Be early for the best selection.

Your Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

Saturday, Nov. 29, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Look not your pleasures in groups or among crowds today. Happiness comes through the company of one you cherish above all others.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Today you'll find time to do that postponed chore. It may be small to others, but heart and mind combine to make it a big thing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Situations that have no chance for others could prove to be rare things for us today. If you don't push your good fortune beyond reason.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're a far more sparkling person today than you realize. Don't hide your light under a bushel. Let your spirit shine forth brightly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have creative sex appeal today, not in the physical sense but in your demeanor which members of the opposite sex find irresistible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) While others take their time at fun and games you should keep your nose to the grindstone today. The payoff will enable you to play better later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) In addition to your natural charm today, there's an extra dash of enthusiasm about you which makes your personality more charismatic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) While others are bemoaning the plight of an unfortunate friend, you won't. You'll perform your good offices secretly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You retain the desire and the capacity to be pleasantly sociable today. Don't stop at the spot. You can handle it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Business and pleasure are a good mix for you today. Take the initiative in promoting some light diversion as a prelude to an important discussion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) The results you're seeking today are to be achieved with gentle, but firm, persuasion. Don't be afraid to add a dab of humor.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Soft lights, sweet music and a rendezvous with the one you love best could please you today. Don't spoil it by bringing others into the picture.

Students Turn To Math

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario high school students are turning more to mathematics and science and away from languages, a provincial education survey indicates.

The survey, compiled from annual enrolment figures, shows that 352,200 more students took science last year than in 1971, when it was compulsory. At the same time, there were 42,500 fewer students enrolled in French.

In addition, the study shows increasing interest in new subjects, such as economics, law and consumer studies.

Latin and geography, two of the traditional high school subjects, also show a drop in enrolment, but more students are taking English, re-introduced as a compulsory subject last year.

Over-all student enrolment increased by 15,000 from 1972 to 1,720,800 in 1974, while enrolment in language courses other than French showed a drop of 12,000 students across the province.

In Grades 11 and 12, there were 37,000 geography students, compared with 202,000 in 1971, the survey shows.

Only 1,000 of the province's 51,200 Grade 13 students were studying Latin and Greek.

In earlier grades, the two courses show similar low enrolments and the Toronto board of education's curriculum development officer, Tony Rutledge, says many of the board's classical language department heads have had to be reassigned.

"You can't head a department when you're talking only to yourself," he said.

Ontario's new credit system allows a student to pick optional subjects from various grade levels, with a total of 27 credits needed for a diploma.

Top Trotters, Pacers Named

TORONTO' (CP) — Albert's Star, a three-year-old pacer owned by the Selling Stable of Elmira, has been voted age, top harness horse on the Ontario Jockey Club's three-track circuit in 1973.

The colt set limited action on the circuit because he was busy with major stakes engagements in both Canada and the United States.

He won the $140,000 Prix de l'Est in Montreal and was third in the Little Brown Jug final in the U.S. after winning his heat in 1:56.4, a world record for the first heat of a multi-heat event.

The colt was bred by Peter Seiling who shares ownership with his son, Don. His sons, Rick and Rod, who plays for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

Along with his other wins, the colt had six seconds an four thirds in 20 races for earnings of $286,000.

The colt was named a member of the top performer in the three-year-old pacing category by harness racing reporters, handicappers and racing officials.

Ron Waples of Rockwood, Ont., a cousin of Keith Waples, was named horseman of the year.

Winners in other categories were:

—Aged pacer: Derby's Gesi, a four-year-old gelding owned by Gil McCalman of Parkhill, Ont.

—Aged trotter: Dalmonica Hanover, a six-year-old mare who races for Dorothy Hardy Hanover and Al Pritchard, Pa.

—Two-year-old pacer: Beatron Hanover, trained and driven by Keith Waples on the farm of Barry M. Stable of Ottawa.

—Two-year-old trotter: Portia Lobell, a filly owned by John Ward of Cross, Ont.

—Three-year-old trotter: Seacrest Hanover, owned by Bill Megens and his wife Antoinette from Perrysville, Ont.

A new category, claimer of the year, was won by Tartorn, a mare trained and driven by Bob Lackey for his uncle Sam Lackey of Orangeville, Ont.

The presentation of awards will be made Jan. 20 at the annual dinner of the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association in Toronto.

Davis Cup Team Hopes To Avenge 1974 Showing

MEXICO CITY (Reuter)— Canada goes into its Davis Cup tie with Mexico today convinced it has an enormous talent waiting in tennis defeat of a year ago.

"It is going to be a very close match but I am confident we can win, and the players are confident too," said team captain Don Fontana.

Canada caused surprise by leaving national singles champion Tony Roche, 33, of Vancouver, out of the side for the singles matches. Instead he picked Dale Power, 26, from Ottawa and Rejean Genois, 22, of Quebec City.

Genois meets Joaquin Loyo in the first match today and Power faces Marcelo Lara.

BEFORE YOU BUY ANY STEREO PLEASE READ THIS...

We at Radio Castle have watched several attempts to explain stereo buying to the consumer. We felt that although these attempts were honestly in the best interests of the public they fell a little short for reasons that were quite evident. The author had no ill-many experience, the writer was not well versed in the stereo field or the explanations were so technical that they were hard to understand.

Fortunately we were lucky enough to come upon the following article in "Sound Magazine" and with their permission we would like to present it to you as we feel it is the best guide to home stereo buying out to date. Because of the length of this article it will be presented in two issues of the Intelligencer. We therefore suggest you cut this half out and retain it until next Friday's edition.

Or, how to buy like an expert with a novice's knowledge . . .

How do I assemble a high-quality listening system?

That's the most-heard question around sound. And, as it happens, there are an infinite number of ways to assemble a first-class system. These range all the way from the quick and easy method (walk into the store and ask the salesman for advice) to the right way.

The right way, unfortunately, isn't as easy. And it takes much longer. But you greatly improve your chances of getting good equipment at the right price.

Home audio isn't all that much different from any other technically-oriented hobby; you'll get more satisfaction out if you put more study, effort, and time directly into it.

Note the emphasis on the word "properly". You see, in many cases time is not used effectively in study of it is all too easy to fall into the trap of endless talk about and comparison of the "specs".

Unquestionably, specs are important. But you shouldn't spend most of your looking-shopping-listening time on them. The bulk of your time should be spent, after initial reading and studying, on listening, comparing, and more listening.

So, although we'll spend a bit more technical here for a moment, don't despair. This is a primer on how to get the most sound for your money with the least frustration, confusion and headaches and how to get the most information and guidance from minimal study of the electronic jargon and scientific literature.

But enough for words of encouragement; the time has come to take the plunge!

Reading the Specs

The seasoned audio enthusiast can spend hours reading spec sheets, comparing things like intermodulation distortion, image rejection, and power bandwidth. And each is important because it describes performance of some aspect of the unit. But, because there are so many separate specifications for, in the language of the engineers, "parameters"), they can confuse even experienced technicians.

So how can the budding music lover figure it all out? Happily, you don't have to.

Let's start with a receiver, which is basically an amplifier and tuner combined. The biggest single clue to the quality of the receiver is in its power rating (though price is usually a pretty fair index, too, since buyers tend to keep a pretty close competitive eye on one another).

There are several different ways of stating the power rating of amplifiers (and the terms of watts-per-channel) and you may find, in comparing different makes, that they aren't measured the same by every manufacturer as they are by another. The two most commonly used methods of measurement are average continuous (also called "root mean square", or RMS) power. Both are known only to the technicians, since, strictly speaking, it isn't correct (watts and IHF (Institute of High Fidelity) watts. For the sake of brevity, we believe firmly that the continuous rating system is superior and we use this measurement system when comparing units.

What's the difference between continuous and IHF watts. As the name implies, continuous wattage is the amount of power the receiver can pump out over a prolonged period of time. IHF wattage, on the other hand, has to be maintained for a much briefer period of time. And, since any amplifier (or amplifier section of a receiver) can pump out more power in a brief period of time than it can for hours, we believe firmly the IHF rating will be greater than the continuous wattage.

Or, to put the matter in another manner, IHF rating serves to inflate the power output rating.

So the first thing that the consumer has to know is to be sure that what he is comparing between receivers are measured in the same way (either both in continuous or both in IHF terms).

But that's not all you have to watch for in amplifier ratings. It is possible to produce considerably more power if you are willing to accept much greater distortion in the reproduced music. In other words, an amplifier (or the amplifier section of a receiver) is able to pump out x watts without exceeding 0.5% T.H.D. (T.H.D. stands for total harmonic distortion and is measured as a percent of the total signal being produced) but, if we allow the acceptable amount of distortion to increase to 1.0%, the amplifier will now produce x+y watts.

Because of this, it is necessary not only to be sure that the wattage ratings of the machines you are comparing are measured in the same way (either continuous or IHF) but also that they are measured for the same amount of distortion content.

Finally, the power output of an amplifier will be affected by the impedance (resistance) of the speakers to which the amplifier is connected. Specifically, the power output of the amplifier will be greater if the speaker impedance is lower. So an amplifier which produces m watts of power output with speakers which have 8 ohms impedance will produce m+n watts with speakers which have only 4 ohms impedance.

To sum up then, to make a meaningful comparison of power outputs between two amplifiers (or the amplifier sections of two receivers), it is necessary to be sure that the watts are measured in the same way at the same speaker impedance and with the same distortion content.

How Much Power?

Like the question of how much horsepower is needed in a car, the question of how much power an amplifier needs is almost impossible to answer. All we know for certain is that, to hear concert-hall music in the home, we require many more watts of power than a table radio offers; good talk and background music require far less power than the rolling thunder of tympani and bass drums, the profundo of eight double basses, or the Franz Liszt Organ Concerto.

In a small room, will most speakers, 15 watts per channel (continuous) may do a very creditable job. But in a medium room, 30 watts per channel might well be lost if driving top-quality acoustic suspension speakers. Some engineers even hold that 60 watts per channel are required for total realistic reproduction of concert-hall sound.

In other words, theory is no definite answer to this question. However, it is possible to provide some approximate answers. Such as — basically — one should spend as much as he can afford for amplifier power after getting the best affordable speakers whose sound he likes. The amount of power needed depends on the efficiency of the speaker, the loudness at which it will be used, the volume (in cubic feet) of the listening room, and how the room is furnished.

A great deal of it depends on the user and the equipment itself. For instance, a 20-watt receiver driving a very inefficient speaker system may be more than sufficient to give some listeners all the sound they want. Conversely, however, a 100-watt receiver driving a very-low-efficiency loudspeaker may not produce enough volume for another listener's needs. The chart reproduced here should serve as an approximate guide to how much power (per stereo channel) you'll require for various room sizes, speaker efficiencies, and listening levels.

Bear in mind that human beings do not hear increases in sound as the electrical instruments show increases in power. Doubling the amount of power does not create a sound which is twice as loud; to double even this, the actual power must be increased ten-fold.

Another method of calculating the required amount of acoustic power (in watts) needed for a given listening room has been suggested by Acoustic Research. AR's formula is as follows:

(1) Find the volume of the listening room in cubic feet, including hallways or adjacent rooms into which the listening room opens. for example, a room which is 14x22 feet with an 8-foot ceiling has a volume of 14x22x8—2464 cubic feet. 2400 is close enough.

(2) Divide the volume by 150. Or, if you find it easier, divide by 300 and multiply by 2. In our example, 2400 divided by 300 is 8&2—16.

The answer (16) is the minimum continuous wattage needed per channel to play music in an average room at a loud but safe level than most people would feel necessary.

If the room is acoustically "dead" because of the presence of many large amounts of carpeting or draperies, half as much power again will be needed. Thus our 16 watts would increase to 24 watts in a dead room. By the same token, however, if the room is highly reflective with panelled walls and tiled floor (which are typical of many rumpus rooms), about ½ of the calculated power will suffice.

How much space can be covered by an amplifier with a pair of high-quality, low-efficiency speaker systems? An amplifier of 15 watts continuous power supplies high-fidelity sound at solid volume in 9000 cubic feet of normally furnished room space.

However, if you really do worry about such things, rest assured that 15 watts won't hurt anything except your pocketbook (provided you have chosen speakers which can handle the amplifier's power) and will provide adequate power — as well as higher maximum sound power levels.

Room Size	Speaker Efficiency		Distance High Efficiency
Listening Level	Speakers Small	Speakers Large	Speakers Small	Speakers Large
Background	5-10	10-15	5-8	8-12
Medium	15-30	40-50	10-15	15-20
Loud	30-60	60-100	15-30	20-40
Rock Festival	30-75	100+	30-60	30-100

The System's Components

Most listeners are aware that there are three separate things that must be done in order to recreate music in the home.

First, the signal must be picked up, either from disc (or tape recordings or from radio waves.) Second, the signals must be amplified in order to make them strong enough to drive one or more loudspeakers. And, third, the amplified signal is used to drive the loud speaker which is normally a system; i.e. it consists of several drivers rather than just a single speaker) to set up patterns of air pressure changes in the listening area.

The changes in air pressure which are created by the loudspeakers are the same as the changes in air pressure that were set up by the original music-making instruments when the recording was made in the studio. These changes in air pressure are what we hear as sound.

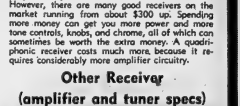
Many years ago, the electrical parts of the listening set-up called for, in addition to the radio tuner or phonograph which were responsible for providing the original signal, a power amplifier and a separate preamplifier-control unit. When these components were connected to a loudspeaker, we obtained high fidelity.

Today, there are fewer and fewer separate preamps and power amps. Many people buy them both built into one unit along with a tuner and called a receiver. However, where there are systems that still keep the tuner separate from the amplification circuitry, the preamp and the control amp are normally built into one package and called an "integrated" amplifier (except among most consumers, who wisely refer to the integrated unit as simply an "amplifier").

The beauty of this integration process is that there are now far fewer pieces of equipment to find room for —.and far fewer cables to be connected. With a receiver, it's only necessary to plug in a record player and a tape deck together with some speakers and everything is ready to operate.

A complete receiver may cost less than $200 (though it's stretching things a bit to call this "high fidelity") or well over a thousand dollars. However, there are many good values in the market running from about $300 up. Spending more money can get you more power and more tone controls, and chrome, all of which can sometimes be worth the extra money. A quadraphonic receiver is more expensive because it requires considerably more amplifier circuitry.

Other Receiver (amplifier and tuner specs)



As we've noted, the amount of distortion (which is listed in the specs as T.H.D. — total harmonic distortion) is also an important consideration. This figure should never be more than 1% at the rated power output and in medium-priced receivers generally, weigh in at no worse than 0.5%. The very best units will be rated at only 0.1% T.H.D.

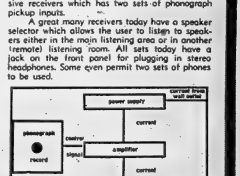
Another key specification is the sensitivity of the FM section. This is rated in microvolts (abbreviated to uV). Generally speaking, better tuners is about 2 uV. (The difference between 2.0 and 1.8 uV is an indication of better quality in the case of the 1.8 uV figure; however, in meaningful terms, it makes no real operational difference.) What is worth noting but all too often isn't given is the amount of signal (in uV) that the tuner requires to produce useful quieting (50 dB of quieting) in stereo reception. This, in very good receivers, may be around only 10 uV; in lesser ones, it may be 50 uV or more.

Also important is the FM tuner's capture ratio. This spec tells you how well the tuner will perform when two stations are transmitting on the same frequency. It measures how much stronger (in dB) the desired signal must be than the undesired signal. The importance of a good capture ratio becomes apparent if the listener is situated fairly close between two stations which may be separated by 100 miles or more) that broadcast on the same wave length. In such a case, a good capture ratio will lock the tuner solidly on stations being received. Figures like 1.5 and 2.5 dB are typical of good sets today; a difference of only 3 dB in capture ratio is a definite indication of superiority.

Spurious response and image rejection are also good indicators of FM sensitivity. Typical figures are 60 to 70 dB, while a difference of 10dB here is significant. The measurements, as the names imply, indicate how well the receiver will ignore extraneous signals. The larger the figure, the better, of course.

In addition to checking the key specs (power, sensitivity, and capture ratio), you may have special requirements which will affect your choice of receiver. For example, if you intend to copy from one tape recorder to another, you'll want to get a unit which has two sets of stereo tape outputs and two sets of tape inputs. If you are a musician (besides) some people like to use a changer for background music and a manual turntable for critical listening), then you need one of the more expensive receivers which has two sets of phonograph pickup inputs.

A great many receivers today have a speaker selector which allows the user to listen to speakers either in the main listening area or in another remote of listening room. All sets today have a jack on the front panel for plugging in stereo headphones. Some even permit two sets of phones to be used.



A simplified diagram of what happens in a phonograph. Tiny impulses from the record are used to control the strong electrical power from the house current. This controlled current then is converted by the speakers into sound. The same is true for tape deck owners in the same way. (Courtesy AR, Inc.).

Youngsters Attend Skating School

HALIFAX (CP) — Canadians are used to teaching youngsters to skate by pulling a hockey stick in their hands before they're sizes too big on their feet, and shoving them onto the ice to play hockey.

Those days may be fading for the last three years, Halifax youngsters who aren't old enough to register in public schools have been going to Novice Skating School. There, they are exposed to technical aspects of skating, and fitted in struction programs teach them how to skate before they learn how to play hockey.

They use top-quality equipment and music is permitted on the ice unless he is in full gear.

The school teaches boys how to get their brains and feet working together so they can skate with agility and balance.

It includes instruction in starting—a skill that is difficult for five-or six-year-olds who have never skated before. It teaches them the two accepted methods of stopping—the snowplow method and the more difficult cull slide step.

Forward crossovers and backward skating are also drilled into the youngsters.

Manitoba Finance Officer Gains International Acclaim

WINNIPEG (CP) — Over the years, J. Stuart Anderson has seen Manitoba's net worth leap and Manitoba taxpayers.

He has been described as the dean of deputy finance ministers in Canada and has an international reputation as an expert in the specialized field of marketing government bond issues.

For nearly a quarter-century, Mr. Anderson has been in close personal touch with executives of the world's two most influential bond rating agencies.

This contact, together with the general fiscal policies of the government, was undoubtedly a factor in the recent decision by Moody's Investors Service Inc. of New York City to raise the rating of Manitoba bonds to AA from A1.

By itself, the improved rating will save the provincial government hundreds of thousands dollars in interest payments over the years.

"I wouldn't say that this is all due to my efforts," Mr. Anderson said in an interview. "All I'd say is it is the kind of rewards that can follow from paying a very close attention to the various important work that the rating agencies do."

Mr. Anderson's work in investment is just one of the jobs he does in his present role as the "general manager" of the finance department.

He has overseen the development of systems to assure equity in taxation and effectiveness in government spending programs.

When the province's first sales tax was introduced in 1967, Mr. Anderson had the job of retailing an efficient system for collecting tax on an estimated one billion purchases of goods in the province each year.

"Some of the biggest merchandisers in Canada tell me they're good luck and perhaps a little good management (got Manitoba sales tax) was put into effect more smoothly than any other place in Canada."

Finally, he has been actively engaged in the development of complex field of federal-provincial fiscal relations from equalization payments and shared-cost programs to the annual conferences meetings at high administration levels on new anti-inflation program.

In short, Mr. Anderson's job has grown with the development of the department, His role today is radically different from what it was when he was first appointed deputy in the then Liberal-Progressive provincial treasurer, John Dryden, in 1950.

He still remembers Mr. Dryden's dire warnings of economic collapse if the provincial government once the budget started to exceed $4 million.

The province still isn't bankrupt although the operating budget for the current fiscal year is just over $1 billion.

"We're widely regarded as a province that's looked after its financial affairs quite well through three different party governments," he said.

Mr. Anderson's long tenure as a deputy minister is by itself somewhat remarkable.

Saul Cherniack, former NDP finance minister, says the deputy minister has an uncanny ability to understand a government's policies and serve them faithfully.

Mr. Anderson himself put it this way: "I've always had the feeling that I was working to make the organization work to carry out the aims of the people in power."

A native of Kingston, Ont., he began his career as an adding machine company after his graduation from McGill University in Hamilton and found he had a certain talent for designing office systems.

That skill led to an organizational assignment with the Manitoba civil service, a job as personnel manager of CP Air in Edmonton and later work on the proposal of war plants and excess materials for the federal government.

His long acquaintance with Duff Roblin dated to 1946 when he was asked to help develop a program for rationalizing jobs and salaries in a civil service which had become restive through the salary cuts of the Depression and the wage freezes of the war years.

The system that he recommended and which the government accepted still forms the basis for the organization of Manitoba's public service.

Mr. Anderson's appointment as deputy provincial treasurer in 1958 followed a stint in Campbell asked him to try the job for a year or so. The so-called interim appointment lasted nine years and also included regulations that led to the formation of Manitoba Hydro and a secretary to the Bracken commission

ROME (AP) — A Rome court has convicted American author Robert Katz, film producer Carlo Ponti and director George Pan Cosmatos on charges of defaming Pope Pius XII in a book-turned-film on the 1944 Nazi slaying of 335 civilians in Rome.

Katz was sentenced to four months and Ponti and Pan Cosmatos to seven months each. All sentences were suspended.

Countess Eleonora Ronig-Galeazzi, widow of the late Pope, had filed criminal libel charges against the three following the showing in Italy of the film Massacre in Rome, based on Katz's book Death in Rome.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Lainie Kazan was elected an honorary citizen Wednesday for using a "blue" word to make long-distance telephone calls without paying for them.

Miss Kazan, who pleaded guilty to the charges, was sentenced to probation for 18 months, fined $250 and ordered to perform 100 months for Public Telephone Co.

Her penalty made nine calls to New York City last August 15 from a pay box, an electronic device that circumvents telephone billing systems.

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Actor Gerard Depardieu tries his hand at cards this week in an international bridge tournament.

"Bridge is my passion," the Egyptian-born film star told a press conference. "I probably should have a hobby, but when you have a hobby, you should know about it."

There are four other players, all Italian, in his team which will compete from Friday until Monday.

"I'm now making only a movie a year," Sharif, 47, told reporters.

"I found that I had no time to live a normal life when I had to make many movies."

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Actor Victor Buono is recovering from a broken shoulder bone suffered when he slipped in the shower, friends say.

The bone has failed to heal properly and, as a result, Old Time Theatre in Escondido plans to stage The Last of the Red Hot Lovers Writers, in which Buono was to appear in January.

Bill Is Innocent

LONDON (CP) — A sign seen on London Transport's Mary-lebone railway station read: "Bill stickers will be prosecuted." Scrawled under was the answer: "Bill Stickers is innocent. OK."

Prices Reported

CAMBRIDGE, England (CP) — The newspaper here, reporting on food prices in a local supermarket, said: "English lion chops at 68 pence a pound."

Robber Caught

CHATHAM, England (CP) — A police escort overtook a robber by a car that looked like.

He got a chase driver who had taken it from a car park near the police station.

Ontario Re-affirms Guideline Support

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario has not altered its intention to support federal wage and price guidelines, Treasurer Darcy McKeough told the legislature Thursday.

Mr. McKeough said federal officials believed at a meeting Wednesday that Ottawa would prefer all 10 provinces take part in the program so that uniform programs will apply across Canada.

He said the federal government has provided the provinces with two alternatives. They can take part in the federal program and let the anti-inflation board assume jurisdiction over public-sector employee or establish their own boards.

Mr. McKeough said the federal government feels that since the Ottawa board is in place and functioning, it makes sense for the provinces to use it.

The treasurer said Ontario will not sign an agreement accepting either option until the federal government passes the legislation and learns its content.

In an earlier statement to the legislature, Mr. McKeough said Ontario originally planned to take part in the federal program for two years. He said Ontario now prefers to limit it to 18 months and then look into the possibility of establishing its own board.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis said outside the legislature that he believes Mr. McKeough is preparing for a shift in Ontario's position and may be considering a move to establish a provincial anti-inflation board.

Sunday Milk Stores Need Study: Chouli

TORONTO (CP) — The legislature committee studying proposed legislation to limit Sunday store operations was told Thursday to take a close look at the operations of large milk store groups.

Kali Chouli, who said he was a manager for Beckers Milk Co. Ltd., for more than six years, told the committee it should investigate the manner in which the convenience milk stores are run.

Mr. Chouli said he and his family worked long hours operating their store. He said he worked up to 116 hours a week and an manager was paid about $400 a week.

"The work was enormous," he said. "And the company was indifferent."

Small operations, such as milk and convenience stores with three employees or fewer and less than 2,400 square feet of selling space, are to be exempt from Sunday closing provisions.

The committee also heard from several pharmacists, who urged that drug stores be exempted. Murray Rubin of Toronto, who operates a drug store in the city, said pharmacies provide a necessary service.

Solicitor-General John MacBeth, who is sponsoring the legislation, said exempting drug stores might allow large department stores to open if they have a drug department.

H. H. Sedolie asked that pet stores be exempted because the law requires that he have staff to feed, clean and care for the animals on Sundays. Selling that day would help meet his overhead.

Ross Indovina, general manager of a food store just outside Toronto, suggested Ed Ziemba (Toronto High Park-Swansea), should not be a committee member because he is a merchant.

Marchand Questioned Over Sky Shops Affair

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean Marchand, chief lieutenant to Prime Minister Trudeau in Quebec, has joined the list of top party officials visited by the RCMP in connection with Sky Shops Exports Ltd.

They said 've wanted to have some information on Sky Shops' and so forth," Mr. Marchand said later. "I said I'm ready to co-operate but you're going to do that normally. The police is not the state."

He refused to answer questions until police explained how a television reporter got a tip they were coming.

RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon, after talking to Prime Minister Trudeau, Mr. Marchand and Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, said later the force had not leaked anything.

He added it wasn't unusual for the RCMP to talk to cabinet ministers and be disputed any suggestion of a raid.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Mr. Trudeau's intervention could be interpreted as an effort "to create some kind of distraction."

The previous day, former Quebec justice minister Jean-Jacques Choquette, now an independent member of the Quebec national assembly, was critical of news of the Olympic raids being published by officials before the raids were completed.

Mr. Choquette, who quit the Liberal party earlier this year, said this could have impeded the success of the police.

Mr. Marchand told a reporter the RCMP was coming to see him after the reporter informed him of a Toronto rumor that his Quebec City home had been raided.

Mr. Marchand took the reporter to his office, called his home, then replied; "It's not true."

He said he presumed the RCMP complaint became he was former federal leader of the party's Quebec wing "or related what Giguere did to what I was doing."

Senator Louis Giguere invested $5,000 in Sky Shops shares in 1972, as the company got a loan application to list duty-free shop at Montreal International Airport. He sold the shares four months later for a $60,000 profit.

Progressive Conservatives have tried in the Commons to relate the profit to Liberal party fund-raising for the 1972 federal election. RCMP warrants for raids on the parliamentary office and Montreal home of Senator Giguere, a party fund-raiser, mentioned documents involving Liberal finances.

In 1972, Mr. Marchand was not only responsible for Liberal political organization in Quebec but he also became transport minister.

Scientists Find More Skeletons

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A scientist says from "five to eight" complete human skeletons dating back more than 40,000 years have been found throughout California.

The sites were near Sunnyvale, south of San Francisco, and Buena Vista Lagoon, south of Oceanside, and on a hill north of Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, said Dr. Jeffrey Bada of Scripps.

At a news conference, Bada said the age of the skeletons was determined by the amino acid dating system used to determine that a skull found north of Del Mar in 1974 was 48,000 years old.

That created a sensation in anthropological circles since previously man's age in the Americas was believed to be 28,000 years at the most.

"We are no longer dealing with one or two isolated examples of the older dating of man," Bada said.

His system has been cross-checked with the carbon-14 dating system many times and found to be in agreement with it, he added.

The carbon-14 system has been documented for many years, despite recent adjustments, but outer limits of its use appear to be about 40,000 years.

The Del Mar Man's skull was found 40 years ago but lay on a shelf until Bada used his amino acid system to date it.

Syrian Demands Stall Extension

Time Running Out for UN Buffer Zone in Golan Heights

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — With the mandate running out, members of the UN Security Council continued work today in an attempt to break a deadlock over Syria's demands for prolonging the life of the UN buffer force on the Golan Heights.

Syria has requested participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in a Security Council debate on the entire Middle East situation.

The 15-member council met privately twice Friday and scheduled more closed-door meetings today.

The current agreement for the 1,193-man Golan peace force expires midnight Sunday night. The mandate of the 4,000-troop peace force between Egypt and Israel on the Sinai front runs until October, 1976.

Between their closed sessions, council delegates were in contact with representatives of Israel and Syria and with their home capitals.

State Secretary Henry Kissinger told reporters in Washington that some problems remain, but "I am more optimistic than before" that Syria will agree to the extension.

Both Israel and Syria have accepted in principle a six-month extension. The problem is the wording that Syria wants attached to the new mandate.

UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said in a report to the council that Syria wants the Security Council to take over "the substance of the Middle East problem" and it regards this as including the Palestinian problem.

He said its agreement to a six-month renewal depends on the council's declaring it will hold a Middle East debate in January with participation of the PLO.

Council diplomats said that if this were to be stated flatly in the mandate resolution it would either fail to get the required nine votes or be vetoed by the United States.

Tanzania and non-aligned members of the council were said to be trying to work out a compromise formula that would not name the PLO but would refer to a General Assembly resolution declaring that the Palestinians are entitled to a full participation in Middle East matters.

Waldheim also said, however, that Israel opposes having the Security Council become a negotiating body for Middle East problems.

The Golan Heights buffer force was created as a result of the Israeli-Syrian disengagement agreement which Kissinger negotiated in May, 1974.

Two U.S. Bombers Collide

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Two B-52 bomber planes collided in the air and exploded in flames Friday while approaching a runway at Offutt U.S. Air Force base, headquarters of the Strategic Air Command (SAC).

The two pilots parachuted to safety.

There were no explosives aboard the two eight-jet planes, which were based at Forbes—ab, force base, Kan., and attached to the Kansas Air National Guard, a SAC spokesman said.

Lieut. Gary Keller of Topeka, Kan., was in hospital with "acute leg injuries," but in satisfactory condition, Capt. Willie Nolen of Kansas City, Kan., had no apparent injuries but he was in hospital for observation.

There were no other crew members in the planes.

The pilots were on a "routine training mission" when the 3:30 p.m. crash occurred, the SAC spokesman said.

News Briefs

Fighter Budget Tabled

OTTAWA (CP) — It is expected to cost $12.3 million this year to keep the Canadian force's fleet of CF-104 Starfighter aircraft operating. The information was tabled today in the Commons by Defence Minister James Richardson in response to a question by John Reynolds (PC—Burnaby-Richmond-Delta).

Ministry Calls Meeting

TORONTO — The Ontario labor ministry has invited the presidents of strike-bound pulp and paper mills to a meeting some time next week, a ministry spokesman said Friday. He said Labor Minister Bette Stephenson issued the invitation for talks aimed at ending the province-wide strike that has paralyzed the paper industry since midsummer.

Egg Supply Low

TORONTO (CP) — Firms which break and process eggs for bakeries say they are seriously short of supply because the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) this fall reduced the quotas of Ontario egg producers too much.

New Zealand PM Beaten

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister Bill Rowling conceded defeat today of his three-year-old Labor government in an upset by the opposition National party in New Zealand's parliamentary elections. "There is no doubt that the government will change and I do not think there is any point in beating about the bush," Rowling said in a radio interview as results were still coming in.

TORONTO (CP) — John Volpe, chief negotiator for 8,000 striking Metropolitan Toronto high school teachers, said Friday the strike is not over despite a ruling by the federal anti-inflation review board that the latest offer of a 29.9 per cent increase from the Metropolitan Toronto school board is excessive.

Mr. Volpe said at a news conference that the bill to impose selective wage and price controls has not been passed by the federal government and therefore the review board has no legal validity.

He said that asking Metro teachers to accept wages lower than those agreed to in recent contract settlements by Ottawa and Windsor Ont., teachers will affect secondary education in Toronto.

The review board said in its statement earlier Friday that teachers and school board officials should resume bargaining to negotiate a contract offer that more properly reflects the federal government's anti-inflation policy.

William Ross, Metro school board chairman said in an interview that he does not think the trustees' offer is excessive and that he is a bit shocked by the decision.

The teachers, who went on strike Nov. 17, are asking a 43.9-per-cent salary increase and a full contract-ding clause in a two-year contract.

The government imposed selective wage-and-price controls Oct. 14 which put a basic ceiling of 10 per cent on wage increases. The ruling regarding the Toronto teachers is the first of the review board's first specific judgement.

The review board also rejected a contract proposal agreed to Nov. 14 by the Hamilton board of education and the 1,281 elementary teachers to give those teachers a 38.9 per cent increase over one year. The board said that proposal should be reduced by eight percentage points.

The board now has more than 90 applications for opinions on wage and salary increases.

Thomas Wells, provincial education minister, said in the legislature, following the review board's announcement, that it is clearly futile for the teachers to continue their strike. He said there is no longer any reason to put off negotiations and he has asked the province's education relations commission to appoint a mediator.

Mr. Ross said Thursday that negotiations will not resume until the education relations commission deals with the teachers' charge that the board bargained in bad faith when it refused Wednesday to negotiate with them. The commission is scheduled to begin a hearing on the teachers' complaint Tuesday.

Mr. Ross said the negotiations were suspended Wednesday pending the decision of the review board on whether the teachers would fall under Ottawa's wage controls.

The strike, now in its 12th day since Nov. 17, is affecting students in 135 high schools and about high school credits in the Toronto area.

In another decision, the board said all arbitration awards rendered after Oct. 13, 1975, will be subject to the guides. This decision was made after the board examined a settlement between the Renfrew County board of education and secondary teachers in the county.

Postal Talks to Resume Today

The Canadian Press

A long-awaited resumption of negotiations in the postal dispute was scheduled for about noon today, a post office spokesman said late Friday night. But there was no indication of substantial change in position by either side.

Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey, said in a telephone interview from his home in Montreal, that he would return back to Ottawa by airplane early this morning "in case I'm needed."

The minister said the surprise turn of events forced him to cancel a planned rest in Freeport, Bahamas. But he said he was happy the talks, broken off since Nov. 6, were to get under way again.

Mr. Mackasey reiterated his position that the government would not budge on its offer of a $1.70-an-hour increase over 39 months, a 40-hour work week and a 10-cent-an-hour cost-of-living increase every three months.

"There are a few areas where we are prepared to bargain," he said. He named specifically, a union demand for equal pay for part-time and full-time workers and a reclassification of mail handlers.

The 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) has been seeking a wage increase of 28 per cent—$2.73 an hour—over 27 months in addition to a shorter work week, to 25 hours, and a more generous cost-of-living clause. Average hourly salary is $4.58.

Mr. Mackasey said Friday night that he hopes the union has realized that "there is no more money" and is willing to negotiate on the other issues. If not, "they could make it clear that they don't accept those terms and then there will be no strike." The strike began 41 days ago.

Davis Opposes Salary Hike

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis has given Tuesday suggestion of a pay increase for members of the Ontario legislature.

The premier said he is opposed to any pay increase, because "it is totally wrong for members to be involved in voting themselves a raise."

"I'm simply stating that is my personal point of view it is irresponsible to consider a salary increase for members of this house at this time."

The issue was raised Wednesday by Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) who told a committee studying recommendations on the operation of the legislature that he felt MPPs should get a 19-per-cent raise to keep pace with inflation.

The members are paid an annual salary of $15,000 with $7,500 for expenses—a total of $22,500.

During the last election campaign, Mr. Davis and Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis both indicated they would be willing to call another election on the issue.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis told reporters he feels the premier's reaction was predictable. He said cabinet ministers and government backbenchers serving on provincial commissions earn more than the basic MPP salary.

Ontario Follows Suit

Federal Minimum Wage Could be Increased

OTTAWA (CP) — A government decision is expected next week on raising the federal minimum wage to between $3.85 and $3 hourly from its current $2.80, Labor Minister John Munro said Friday.

Several provinces already have announced increases in the minimums paid in their jurisdictions.

Only about 13,500 of the 330,000 employees covered by the Canada Labor Code are at the minimum wage level, a labor department official says. But increases in federal minimum wages are important indicators to the provinces.

Ontario Labor Minister Bette Stephenson said this week the province will raise its minimum wage from the current $2.40 hourly. She did not give the new rate.

Ontario has more than 230,000 provincially regulated employees at the minimum wage, the largest for any province, a federal labor official says. Accordingly, a lengthy notice—until March or April—probably will be given employers before the new rate is effective.

Quebec, with about 227,000 employees at the minimum wage in the province, passed a regulation Wednesday to raise its minimum rate to $3.00 hourly on Monday from the current $2.80.

Change of Public's Attitude Would Save Health Dollars

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Phillip Richard, Belleville General Hospital (BGH) executive director, says the public must be made aware of other aspects of the Canadian lifestyle which can be changed, besides the mandatory wearing of seatbelts, to result in the reduction of health costs.

Mr. Richard, acting as BGH spokesman in an interview on Friday, said, "I strongly support the measure (Ottawa) announced new mandatory seatbelt legislation."

"There are, however, many other aspects of our lifestyle which, if they were changed, could save an enormous number of health dollars," he commented.

Mr. Rickard noted that a recent study on nutrition in Canada showed that $2.4 billion could be saved each year through proper nutrition.

"Costs allied to alcoholism amount to $1.25 billion per year," he said.

Mr. Richard remarked, "improvements in these figures cannot be achieved through legislation but by changing the public's comprehension of health."

"We health officials need greater expertise in marketing ideas in the way manufacturers market products," Mr. Richard said "this might be described as social marketing."

He explained that social marketing could be used to alter driving habits to a safer manner or to persuade Canadians to stop smoking, drinking and eating to excess.

Ald. Meeks said it is a federal responsibility and council should not be commenting on it.

As far as council's thoughts on unions in city hall making—contributions to the postal strike fund, the general comment was "it's their business . . . their prerogative."

Ald. Jack Ellis — "The union is taking the rights away from us awful lot of people. Mr. Mackasey is very wise in holding firm. Now is the time for restraint."

Ald. Wally Dever — "The strike is highly inconvenient but the postmaster is handling the situation perfectly. I support their new business." If city hall unions choose to support the postal workers.

Ald. Jack Ireland — "The strike is ruining my business. It's pretty fantastic these fellows can cause so much disruption. The postmaster has done what he has had to do", adding the government may have made a mistake by not ordering the men back to work.

Ald. Art Keegan — "I hope they go back to work soon . . . small business will soon start going broke. Mackey is doing a wonderful job. He's the only man in that government with any guts. But, if strikes (in general) continue the Canadian economy will collapse."

Ald. Brian Knudsen — "I think the postal workers should accept the offer and begin cooperating instead of resisting. If the government has legislated the men back to work, it would have been a moral victory for the union. If (strike) is lasting my business badly but I'm adamant about the need for price and wage restraint."

Ald. Paul Russell — "The postmaster has handled it the only way he could. I hope it will be ended soon for the sake of the people who are suffering because of the strike. If the controls are to have any success, the government can't give in."

Ald. George Zeppieras — "A return to work by the postal union would make a great deal of difference to the business community allowing business to get back to normal. Mr. Mackasey is making the right move though."

Northern Earnings Increase

Northern Electric Co. Ltd. reports consolidated nine-month earnings of $94.3 million or $2.02 a share, compared to $47 million or $1.01 a share during the corresponding period last year.

Sales for the first three quarters totalled $784 million, up from $702.1 million during the first nine months of 1974.

For the third quarter, the company reports consolidated earnings of $16.9 million or 44 cents a share, up from $11.2 million or 24 cents a share in the third quarter last year.

Third quarter sales amounted to $237.9 million, down from $262.1 million in the corresponding period last year.

The company says a market response to its SL-1, a new private, automatic branch exchange "has been very good," with delivery scheduled before the end of the year.

Driver Charged in Nov. 10 Crash

A 21-year-old Trenton woman will appear in provincial court here on Jan. 19 for the first time on a charge of careless driving.

Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said this week that Margaret Olohan of 23 Francis St. was charged following an investigation into a two-car head-on collision on Highway 2, just east of Canadian Forces Base Trenton, on Nov. 10 in which an 18-year-old Loyalist College student, Scott Madore, of 311 East Dundas St. in Trenton, was killed.

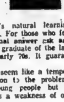
Police said Madore, a first-year student in the college's hotel administration program, was a passenger in a car driven by Olohan which was in collision with a car driven by Sheldon Sanford, 38, of 48 Gordon St. in Belleville.

A spokesman for Trenton Memorial Hospital said Olohan, who was admitted with lacerations and possible internal injuries, was released last Saturday.

A Belleville General Hospital spokesman said Sanford is listed in satisfactory condition suffering from a broken right leg and accompanying leg injuries.

Education Beat

Are We Losing Sight of Goals?



By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The escalation of a driver training program into a full-blown 160½ hour high school credit course by the Hastings County Board of Education will undoubtedly provoke the purists who already believe the system has been contaminated.

Some will argue the addition of a driver education credit course will rob students or more valuable academic subjects needed for entrance to university, although this will be just one of the many optional courses offered to students throughout their high school careers.

A more serious implication of this program lies in the fact that society continues to place a crushing responsibility on the system to take on more and more duties that was formerly provided by the family, church and—community at large. And for better or worse the educational system is complying with these demands.

Education is becoming contaminated but not by any fault of its own. Boards of education are being pressured from all fronts to assume complete responsibility for the total learning process of children.

Beyond the financial burden placed on the board and the province these systems are being asked to provide the main correctional force of society. The unfortunate part is that it will eventually fail. Both financially and philosophically.

Somewhere along the line we have lost right that education is supposed to compliment life's natural learning experience. For those who feel it is the final answer can say university graduate of the late 60s and early 70s. It guarantees little.

It may seem like a temporary solution to the problems facing young people but in reality it's a weakness of our society.

For example the driver education program can provide much better technical experience for young drivers but can it teach responsibility towards human life and property?

Unfortunately the answer is no in most cases because responsibility is derived from a value system that goes much deeper than the classroom.

This is not to surmise that the board, under the set of given circumstances, made a bad decision. The architects of the program, educated from the Hatfield system, are to be contraindicated for their work and the board is to be commended for having the strength to assume the task.

The board reminds us that a good percentage of fatal accidents involve young drivers between the ages of 16 and 25, who represent a small percentage of the nation's drivers. There are many more frightening statistics around to prove that somebody should take the situation in hand. But why must it be always the education system?

The crunch is going to come eventually and it will be financially based. Relying too heavily on education will certainly destroy it and leave society stranded when it fails.

Names of recent local winners at Royal Winter Fair have been released.

Page Boy, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Sheridan of Stirling took first place in the Senator Conference Addison Cadillac 850cc single roadster stake for Canadian owned horses.

J.D. Bill Rollins, of Plainfield, took second with Bill's Captain Rhythm in hackney pony breeding horse class for colts foaled in 1974.

Judging the class was Les Sole of California. Mr. Rollins took fifth with Sedore's Centurian Rhythm for colt foaled in 1973. Ro-Mar Cadet owned by Kim Edwards of 249 College St. W., took sixth in the class.

Lois, Terry and Davy Rollins of Corbyville took fourth with Sedore's Be Bop Hanner in the section for stallions foaled before Jan. 1, 1973.

Mr. Rollins also took third in the section for two progeny of one dam.

In the breeding horse class judged by William Burns of New York, Bourbon Bob's Victory at Corbyville Stables, RR 8 Picton, took second in the section for foals of 1975.

Society Star owned by Roger Flaks of Yeweuland Stables, RR 2 Picton, took fourth in the class.

Bourbon Bob of Colmer Stables took reserve champion stallion and second in the section for stallions foaled previous to Jan. 1, 1973.

Bourbon Bob's Victory of Colmer Stables took first in the section for filly foaled in 1974.

Shelgrove's Bourbonette of O'Neill Stables, RR 8 Belleville took first in the class for mares foaled previous to Jan. 1, 1973, and went on to reserve champion mare.

In the poultry, waterfowl and pet stock class, C.F. Walls of 46 Penton St., Belleville, took the Northey Challenge Trophy for best pigeon, the David Ollis Memorial Trophy for best young pigeon and the Clancy Award for champion flight pigeon.

He took 16 years, but C.F. Walls of 46 Penton St. in Belleville finally found a grand champion honors in the poultry, waterfowl and pet stock class with a three-month-old black mottled pigeon. The bird, which he raised himself, was also awarded the Best Young Bird in Show prize. Mr. Walls also walked off with five first and eight second prizes in the competition which featured between 400-700 birds.

Chapel built in 1890.

The service is held there on the first Sunday in June then the doors are closed. Visitors can tour the chapel on request but this is not generally known by vacationers who came to discover the country church.

Possibly a tri-denominational service could be held at the White Chapel each Sunday throughout the summer with Prince Edward clergymen taking turns in the pulpit.

Tourists then would enjoy an opportunity to see the interior of the church in the unfrilled and to learn about its colorful history in the community.

Also, summer visitors might welcome the chance to attend an informal service of worship without getting "dressed up". Many arrive to camp here and do not bring their Sunday best.

If Prince Edward wants to court tourists it should adopt the motto should be "Be Yourself".

Award Winner

Bill Rollins of Plainfield displays award winning pony he showed recently at Royal Winter fair. The two ponies he took to the Toronto show won awards in three classifications; yearling, 2 year old, and two progeny of one animal.

Gardening Column

Climate Profile Key Factor

By ROSS HAWTHORNE

Over the last short while, we've been talking about some of the problems that "bug" the house plants, including the bugs themselves, plus some other problems such as yellow or brittle leaves and spindly growth. But in doing so, perhaps we were getting a bit ahead of ourselves. So before we deal with any more specific problems, the first about a principle, an axiom of gardening and effect that, if followed, could help you avoid many house plant problems.

It's an activity I call: "Making climate profiles for plant needs".

You see, every room in your home has an individual climate profile in terms of available light, humidity, drafts, night and day temperatures and so on.

For example: the humidity index in your kitchen or bathroom will likely be much higher than that in your living room or bedroom. And to compound the problem, different climate profiles exist within each single room.

The climate profile in a room near an outside door that is used rather frequently is entirely different than the climate profile on the other side of that room, and the climate profile above or within a six-foot radius of a radiator or forced air heat vent is entirely different than the profile outside of that radius, and the profile in front of a window with a southern exposure is entirely different from that in front of a northern window.

And different profiles exist in a sunny room with a lot of, or large windows and with light walls versus a dim room with only a few, or small windows and dark walls.

How a generation or two ago, this matching of a room's various climate profiles to a plant's needs wasn't that important. Houses were heated with coal and gas fumes abounded in the home. Windows were small and usually heavily draped against winter cold. And about all that would survive was the Boston fern and the spiderplant — also known as the Cast Iron Plant.

In fact, if grandma had African violets and could bring them into bloom she was considered to be a minor gardening genius, and regarded with great reverence. And of course, the range of plants available to our grandmothers was limited by today's standards.

But in this day and age, high speed transportation has made all the difference. Each week, there are thousands of transports crossing and recrossing the U.S.; loaded with house plants from Florida and California. And hundreds of air-craft loads of Canadian airports loaded with plants and cuttings from all over the world. And the same applies to the spectrum of plant varieties available. And hybridizers are developing thousands of new houseplant cultivar species every year.

And next week we'll start talking about how to identify the climate profiles in every room and how to buy plants that fit those profiles.

Trenton Bureau

Council Should Act On Sub-station Issue

By JERRY BROWN
Staff Reporter

If it is true, and there should be no reason to doubt the Trenton Public Utilities Commission, that the acquisition of one small plot for a sub-station is holding up all new development in the western part of the municipality, the town council is shirking its responsibilities to ratepayers by not acquiring the land.

At this month's PUC meeting, the commission conveniently had all the necessary information pertaining to the acquisition of the 80 by 110 foot piece of land located in one of five staffed subdivisions in the western edge of town.

The group told the assemblage that reason for the sudden public discussion of the problem which has been dragging through municipal red tape for more than three years was to-tally unrelated to a sign erected on one of the subdivision sites telling ratepayers to ask the mayor why the projects have been stalled.

It is not likely that if the municipal bureaucratic structure were not bearing the brunt of public attack and felt it necessary to defend itself it would have maintained its normal position of no comment when confronted by massive civic powers speak for them.

At one meeting, PUC manager Doug Manlow, much to the annoyed chagrin of some commissioners, refused to let slip that town council had already rejected the PUC request to appropriate the necessary funds for some unified reason.

Offers and counter-offers between commissioners and utilities have been taken by both sides in the dispute, depending on whom you believe. But the issue is far more serious than placing the blame for the delay.

An argument can be made that it is the greedy developers' fault for holding out for more money or concessions or that the PUC has been unreasonable because it is holding up all other subdivisions in the area, asking those developers to exert pressure on the holdout. But this would not alleviate the problem.

Town council is, or should be aware of all that happens on the PUC because the mayor is a member of the commission and it should be able to take definitive action when called for. This municipal government is rapidly getting, whether it deserves it or not, a reputation for being against new development in Trenton. For the sake of the town I hope this is not true but rather just an over protective response to people who call for massive, and sometimes, poor large scale expansion at the expense of the public).

Five subdivisions, two new high rises and a new shopping mall are being delayed at considerable cost because of one small piece of land.

It is not a question of David holding off Goliath, but rather one of what is right and correct for the ratepayers and what are the responsibilities of the municipal legislators.

Power to the people, even if it is only for the western part of the town.

The Corporate Elite

Bud McDougald, Leading Canadian 'Establishment' Man, Left School at Age 14

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Countless young people of today's generation have a deep-blind, everlasting antipathy toward something called the establishment.

To them, it represents everything that is moral, dehumanizing, socially irresponsible and hidebound.

Yet how much does the typical young person, devoting priceless youthful years to the cause of counter-culture, know about the real establishment?

Press for an answer and you will probably get shop-worn slogans. If you are lucky, you might get the name of a retired brewery executive and horse-breeder E. P. Taylor.

As F. Scott Fitzgerald said, "the rich are different from us"—and being different is a sure way of winning the enmity of others.

But that enmity towards an unknown establishment is based on more than the difference that wealth imparts.

It is nourished by the sheer size of holdings, by the huge material production and distribution, by the ostentatious activity towards social reform.

How the business establishment need be unknown no longer. Two recently published books—one Canadian, one American—provide valuable insights into the lives of the highly disparate groups that comprise the vaguely understood corporate establishments in each country.

The Canadian Establishment (McClelland and Stewart; 460 pages; $14.95) is by Peter Newman, editor of Maclean's magazine.

Newman is best known, perhaps, as a current historian of the political establishment in Ottawa.

But his career started a quarter-century ago as a reporter on The Financial Post in Toronto. Metcalf Bowlen, the editor, put that gave him his first contact with Canada's business leaders.

An outgrowth of that period was his first book, Flame Of Power (1959), a group of biographies of the tycoons who built this country's corporate structure.

Now Newman has returned to the corporate system with a survey of today's tycoons, The Canadian Establishment.

It has just as many of the human insights that characterized Flame Of Power—plus the immediacy that comes from dealing with living people.

And there is no question that Newman's tycoons are living—to the full. Here's a quote from N. M. (Nels) Davis, described by Newman as Canada's most "interesting" and least visible multi-millionaire.

"Every time I make a deal, I spend a quarter of it on myself. There's nothing wrong with that."

Davis's personal income is estimated at $12 million a year. The driveway at the first of his four houses is paved with 100,000 worth of crushed mercedes—the only rock that produces a sound that might be tracked into the house.

The opulence of the Davis lifestyle is surpassed only by that of John A. (Bud) McDougald, whom Newman places at the pinnacle of the Canadian establishment.

He is chairman of Argus Corp., closed-end investment fund that holds major interest in several companies of which McDougald is chairman or an executive committee member—Massey-Ferguson Ltd., Dominion Stores Ltd., Domtar Ltd., Hollinger Mines Ltd., British Columbia Forest Products Ltd., and Standard Broadcasting Corp.

Newman is clearly mistaken in saying that "few Canadians are aware of the existence of McDougald, as a director of virtually all these public companies, is a familiar face to the thousands of shareholders who turn out for annual meetings.

If he were not the son of a moderately successful stock-broker, Bud McDougald could be listed on an Horatio Alger hero.

"Left school at 14 and I've regretted it all my life," he says.

"Should have left when I was 13."

He took a job as an office boy at a major investment-house, kept his eyes and ears open, worked late, and became syndicate manager at a $70-million CNR bond issue while still in his teens.

Newman's cast of characters ranges from the super-rich, such as Davis and McDougald, to those he terms the new-rich businessmen such as Harold Ballard of Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd., who was convicted in 1972 of defrauding his company of $67,000 and taking part in the theft of another $125,000.

(Newman's next book will deal with Canada's specialized establishments, including the one in professional sports—the last surviving example of free-wheeling, 19th-century, public-be-damned capitalism.)

The tycoons in the Canadian Establishment are powerful men in powerful corporations. But they are not as powerful, as Ballard and others have found.

They are constrained by competitors (in most cases), but their own employees, by public opinion (usually), and certainly by government and its regulatory agencies.

Our society is constantly striving for the right balance between the free marketplace on the one hand, and central economic determination on the other.

The establishment is clearly on the side of a free market—and that in itself is enough to make some people down-elevate the cause of monolithic centralism.

Somehow, after reading Newman's book, a relatively free market still seems the desirable alternative.

At The Top (Doubleday; 421 pages; $11.50) is by Marylin Bender, a financial reporter on The New York Times.

It makes an interesting contrast with The Canadian Establishment, although its focus is on the business lives of the people who make up the U.S. corporate establishment—rather than on their personal lives as well.

Compared with the Canadian establishment, the U.S. establishment has been confronted with more direct challenges to its position—from academics, students and even terrorist groups.

(Perhaps anti-establishment sentiment has a more effective outlet in Canada, in the form of strongly based socialist political parties.)

Mrs. Bender, in At The Top, is at her best in recounting the stories of Edsel Ford (the aggressive cosmetics queen) and her family, and of New York advertising tycoon Mary Wells Lawrence, chairman of Braniff Airlines, chairman of a U.S. airline.

"The inspection of the business corporation and of the men and women at the top of it will become more searching," the author concludes.

"Not only because economic conditions compel it, but because the more closely one looks inside the private club, the more there is to see."

Front St. Drag Strip

Belleville's police force don't need to be told what to do or where to go in the enforcement of the law.

Nor can they be everywhere, as some late-night observations regarding traffic and the inevitable hotrodders on Front Street testify.

Leaving a downtown movie around 10.45 p.m. the other day a patron noticed an officer in a patrol car talking with a young man. A little later, starting for home in his own car the cinemagoer had to swerve sharply to avoid being rammed from behind by a speeding car. By now the patrol car, which had seen nothing of this, had moved onto the parking lot of the catalogue store round the corner on Dundas, to investigate something there. The speeding car then drove around the back of the store and sped off into the night.

No harm done perhaps, but the potential for harm or an accident's had been there. As observed in recent days, the stretch from the Four Corners to Dundas is a favorite acceleration — and go — lane for young bloods with more gas in their tanks than sense upstairs.

It might have a restraining influence if the police could give some attention to this stretch at appropriate times such as late afternoon and late at night when the problem seems to be most prevalent.

Philosophy of 'TM'

Observe that transcendental meditation, or TM as it is popularly known, has hit California and numbers among its devotees well-known Hollywood film and TV personalities.

The medium, which is aimed at helping people cope with these fractious times, has a following in our own area and farther afield. Indeed it is pretty well established around the world.

For all that, little is known about the system generally, or whether it differs markedly from the kind of meditation in which anyone can indulge — from plain ordinary daydreaming to a sound piece of advice from some long-forgotten psychology book: "leave your mind alone!"

What is known is that no intelligent person can fulfill himself, let alone call himself an intelligent being without the accompaniment of what we call anxiety. "Angst," as it is in the German." Yet the literature of this and former times tends to look upon it as a problem, while trying to find some panacea. This never really succeeds. Even unlimited leisure, such as that afforded by winning a lottery and retiring prematurely, is not the answer and in fact usually accentuates the problem.

The scriptures and hymnarelies are full of it — from the premises, "that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty," from Timothy, to the lines from a hymn penned by J. G. Whittier in 1872. Here a reference to "coolness and balm" is followed by: Let sense be dumb, let flesh retire . . . Speak through the earthquake, wind and fire . . . O still small voice of calm."

Anyway, TM helps in such calm, many testify. It has the merit of harnessing natural forces, and holding anxiety at arm's length so folks can recharge their batteries. In short, it's further armor against a cruel world.

Christmas Seals

Mail strike or not, the work that is made possible by Christmas Seals must go on.

An advertisement by the Hastings-Prince Edward Tuberculosis and Respiratory Diseases Association lists the many activities into which funds from purchase of the seals is channeled.

Detection and prevention of these diseases represent only one facet of the work which also involves provision of annual summaries to students interested in respiratory technology, purchase of equipment, home visitations, and quit-smoking programs, to name a few.

The Association receives no grants, hence the importance of donations to help maintain the more than a dozen initiatives it undertakes with public help.

The ad indicates donations may be made at any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia or at the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Deseronto.

Legislature Cagey on Reasons For About-face on Seatbelts

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The government has finally taken the big step.

It has persuaded itself that seat belts are good things, vital y good.

And that I will be official buckle-up day.

How will we see a general compliance with the law or will we see a substantial section of the public flouting it?

It is unlikely we will see much of such flouting.

With a threat of a $20 to $100 fine, and some loss of driving points, hanging over anyone caught without a belt there will be a powerful inclination to obey the law.

But that doesn't mean most people will agree with it.

And in its own defence, as well as for respect for the law, the government should come up with some rare explanation.

Why has it changed its mind, within a year?

Not so long ago its position was that it didn't have conclusive evidence that safety belts were all that good.

In fact they could have been a hazard, spokesmen were saying.

So how has that position changed?

And dillo with speed limits?

When opposition members pressed for lower speed limits as an energy conservation measure it was said that U.S. experience hadn't produced any solid evidence.

Savings in fuel consumption there, it was explained, could have resulted from higher prices for gasoline or just lower general use of cars.

Well what is the case?

The government hasn't told us and it should.

There are some of us who have become used to wearing seat belts and actually feel uncomfortable in them.

Similarly there are undoubtedly those who believe in and have been following lower speeds.

But even though we may believe we still don't like to be told.

And, the least that should be expected from the government is that if it is going to impose new compulsions it should clearly state its case as to why it is doing so.

Cities, from N.Y. to Beirut Reveal Disparate Problems Of Political Significance

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

It's five years ago since a superb international conference on cities was held at York University, sponsored by Toronto industries and with the city's assistance.

It was a first-class meeting which attracted many of the weeks drew hundreds of urban specialists, who looked at and spoke about the problems of most of the major cities of our world.

The then vice-president of Consumers Gas Company also in Toronto, visited over 40 of the countries represented by their capital cities in the preconference planning stages.

Five short years ago, the world's leading cities today which are surpassing those of 1 a s t e r n North America were scarcely discussed. I am referring to pollution, urban political upheaval and the newest phenomena, civic bankruptcy.

It is true that the American delegates facing the first rampage of urban guerrillas in Rio de Janeiro and Montevideo in 1970, were interested in these than in their cities' chronic and huge automobile pollution problems.

Right now in cities like Buenos Aires, Madrid, Jakarta, Calcutta and Beirut the pollution growth largely untouched since 1960, are controlled by a much-needed local legislation, is staggering.

Nor was there any kind of major news story from an established or emerging city during that conference, such as Beirut, a major financial and cultural centre of the Islamic world destroyed itself militarily, or New York doing the same fiscally.

The main theme of that conference, a theme which has escalated since then, substantially, is the growing role of the urban environment in the course of national development. In Canada's case there was much talk in 1969 about a largely urban Canada of the 1980s in which perhaps 75 per cent of Canadians would be living.

The staggering crises in Beirut and New York, and the spectre of the longstanding unsolved ones of bad housing in the urban poor, everywhere, remind us that cities are also important politically as countries.

The New York fiscal crisis, with that city existing from one due date for bond interest payment to the next, and wondering if a Republican president will panic and refuse to be re-elected is purposely embarrassing a troubled Democratic mayor in New York City, is a national concern. It also has international connotations.

If we think too much time is spent by the media analyzing New York's problems of administration and goals, then have a look at those of Montreal.

In this city we have the huge Olympic Games outlays inflated by an Olympic mayor who has turned his back on a great but sick city debacle for the same funds he has raised and used for his clients.

Other Canadian cities of equally large size, like Toronto, are showing signs of other kinds of trouble, such as the disgusting efforts made there recently to prevent a meeting of the Palestinian Liberation Organization in a city filled with minority populations.

Coming back to the 1969 conference, many of the cities represented at it were and are larger than many of the new nations in the United Nations. In the Middle East European cities were much smaller and economically miniscule compared to their size today. But they were often independent and warring states.

A point where why events within the world's great and disturbed cities are often as important as in the world because cities function even like separate nations and have problems like them.

National Film Board's Ted Greenway Spend's Retirement Writing to the Press

OTTAWA — Retired?
Or thinking about it?
And wondering how to keep busy without working too hard while enjoying life?

Perhaps even striking a blow for peace, order and good government?

Get involved in the tumult of the political process.

Not everyone can be a parliamentarian, provincial legislator, city councillor, school trustee or member of other elective office but there's a ready-made platform.

But everyone can have his say.

He's not just semi-privately, between friends and associates, but right out there, front and centre for the whole community to take notice of.

Become a letter-to-the editor writer.

Like Ted Greenway, retired in Ottawa after 36 years—as he puts it—"in the public service" as a member of the staff of the National Film Board, one of the many federal agencies over which Public Secretary Faulkner presides.

Mr. Greenway is a good letter-writer — he has to be to get his stuff into the papers — and he is busy making waves, having fun, and who knows, perhaps even effecting a little public policy.

He is good enough that his letters get reprinted in out-of-town papers, people — even politicians and bureaucrats — call him on the phone to praise or berate him, denounce or flatter, him in letters to the editor of local papers.

Ted Greenway made letters to the editor his platform because, as a long-time federal public servant, he has a certain knowledge of the bureaucracy.

He knows, that the average taxpayer not only is mute, long-suffering and generally ignorant of election time.

And he considers it sad that he makes any kind of an impact — with, as he says, "the capacity for public outrage long exhausted" — his letters really had to be amusing.

Like the following, for example:

Sirs: Who is this economic hide-bindgrowing up in the country asking Canadians to "prepare for hard times in your own homes" when at home jumps in and out of his new swimming pool?

Who is this let-them-eat-cake imperial who hoards those magnificent bills at 24 Sussex Drive and the R.C.M.P. look and launches a Mirabel?

Who is this Diamond-Jim-Scrooge who limits salary and wage increases for others to 8 per cent?

Who is this seemingly parsimonious Prescott who advocates a strict conservation while sipping around in armoured limousines, VIP jets and helicopters?

Who is this tears-and-laughter actor who preaches restraint and practises unrestraint?

Who is this economic Moses who led the country from the wilderness of hard work to the "labor-not want-not" isms and living off the backs of others and who condemns the gainfully employed as the greedy villains of inflation?

Who is this Diamond-Jim-Scrooge who limits salary and wage increases for others to 8 per cent?

Who is this economic Moses who led the country from the wilderness of hard work to the "labor-not want-not" isms and living off the backs of others and who condemns the gainfully employed as the greedy villains of inflation?

Who is this Diamond-Jim-Scrooge who limits salary and wage increases for others to $2,500 while grabbing his own bureaucratic pre-retirement further $6,000?

Who is this fiscal genius who replaces the federal monetary pump handle with an electric motor and then forgets that the switch, refusing to realize that the decrease in the value of the productive dollar corresponds to the increase in non-productive government spending?

Who is this monetary wizard of Oz whose yellow brick road is leading us to inevitable disaster?

If this economic Caesar be one person would he please hold his himself on his couch and be identified, being careful to stand on one of the points of his many heads for if he sits down he'll surely crush his brains into a mess of pate de foie gras.

Yalensed Ted Greenway.

What's his idea?

"I'm fighting the bureaucracy," he says. "Having been a member of the inner ranges of the bureaucratic establishment, I feel qualified to do it.

"I feel that people are running out of time. That's the feeling we they feel so helpless. And it makes me feel good and young in retirement to try to fire them up. Who knows, I might get to somebody!"

Service Will Suffer

MONTREAL (CP) — Bell Canada said Friday it cannot continue its austerity program "without increasingly serious consequences" to consumers.

The company, caught in a cash shortage, embarked on a program earlier this year to reduce its expenses. Customers, however, have complained about time taken in telephone installation.

Bell's third quarter statement says that recent temporary reductions in Bell Canada's operating expenses and capital expenditures have produced some improvement in its earnings.

"However, these reductions already have caused adverse effects on the quality of service."

Bell's third-quarter net income applicable to common shares was $66 million or $1.67 a share compared with $62.8 million or $1.34 a share for the third quarter last year. Its second quarter-earnings were $58.4 million or $1.36 a share.

Canada In The Red

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government spent $2.486 billion more than it collected during the first seven months of the current fiscal year, the finance department reported Friday.

The budgetary deficit results from revenue of $15.104 billion and spending of $17.59 billion in the period from April 1 to the end of October.

That compares with a surplus of $717 million for the same period last year, when revenue totalled $13.804 billion and expenditures were $13.087 billion.

Income Stabilization Coming

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's proposal to stabilize the incomes of western grain farmers is only a few parliamentary steps away from becoming law, but there were indications Friday that it might be some time.

Lee Benjamin (Regina Lake Centre), mainstay of a New Democratic Party battle with the government over the bill, said in an interview that although he is losing the fight, it is far from over.

He said the NDP and at least 12 Progressive Conservatives intend to speak on the bill at third reading, the last step before it goes to the Senate.

The Bill, introduced to Parliament last Dec. 4, would guarantee western farmers of wheat, oats, barley, rye, flax seed and rapeseed a minimum price for their crops. This would be based on 90 per cent of their average income during the previous five years.

Payments from the federal government would go out when farmers' returns dropped below that average.

The proposed Western Grains Stabilization Act is designed to protect producers against the effects of price declines, increased markets and increased costs.

It would apply to farmers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta as well as the Peace River region of northeastern British Columbia. This is the so-called "designated area" administered by the Canadian wheat board.

A major opposition objection is that grain prices seldom are the same in all four provinces; stabilization payments would be based on the area as a whole and would afford no protection against regional problems.

University of Waterloo Helps the Partially Blind

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Partially blind persons now may read books, watch birds and view scenery during a country walk, thanks to Dr. George Woo at the University of Waterloo.

Through skills developed by Dr. Woo, chief at the school of optometry low-vision clinic, dozens of people who have carried white canes and have been enrolled with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind for years now see things they never expected to see again.

He said many of the hundreds of devices used in varying conditions at the clinic have been around for years.

"It is the techniques for using these optical and non-optical aids, rather than the aids themselves, which have been developed here," he said.

"Actually, we can't restore sight to anyone at the clinic. What we do is magnify the retinal image by the practical application of techniques and methods we have developed here, so that a person with only a very little remaining sight can use that sight efficiently and effectively."

In many cases, a person with low vision is technically and legally classified for pension purposes as blind. Dr. Woo said that if a person's vision does not allow him to do what he wants to do then the person might be partially sighted.

He has developed a line of low-vision simulators which are glasses for people with normal vision designed to show them what they would see if they had low-vision problems.

The glasses help people who work "on institutions, with the partially blind to appreciate the patients' problems.

The main causes of blindness and partial blindness are meningitis, multiple sclerosis and diabetes. Sometimes the problems to be corrected are both psychological and physical.

He also said that many people who could be helped by the low-vision clinic don't come because "people just don't associate optometry yet with such advanced technique."

A totally blind person cannot be helped at the low-vision clinic, he said, nor can one whose only sight involves a dim inction between light and dark ness.

Honey Industry Attracts Newcomers

KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — The honey industry in Nova Scotia is attracting a number of newcomers.

Gerry Smelzer, a research scientist with the provincial agriculture department, said there are about 400 beekeepers in Nova Scotia with 4,000 colonies and 50,000 to 75,000 worker bees.

Each colony can produce about 30 pounds of honey, so an output of 320,000 pounds is expected this year.

Mr. Smelzer said the industry has grown because people are more health conscious.

For the last three years he has been teaching bee farming methods, and each year the number of students has grown.

Arnprior Allows Bridge to Fall

ARNPRIOR, Ont. (CP) — A four-lane bridge spanning the Madawaska River has triumphed over a historic stone grist mill built in the 1850s.

Despite pleas from the local historical society, the Arnprior town council decided recently to let the burned-out structure fall to the wrecker's hammer.

Engineers for Ontario Hydro, which owned the building, and the Ontario labor department said the building was a hazard to workmen building the highway bridge nearby.

In 1676 the first measurement of the velocity of light was made by Olaus Romer, a Dane.

Hydro bought the building in this town, 25 miles west of Ottawa, intending to reinforce its foundation and bring it to safe condition.

A fire at the mill last September, which left only the walls and a small section of roof intact, altered these plans and Hydro applied for a demolition permit.

At a council meeting to decide the mill's fate it was unanimously agreed the town could not afford the cost, variously estimated at 300,000 to $500,000, to restore the mill.

Toronto Listens To Michael Wall

TORONTO (CP) — Monday night upstairs at Molly and Me is a sea of bodies packed in like sardines to listen to the tones of an entertainer everyone calls the singing Newfoundlander.

A lot of Toronto's transplanted easterners would rather listen to Michael Wall than any big-time Yankee entertainer. The act is so attractive it rates a cover charge even on a Monday night.

People like Ray Bennett of St. Mary's Bay, a tiny Newfoundland port, are frequent patrons of the downtown bar. Mr. Bennett works at Canada Packers now because there is no work back home.

"I was lonesome when I first got here," he said. "If it weren't for the clubs like this one, I could never have stayed."

There are about 110,000 Newfoundlanders in the Toronto area and about 300,000 in migrants, as statisticians call them, from the Maritimes. Most are lured here by the Ontario economy but they are still loyal to home.

Their craving for the entertainment and atmosphere of "the old rock" has become a flourishing business in nightclubs like Molly and Me's upstairs Newfoundland Room.

Other businesses also cater to the Newfoundlanders.

The Newfoundland Signal, a Toronto-based weekly newspaper, was founded a year ago with a starting circulation of 500. Now it has a circulation of 13,000 with about 5,000 papers mailed to readers in the Northwest Territories and as far south as Texas.

Newfoundland Cultural Society, which sponsors everything from dances to dart tournaments and charter flights, has 3,000 active members and is growing steadily.

Neville show-business sets like Harry Hibbs, whose Channel 11 television show is in its seventh season, increase in popularity every year, and Roy Payne, star of the True North television series, and John White of CFCT-v's All Around the Circle do a booming business in Toronto nightclubs.

After realizing there was a great untapped market of Newfie entertainers and possible patrons, Albert and Molly Nightingale, operators of Brunswick House, decided to open the Newfoundland Room upstairs at Molly and Me last spring.

"Everyone told us we were nuts to go for the Newfie trade, that Newfies are all crazy and we'd have to have German shepherds at the door and mattresses on all the walls and so on," Albert Nightingale said.

"But it hasn't worked out that way. They're wonderful people. . . . They don't hold back. . . . That goes for their laughing and crying and drinking and everything else which makes them good customers.

So now Molly and Me packs the place on weekends with Michael T. Wall wearing his trademark—a gold lame suit with the green map of Newfoundland appliqued on the back. He sings such hits as I Wouldn't Take A Million Dollars For A Single Kopin Leaf and No Price Tag On The Doors Of Newfoundland.

He also announces weekly step-dancing contests with the prize a free long-distance telephone call back home.

Another lavers which is doing an excellent business since it switched to country music eight weeks ago and started booking Newfie acts is the Blackhouse.

Handel's Messiah Presented Dec. 11

The haunting music of Georgs Frederick Handel's immortal Messiah will be brought to life in Belleville on Dec. 11 at the Church of St. Michael, The Archangel by four acclaimed soloists and a group of singers and string players.

Soprano Audrey Farnell of Montreal, contralto Doris Parker of Ottawa and tenor Donald Gallop and baritone Randall Marsh, formerly of Oberlin, will highlight this special Christmas program.

The Chamber Singers, appearing for the first time in Belleville under the direction of David Cameron of Christ Memorial United Church, Kingston, will provide the background for the soloists.

The singers are featured Sundays on the church's television and stage concerts regularly in Peterborough, Lindsay, Brockville and Toronto.

The Kingston Camerata is a group of professional string players with woodwind, trumpets, and timpani instruments as well as an organ and harpsichord.

The oratorio will be performed in 18th century style with emphasis on solo presentations.

Tickets are $2.50 each and are available at the door.

Montreal Minister Visits Consecon Church

Rev. Donald Pipe of Queen Mary Road United Church in Montreal was guest speaker at the November meeting of Consecon U.C.W. Chry Church As One that Serves (AOTS) Men's Club.

Fourteen past-presidents were present at the meeting as members celebrated the 14th anniversary of the club's charter in 1961 Mr. Pipe was minister on the charge when the club was chartered and worked towards its formation.

Club President Isaac Rose chaired the meeting welcoming about 75 members and guests from visiting clubs at Grace, Trenton, Westminster, Holloway, Bloomfield and Bridge St.

Supper was served by members of Consecon U.C.W. Chry Bertis and Don Soulsbun were responsible for the decor. Ernest Forsythe was at the piano. Devotional exercises were taken by Frank Wilson.

Past-presidents awarded pavels were: Ross Adams, Frank Reed, Gordon Lalyea, Don Southorn, Cory Burtis, Russel Forsythe, Frank Wilson, Carl Wilson, Ross Goodmurphy, Fred Clark, Earl Burtis, Glenn Gamble and Rodney Green.

Pope Re-affirms Growth of Council

NAIROBI (AP) — Pope Paul said today he is confident Roman Catholics will work with the World Council of Churches will grow.

His message, read to the council's General Assembly, was one of several sent by leaders of various branches of Christianity including the patriarchs of Moscow, Constantinople and Ethiopia.

Pope Paul told the representatives of 271 Protestant, Orthodox, Anglican and Old Catholic denominations totalling about 90 million members that "your desire for unity and reconciliation coincides with our own."

The pontiff also noted that he appointed 16 Roman Catholic delegate-observers who are participating in the assembly.

There have been joint discussions about possible Roman Catholic membership in the council, but consideration of the matter has been sidelined. Roman Catholics take a regular part in some council operations and commissions on doctrine, and on justice and peace.

In about 25 countries, Roman Catholic branches have become members of national councils of churches in recent years. But a major exception is the United States.

Ecumenical Patriarch Dimitrios I of Constantinople (modern Istanbul), chief spiritual leader of all Eastern Orthodoxy, said in his message that the assembly has a "major responsibility in the history of the ecumenical movement and in the life of the whole Christian world."

"It would be a pity if it fell into disappointment, It would be a pity if it restored unity in and through Christ to slogans and temporary expediency."

Patriarch Pimen of Moscow expressed hope that the assembly will act as "an effective instrument in its service to various needs of contemporary humanity" and voiced support for Africans in hastening "development of the life of their peoples in peace and security, and the ultimate defeat of colonialism and racism in the African continent."

Supermarkets: Pet Complaints

I bought $30 worth of groceries at the supermarket last week. The bill was $43.19.

It seems a logical assumption that what you see is what you pay when you're looking at price tags on supermarket items, in fact, that may not be the case, if the supermarket has made an "honest error" in pricing, according to the federal Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, they're "certainly not compelled to sell at the marked price."

One Belleville shopper discovered that the supermarkets are well-aware of that fact: Picking up a packaged chicken marked "$0.00" she thought she might have found the bargain of the year. Instead, the supermarket's manager said sorry, no chicken at that price.

Everyone has a pet peeve about supermarkets. One shopper thinks that meat and frozen fish is at the wrong end of some stores and that these goods, along with produce, should be at the logical end of your shopping tour. Another feels compelled to dutifully remove packages of cocoa from behind the grapefruit juice and return it to its proper place. She wishes the store clerks would do it for her; one man dislikes multiple price tags, because they give him the feeling he has to watch the cashier to be sure he or she has chosen the right one. Another, impatient shopper hates the way merchandise is moved around in grocery stores making her search for items. She thinks it's a cheap trick to make her see — therefore, buy — more things. Narrow aisles, too few cashiers, bad packers and breaking bags are standard complaints.

One young couple called to complain that they felt they shouldn't have to fight their young children past racks of books and toys and records. Another, more radical, young woman said she couldn't bother to try to prevent her children from pawing through those tempting books or trying out toys in the store aisles. She feels that stores are playing a dirty trick on parents by displaying toys and books near floor level so that they're almost irresistable to little children. She believes that since the supermarket is trying to pressure her unfairly in order to make extra profits, they'll have to deal with the consequences: broken toys and dirtied books.

No matter what your pet peeve, remember that you spend more than $2,000 a year in supermarkets and for that, you deserve a little service and consideration.

* * *

A television advertisement broadcast over a U.S. station recently brought to mind a short story that was required reading in the 8th Grade. Called The Machine Stops, it's the story of a civilization where human contact is nonexistent.

Each person lives in his or her cubicle, content with a television kind of entertainment, food and other services regularly supplied by the Machine.

Now a U.S. bank is offering its customers a new service that seems a step forward that frightening world. New legislation allows U.S. government cheques to go directly to a bank where they are automatically deposited in your account. (Many firms already pay their employees by this method here.)

If you write cheques or use a charge card and pay THAT by cheque, you might never handle money at all. It might make your bank pay you, in reality, how certainly, money itself is only symbol but it seems a more tangible kind of representation of a transaction — it feels like spending when you hand it over.

Diana Settle, displaying CANSAVE cards and calendars in her home.

CANSAVE

Christmas Cards To Help Children

Canada's mail interruption has caused various kinds of inconvenience to many people. One of them is Diana Settle, the local representative for the Canadian Save the Children Fund -(CANSAVE).

Mrs. Settle has 300 boxes of Christmas cards in her living room, boxes that she is hoping to sell in spite of the uncertain postal situation. Should the strike be settled in time, the custom of sending seasons' greetings will be able to continue.

"And even if the cards do arrive late," says Mrs. Settle, "it's better to keep in touch late than not at all."

The CANSAVE cards are all designed by Canadian artists for the benefit of needy children. This year, one of the cards is designed by William Davies, brother of local potter Gordon Davies. There are also other seasonal items, such as calendar wall hangings.

Since the CANSAVE fund depends for a large part of its revenue from the sale of Christmas cards and from its annual letter appeal at this time of year, it is important to Mrs. Settle that the mail takes note that she has the cards available.

If there is anyone who has been prevented from sending a donation to CANSAVE because of the mail strike, Mrs. Settle will accept it and give a temporary receipt to be followed up at a later date by an income-tax type receipt through National Headquarters.

There are also several CANSAVE coin boxes in local business places, where shoppers can drop spare change, that will go towards helping children whose difficulties — cold, hunger, despair — the CANSAVE organization seeks to alleviate. These children are assisted throughout the world, including those in the Canadian north whose needs are great.

Diana Settle can be reached at 968-7213, 16 Reynolds Crescent.

Harian House, removing porcelain from his kiln for the show.

Lonsdale Show Features Porcelain and Watercolors

A show and sale of porcelain by Harian House, with watercolors and drawings by Al Wilson, awaits visitors to the village of Lonsdale this weekend.

The second annual open studio show, held Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., features work that has been especially created for the event by both the potter and the artist.

Harian House, whose fine porcelain has established his reputation across Canada, is showing a wide selection of his current work, ranging from delicate bowls and cups to larger vases and wall plates. Some pieces, such as small porcelain bells, are especially appropriate for the Christmas season.

Some of the pottery, in earthy, speckled brown tones, is unique to the area, explains Mr. House, since the glaze contains ash from his Lonsdale home wood stove, and forty-pound clay pipe from Napanee. Now that he manufactures his own clay, he is more self-sufficient in all areas of his porcelain-making.

Al Wilson, whose work is currently being shown at the Roberts Gallery in Toronto, is also a Lonsdale resident and part-time commercial artist for Quinte Advertising Agency in Belleville. His watercolors focus closely on ordinary things — a dry leaf, a window, a cob of corn — in an extraordinary, detailed way.

Mr. Wilson is showing seven watercolors, and the same number of metal wall constructions. His work is hanging in the House dining room and living room, where the porcelain is also informally displayed.

Mr. House will be working in his studio during the weekend so that visitors will be able to view both the finished work in his home and the porcelain in progress in his studio.

Lonsdale is 20 miles east of Belleville, north on the Marysville Road off the 401.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory Scott

Scott — Nelson

Foxboro Emmanuel United Church was the scene of the recent wedding of Sherry Lee Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice William Blakely, Foxboro, and Gregory John Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Scott, Foxboro.

Rev. A. Parsons officiated. Given in marriage by her brother, Brian Nelson, the bride wore a floral embossed gown in the princess style featuring mandarin collar with cathedral sleeves. The gown was fashioned by the bride's sister. Her veil was floral tulle gathered on a circle of lilies made satin roses and ivy. She carried a colonial bouquet of talisman roses, daisies, baby's breath and mums.

Matron of honor Janice Brackman wore a peach satin gown with a peach lace cape. She carried tiaied mums.

Pat Saunders, Bonnie Tanner and Jennifer Blakely, the bride's sister, were similar gowns. Flower girl Karen Blakely, the bride's sister wore a floral embossed satin gown.

Steve Brandt, Toronto, was groomsman, assisted by Brian Nelson, the bride's brother, Randy Scott, of Newfoundland, the groom's brother.

After a reception at the Belleville Shrine Club the couple left on a wedding trip to Grand Bahama Island.

They reside in Belleville.

Punishing Parents Not the Answer To End Battered Baby Problem

TORONTO (CP) — Cathy Jones is 22. She married at 19 and is the mother of two-year-old Jennifer. She sincerely says she could never abuse her child. Cathy took steps recently to obtain outside help so she wouldn't become a battering mother.

Dr. Robert Bates, a pediatrician who heads a clinic for child abuse cases dealing with abused youngsters at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, wishes more parents would seek professional aid in raising their children.

"Baby battering is definitely on the increase," he said, "and I'm not convinced that publicizing the offending parent is the answer to stopping it."

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand concurs, in an interview, he said: "Criminal law is not the way to handle it. Sending the mother off to jail doesn't help."

He said he would prefer to see nursing parents and guardians handled through medical and social counselling agencies "to get to the root of the problem."

He added that doctors should be required to report suspecting-even suspected child abuse cases so the parent can be helped.

There is extensive legal power also for the protection and proper care of children both in the Criminal Code of Canada and in provincial child welfare legislation.

Specific legislative measures have been taken in all but two provinces — Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick — and child abuse registers exist in some provinces.

These registers are used to record cases of suspected or proven child abuse and provide basic information for the surveillance of the children referred to them. Reporting cases of child abuse is mandatory in some provinces that have registers, in others it is not.

Ontario has had a central registry for child abuse cases since 1965. Manitoba established one in 1971, Alberta and Nova Scotia in 1974.

Cases reported to the Ontario registry so far this year number 500. There were 67 charges of child abuse laid and 61 convictions. Probably most glaring is the number of repeat offences—68.

But Gordon McLellan, executive director of the Ontario registry in Toronto, says the registry "is working very well in its past."

He does not pretend that the registry is a complete and accurate picture.

Although it is mandatory for physicians and hospital workers to report incidents of child battering in Ontario, Mr. McLellan said failure to disclose such information carries no penalty.

In a private member's bill introduced in the House of Commons on Dec. 4, 1974, Liberal Howie P.C. (York-Simbury) asked the government to study and recommend to the House appropriate measures for the prevention, identification and treatment of child abuse and neglect.

The solicitor-general at that time suggested such a comprehensive program as a first step.

"We need a comprehensive review of federal and provincial legislation governing the provision of protective services to children and rehabilitative services to parents with a view to providing new legislation which will perform both functions effectively," Mr. Allmand said.

But no new legislation has yet been introduced, nor has the standing committee appointed at the time reported its recommendations.

Dr. Bates is disturbed by the delay.

"I agree the whole question of child abuse must become a political education," he said. "But federal government must carry down politicians between the provinces and municipalities, work out some credible financing so we can hire professionals to deal with this high-priority problem—and quietly."

The child this year, the hospital team has had 144 referrals. Physicians and others need to act sadly or so frequently beaten that death is inevitable.

Dr. D. Coleman, child coroner for Ontario, said that this year eight children have died as a result of severe battering.

"Child abuse is considered a significant cause of childhood disability and death," he said. "Physicians and others need to be aware of the signs and symptoms of the preventable disease and have a high index of suspicion when they are confronted with an injured or neglected child."

His pleas are echoed by Dr. Bates who said child abuse does not run in families, as previously thrashings.

"The child who is medically neglected is abused," he said. "The child whose mother keeps a spotless house but leaves the baby lying in his crib offering little or no stimulation or affection is abused. The child who is deprived of proper nutrition and care is abused.

"In fact, the child who is neglected in any aspect of his development is severely abused."

Next: Why do they beat their children?

'Gruesome Recital' of Child Abuse

TORONTO (CP) — Chief Coroner for Ontario, Dr. H. B. Cotnam, in a report, referred to a special child abuse team at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, which has more children will either be injured or die at the hands of angry parents.

"And the assailing parent doesn't necessarily come from a lower socio-economic group.

"We have had cases of battered children from families in the professions level. However, I fear that this present difficult economic climate will bring about more battering. The parent locked up together with financial worries will often lash out at a child."

Dr. Cotnam also praised those who assault their children repeatedly have been known to "shop around" at various hospitals or physicians so their acts would not be detected.

"This is why reporting suspected battering is so important," said Dr. Bates.

Dr. Bates said there are complex reasons why parents beat their children savagely.

"From studies done by anthropologists, there is a considerable amount is known about the battering parent. But what they may appear to be the average person. But in delving into their social and family history, we have noticed it very pathological.

His said that a number of suspected battering parents is made up of single parents between 18 and 25 years of age and is employed.

"Their level of education is as a rule, average, and alcoholism and drug addiction is not evident to into the classical abusive situation."

The physician said that some parents have had an unhappy childhood where they were known only foster care or parental abuse and neglect with the result that they were poorly imprinted with examples of how to mother a real child.

"There is a sense of isolation—a wall that prevents a family from turning to others for help," he said. "As a result they have no realistic way to handle the usual problems that children present, such as a crying baby."

Dr. Bates added that in many instances the adult has married a person too much like himself—needy, insecure and distrustful.

"They have a low self-esteem and there is a persistence of the lack of confidence engendered

Therapist Gets Midnight Calls

TORONTO (CP) — Sheila Connell doesn't mind being awakened in the middle of the night by a particular call. The caller is by a "crisis" situation and might well take her frustrations out on her infant daughter.

In short, she is a parent who has beaten her baby. Mrs. Connell is a lay therapist working with parents known to have abused their children.

This new kind of help for such parents was initiated by Dr. Simon Kreindler, psychiatrist at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

The program, modelled after a child abuse project at the University of Colorado Medical Centre in Denver fills a need for more intensive work with parents than child welfare workers can provide, he said.

Mrs. Connell sees her role as that of a trusted friend of the parent "who can relate on a level that the social worker can't."

She said in an interview that her 36-hour job is a long-term commitment to that parent. She finds that a lay therapist can handle only about three cases at any one time.

The therapist must be available around the clock and be ready to visit the parent as often as necessary, usually to less than twice a week, more often than that when there's a lot of stress.

"The real job," said Mrs. Connell, "is to listen in a noncritical way, to whatever the parent want talk about and to be responsive to whatever the need."

Barbara Warnne, a York University graduate who worked with Dr. Kreindler in setting up the project, said: "Not everyone is suited to this work. In looking for candidates, we sought individuals who were secure people themselves, and who as parents also know something of the pleasures as well as the frustrations of parenthood."

Another group concerned over the alarming prevalence of child abuse has formed branches in Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal. Parents Anonymous (PA) has its roots in California and is a self-help group giving parents an opportunity to share their feelings with others who are experiencing the same problems.

Lynne Rae, a volunteer coordinator of the Toronto group, said: "Members attend weekly meetings and discuss what led to the problem time in the week and with the help of other members and volunteer group leader, try to find an alternate way of handling situations that arise."

Members exchange telephone numbers and are encouraged to call one another if they really feel they are losing control.

"PA encourages members to sort through feelings of inadequacy, frustration, low self-esteem and to stimulate positive feelings about themselves," she said.

Mrs. Rae said that most of the members have abused a child before joining PA.

Gordon Cone, a former case worker on a team of specialists dealing with abused children at Hospital for Sick Children, said that preventing child battering is a matter of public education.

"Children in school should be given instruction on how to be parents," he said. "We teach them the three Rs, how to cook, sew and to type, but we don't provide them with the education on how to raise a family."

He said there should also be a network whereby nurses, doctors, case workers, teachers, public health nurses and others could refer parents to a child abuse clinic.

"Parents who are having problems with their children could visit every home where there is a new child.

"The nurse, who would be trained to detect any ill feelings the mother has for her child, would have prior knowledge from the hospital team that delivered the infant," he said. "She could then check to see that the home is a safe place for the baby, and if it is not, would contact the Children's Aid Society who, Ontario law, could step in and investigate."

Dr. Bates said that even with all these preventive measures, "we'll never wipe out child abuse."

Ann Landers
Husband Refuses to Communicate

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are going through a difficult time in our marriage because we have lost the ability to communicate. He blows up at every little thing, accuses me of freaking up stories to infuriate him, and refuses to listen to me when I need to talk.

I went to a marriage counselor twice and it helped. The third time I was asked to bring my husband. He went once reluctantly — and refuses to return because the counselor is an unmarried man. He claims only a person who is not married does not know what the hell marriage is all about.

I have a feeling my husband is uncomfortable because the counselor got his number pretty promptly and is sure to suggest that he change some of his ways.

Will you comment please on my husband's objection to the counselor? Does he have a valid point or not?

—Asked To Make A Go Of It
Reply:

Dear Regardless: Marriage neither enhances nor diminishes the ability of a counselor. Some of the best marriages counselors in the country are Catholic priests. Many medicos and inexperienced counselors are married — and having plenty of trouble themselves. What a couple is married doesn't mean everything is peaches and cream. Sometimes the peaches are rotten and the cream is sour.

Your husband is copping out and I suspect you have guessed the reason. But hang in there alone if you must and do your best. If you can't learn to live WITH him, then learn to live without him.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I are friendly with twenty. Please check with your medical authorities and let us know if our fears are grounded.

Our son is engaged to marry a charming girl he met in Louisiana last year. Both her parents are deceased. Mary Ellen spoke of them with great affection, but gave few details about her early life.

We have learned from a friend who lives in New Orleans that Mary Ellen's mother died of cancer and her father died of leprosy. In fact, he died in a leper colony.

Will you please tell us if this terrible disease can be transmitted from one generation to another?

Could Mary Ellen develop the disease in later life because of her early exposure to it?

Ann, we need some facts. Our family doctor doesn't know about leprosy and a dictionary doesn't give information. Does your file on your help. — Concerned In Connecticut

Dear Concerned: Calm down. Hansen's disease (they don't call it leprosy any more) is one of the LEAST communicable diseases known to medical science. In fact, some wives tried to get the disease when they visited their husbands in the leprosarium in Carville, La., many years ago — so they, too, might be incarcerated, but they did NOT succeed.

Dr. Robert Stoker of Washington, D.C., was the first physician to succeed in getting a victim of Hansen's disease admitted to a D.C. municipal hospital. He assured me that neither Mary Ellen, your son or their unborn children are in any danger. Relax.

Dear Ann Landers: Im a widow, 58, but look younger. I lost my husband two months ago and am very lonely. Nobody sends an extra woman at a dinner party. (Extra men, however, are in great demand.) The friends my husband and I used to entertain showered me with attention for three weeks after my husband died. I haven't heard from them since.

A man I met casually at a church affair several years ago gave a mutual friend who might like his wife that Polly. He is kind enough to invite you about my age and as I recall, both to a party at her home, very attractive. Would it be all right if I dropped him a note and told him that I, too, am alone and would like to renew our acquaintance?

I don't want to come off looking too pushy. Please advise. — Long Night

Dear Long: Don't do it, honey. Most widowers would head for the hills if they received such a note. Unless you

Rot Extensive in Old Brighton Arena

BRIGHTON — The extent of the wood rot in the structure of the condemned Brighton arena was so bad that even more snow would have caused the roof to collapse, the foreman of the demolition company dismantling the building said Friday.

The 35-year-old building, which has been condemned for use this winter by Brighton minor hockey figure skating programs and public use was ordered closed by the ministry of labor after the agency reviewed reports on the building's condition. The reports had been completed at the request of the Brighton recreational department and town council more than a year ago.

"I am very glad the building was finally closed because I think if we had one heavy snow the whole thing would have fallen in," said Bud Simpson, supervisor of town works. "You really could not see the extent of the wet rot in the main trussing but the dry rot we discovered at various points in the roof was worse than I though. It would be."

The foreman for the demolition team said there was also considerable rot... beneath around several air vents in the roof and that they could have fallen through at any time without warning.

The arena will be used as an open air site until a new structure is built. Brighton Village and Brighton Township are co-operating on plans to build a new arena. A third partner, Murray Township has been reluctant to commit itself to the venture. The township has delayed decision on the project until a referendum has been counted and public meeting can be called.

Cramped Conditions

Personnel of Belleville General Hospital (BGH) department of nuclear medicine portray crowded conditions when all three pieces of equipment are in use in the one room used for scanning procedures during frequent busy periods. At controls in right foreground is technologist Somashaker Balasa while chief technologist Charito Fukuzawa operates machine at rear. BGH officials say department personnel are regularly exposed to high levels of radiation and the hospital has been unsuccessful in obtaining provincial government approval for department relocation and expansion.

Some Hospital Employees Face Radiation Hazard

BY ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Belleville General Hospital (BGH) personnel employed in the BGH department of nuclear medicine are exposed to high levels of radiation and provincial ministry of health results to the problem is cheap, cynical and tantamount to blackmail, says Dr. Bruce Morgan of the BGH Board of Governors.

Dr. Morgan told the board Friday that department employees are being exposed to levels "beyond that necessary for a properly designed department."

"We (board members) must take an urgent attitude towards this," he commented. "I don't think in all conciousness we should allow one person to be exposed to hazardous radiation."

Dr. Morgan said he feels the board has a personal responsibility. "If any of these employees develop a malignancy, they would be within their legal right to sue this hospital," he warned.

He also criticized the health ministry's response of both ministry officials to the problem during a recent meeting in Toronto with board representatives to discuss BGH funding.

Phillip Rickard, BGH executive director, said that during a presentation to department space requirements, a BGH consultant pointed out the radiation problem is now a ministry responsibility.

He said officials replied that if the department poses a problem, BGH is not obligated to keep it open.

Dr. Morgan remarked that he had had this kind of blackmail that says if you don't provide this, we'll close this (department)."

He said after the board meeting in regards to the ministry reply as a "cheap and cynical crack."

"The utilization of nuclear medicine is not frivolous," Dr. Morgan said. "There is a growing need for it."

He explained nuclear medicine is useful in diagnosing diseases and assisting in treatment and can provide a quick diagnosis far enough in advance that something can be done to prevent otherwise certain death from disease.

Dr. Rickard said after the board meeting that the ministry has stated that BGH cannot perform its own alterations to solve the problem without prior ministry approval.

He said the ministry has indicated there is no capital funding available until 1977 but money might be found in a government fund earmarked for hospital conditions regarded as hazardous. Dr. Morgan said if the ministry refuses or delays approval, the board must order its own changes as an action which would contravene the Public Hospitals Act. "They (ministry) don't own this hospital," he said.

Mr. Rickard told the board there were only one recorded incident in which a department employee absorbed radiation above an acceptable level during a two-week period.

Scanning Procedures Show Sharp Increase

Figures released by Belleville General Hospital (BGH) Friday show that the number of scanning procedures performed in the BGH department of nuclear medicine have increased by 1,778 per cent since the department opened in 1967.

BGH administration has projected a figure of 11,700 procedures by the end of this year — an increase of 2,555 from 1974, it would be the largest yearly increase since the first year of the department's operation.

Ray Krock, assistant BGH executive director, said Friday BGH has submitted a proposal to the provincial ministry of health to have the department relocated on the basement level which would be renovated for this purpose.

He said the relocation would include larger facilities and that there is no indication when and if the ministry will give approval.

The department is currently located at two rooms on Level One of Quinte Wing and its staff is composed of Dr. Walter Totten, director; a chief technologist, three technologists and a secretary.

However, only one room houses the three major pieces of scanning equipment, Mr. Krock said each piece of equipment should be located in separate rooms.

Multilingual Show

Ken Peacock, French student at Loyalist College extension division, played chef in a skit Friday as part of Jingle Bell Pot Pourri presented by the school's modern language department. Also in the kitchen skit were students Lesley Lewis (left) and Carol Knapman. Students studying English, Spanish and German participated in the presentation before an audience of relatives and friends.

Ice Dams on Council Agenda

Provincial government restraints threaten to freeze the ice-control dams planned for Belleville in 1976.

The Moira River Conservation Authority (MRCA) has asked city council's backing to have the issue reviewed by Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier.

The request is on council's agenda for decision at its regular meeting Monday.

The MRCA has learned that the authority does not consider it good planning to construct the Lodi dam first. Therefore, it suggests if the crisis in its budget by provincial authorities would eliminate construction of the College St. Dam in 1978. Senior government officials said there was sufficient money left to complete the Lodi dam further downstream. But the MRCA assessment is that the fiscal parsing would reduce its budget below requirements for the dam.

The authority does not consider it good planning to construct the Lodi dam first. Therefore, it suggests if the appeal fails to have both projects approved for 1976, that funds be provided to complete the College St. dam first.

Council's agenda also shows the city's official plan is finally moved through the process of final provincial government approval. Council series of modifications to the revise, but mostly minor-re-quested by like housing industry before it endorses the plan.

Most Residents See Value in Lower Speed Limits

People who enjoy driving fast are in for a big disappointment Jan. 1 when the Ontario government cracks down on traffic accidents by reducing the speed limits.

A survey this week at Belleville shoppers showed although most drive at the present speed Hmits many resi-dents feel the lower limit is an excellent idea.

The Ontario Government introduced legislation Nov. 19 to reduce the highway speed limits and to make mandatory the use of automobile seat belts.

The changes will come under amendments to the Highway Traffic Act.

The maximum speed on major highways will be reduced to 60 miles per hour from 70. On other highways the limit will be reduced to 50 from 55 or 60 miles per hour.

The new limits will be put into effect "As soon as highway signs can be changed.

THOMAS WATT

Thomas Watt, a 61 year-old employee of Walkers department store, says the change in speed limits is a good idea. "I don't drive now," he said. "But when I did I stayed at 55 miles per hour."

Mr. Watt said there might be some problems enforcing the new limits. "It will certainly decrease the number of accidents.

KATHY LEAVEY

Kathy Leavey, 23, of Trenton, say she will have to slow down when the new limits are placed into effect. People are going to have to take more time to get where they are going. It will slow down the pace of everything," she said "It will be much more relaxing."

MARK WALMSLEY

A 19-year-old Belleville resident Mark Walmsley says the reduced speed limit will conserve energy and save lives. "Preserving fuel is an important need right now," he added.

Mr. Walmsley, a shipper-receiver, said the new limit shouldn't be hard to enforce. "Instead of people being in a hurry to get where they are going, they'll have to plan their schedules."

MARY JEAN LANGEVIN

A 20-year-old Loyalist College student, Miss Langevin of Belleville says a lower speed limit is a good idea because she had noticed more accidents on the highways. Miss Langevin said she doesn't think it matters much if the speeds were reduced on secondary roads.

"I'll have to slow down too," she said. "It will be a nice change if things move at a slower pace."

STUART PESCOD

Stuart Pescod, 43, a teacher at Quinte Secondary School, says he keep up with traffic but believes the speed limit should be lower. Mr. Pescod, who also teaches a course in driver education, said the Canadian driver isn't as mature as he should be. "You should drive the level of the conditions of the weather and road," he added.

LORNA HOUGHE

Lorna Houghe, 48, of RR 2 Stirling, says she has always travelled 55 miles per hour so the new limit won't make much difference to her. "It's a good idea, though — gas will go farther and people will get better mileage from their cars."

Mrs. Houghe said there should be less accidents with reduced speed limit.

Jets Unwelcome WHA Visitors

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winnipeg Jets, hot and cold on the road last season, are making a mockery of themselves in the opposition's rink this year with nine European players having a hand in the reversal of fortune.

The Jets made it eight wins against four defeats in their 12th game on the road Friday night when they handed Toronto Terms a 5-2 setback as Anders Hedberg, a former Swedish star, scored two goals for the winners.

The victory for the Jets, who had a 13-23-2 record away from home last season, put them in sole possession of first place in the Canadian Division with 17 points on 16 wins and seven losses. Quebec Nordiques are second with 15 points.

In Friday's other games, Houston Aeros beat Edmonton Oilers 7-4 on three goals by Frank Hughes, New England Whalers paced by Ron Climie's three-goal performance defeated Denver Spurs 7-3 and Indianapolis Racers downed Cleveland Crusaders 4-1.

For the Terms, it was their fourth defeat at home against three wins and a tie. They remained in last place in the Canadian Division with 12 points, eight behind fourth-place Edmonton. Calgary is third with 20 points.

Hedberg's 18th goal of the season was scored at the game at 10:01 of the third period broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Jets their win over the Terms.

Vaclav Nedomansky, with two goals to raise his season's total to 19, and Richard Farda supplied for Toronto before a crowd of 10,882.

The Aeros, winning their fifth game in succession, tied the WHA record for consecutive victories at home. They have won eight games in Houston this season and 14 in a row over all, matching the record set by New England last spring.

The Aeros, who increased their first-place lead in the Western Division to five points over Minnesota Fighting Saints also got two goals from Larry Lund, who also added three assists. Rusty Patenaude had a goal and two assists for the Oilers.

Cordie Howe suffered a cut behind the left ear at 14:58 of the second period that required five stitches to close, but he returned to play for the third period and set up a goal by Andre Hinse. It was Howe's 15th assist this season to go along with five goals.

Climie, the Whalers' leading scorer, raised his goal total to 13 this season with a first-period goal and two more in the second period.

Larry Pleau, a 30-goal scorer last season, broke a 26-game scoring slump with a second-period shot that beat goalie Bob Johnson for his first goal of the season. Pleau also had two assists.

Bob Liddington scored twice for Denver.

Bob Dailnski scored two goals, one into an open net, as the Racers defeated the Crusaders.

The loss dropped Cleveland out of first place in the Eastern Division as New England registered one point ahead of both the Crusaders and Cincinnati Stingers. New England has 19 points and Cincinnati and Cleveland 18 each.

One of the stars for the Racers was defenceman Pat Stapleton who assisted on Dick Procter's goal which tied the score, 1-1, in the second period.

Stapleton, 35-year-old native of Sarnia, Ont., now in his first year with the Racers, played 45 minutes.

Indianapolis now has a 7-6 record since Jacques Demers took over as coach. Cleveland is 5-7.

More early in the season.

Indianapolis coach Jacques Demers said: "I've said all along that Stapleton is the type of guy that puts it together. He's been an all-star in the National League, you know he's starting to be a leader, a stabilizer in today's game. Now, that's at Phoenix, Calgary at San Diego, Toronto at Cincinnati and Indianapolis at New England. Tuesday, it's Denver at Indianapolis, Minnesota at Winnipeg, Quebec at Phoenix, Calgary at Edmonton, Toronto at Cleveland and San Diego at Houston.

Pickering Slips Past Bobcats

Bitter cold November winds may have been blowing outside but inside the Memorial Arena things couldn't have been hotter as far as Belleville Bobcats and Pickering Panthers were concerned.

The Panthers were able to stave off a Belleville comeback attempt and earned a hard fought 3-1 victory over the local squad.

The Cats could do everything but put the puck in the net save for Tony Meagher's lone shorthanded goal early in the third period. Belleville outshot the visitors by 36-24 margin over the span of three periods but poor fortune smiled upon Pickering goalie Richard Bouchard.

Pickering did have more than good luck, however, as their fast, hustling style of play gave them numerous scoring opportunities. They were stopped cold, though, by the superb goaltending of Cats defenceman Jeff Merrill.

"The turning point in the game came when Peter Dettman got a penalty in the final period," "We had pretty the momentum until that point but then we lost it," Bobcat coach Meehan Descair.

It was only the second penalty of the game for the locals but it proved a most costly one. Belleville, had been put on equal terms by Meagher's goal and until then held the upperhand at bay.

In the second period the Cats very rarely allowed the Panthers into their end, but could not manage to beat the quick glove of Bouchard.

"You guys played a hell of a game tonight. We'll win a lot of games this season if you continue to play like that," came words of consolation from the Cats coach after the game in the dressing room.

Pickering opened the scoring for the middle stages of the first period when Chris Papadhondon finished up a perfect pass from Gus Retsidi on a two on one break that gave Merrill no chance.

Belleville fought hard through the scoreless second period setting the stage for Meagher's slider along the ice early in the third. Tom Bochenek scored what proved to be the winner for the Panthers at the 6:09 mark of the final period and Mark Urodicit's goal put the icing on the cake as far as Pickering was concerned.

Belleville, who had been skating with the high flying, first place Panthers, had the wind knocked out of their sails after the final goal and could not muster much of a threat in the last five minutes of the game even when they removed Merrill in favor of an extra attacker.

Bob Moore, saw brief action in the late stages of the game as Merrill had to be taken out for repairs to a gash over his right eye that occurred when the puck struck him on the final visitor's goal. Minutes later, however, he returned.

Bob Moore was voted the Bobcat Player of the Week, sponsored by Dibble Tire of Belleville, for his performance in last week's game. Previous to that, Andy Ricketts was the first recipient of the award.

Pete Zegouras was this month's winner of the Belleville Blue Line club draw for $200.

Cats next home game is coming Friday when the Whitby Young Bruins invade the confines of the Memorial Arena.

Bob's First Win Worth the Wait

House League Hockey

Bob's Auto Body had to wait awhile for their first win in the bantam minor section of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association house league program but when the victory came, it was a convincing one.

Paced by the three-goal effort of Robert Hope, the team cruised to a 7-1 win over Kiwanis. Dave McQuaid was a two-goal shooter for the winners while Don Cowan and Gary Jennings each scored once and over two assists. Dave Barlow converted a Bill Hull pass for the lone Kiwanis counter.

In other league play, Whitley Rentals Peewee Major Selects, Ed's Esso, and Bud Ferguson Peewees covered wins. Blake Kerr Esso and Vic Clare each potted three goals while Brian Crankwright, Paul Saunders and Craig Saxby each fired a pair. Rounding out the scoring production were David Levinski who also had three assists, Dave Mortenson, Rick Macdonald and Steven Lee. Mike Miller and Kevin Jeffers scored for the losers.

Ed's Esso had its hands full in a tight battle with Keyser Mills before a 3-2 win on goals by Mike Weatherstone, Mike Ireland and Doug Anstett. Bill Ellis and Mike O'Shaughnessy replied for Legion.

The line of Timmy Jaques, Jamie Power and Gordon Leidolph was rolling for Y's Men's Club in the draw with Blake Kerr, Jaques had two goals and an assist, Power was good for a goal and two assists and Luoldph drew a helper as the trio looked after the team's scoring output. Blake Kerr contributed two. Ty Cole, Shaun Rafferty and Mike Schmidt.

Checking in with two goals each in Doug Jones Jewelers' 7-1 defeat of Red Shark were Gerry Latchford and Larry Drabot. Singles went to Robert Bateman, Jeff Gould and Indeve Power. John Mcnabb-rick had Red Shark's only counter.

Nicholson and BCI Victorious In Basketball Classic Opener

BY MIKE BRADSHAW
Staff Sportswriter

Nicholson Catholic College overcame a long standing jinx Friday night to win their opening game in the McDonald's Belleville Basketball Classic. Despite a second quarter comeback attempt, the Nicks hung on for a 59-56 win over Quinte Saints of Quinte. Unofficially, it was the first time ever a Nicholson senior team has beaten a squad from Quinte.

"Everyone played well," said a delighted Nicholson head coach, Gary Duggan, "we haven't had a game in two weeks and we haven't had a workout in the past week so I'm very pleased with the outcome."

Both Quinte and Nicholson were involved in exams this week and neither had much an opportunity to prime for the Classic.

Meanwhile, on the second front of the eight team tourney, the third local entry, BCI, was involved in a close shaving of its own. The Collegians edged Odawa's St. Pius Red in the opening tournament contest at Centennial.

The other two games were won by more decisive scores. A.N. Myer outgunned Strathroy in the tune of 104-48 and Bishop Gibbons, from New York, downed Hamilton 73-26.

The Saints poured on the pressure throughout the contest, but the Nicks, only slightly flustered by Quinte's aggressive man-to-man full court press, controlled from the opening jump.

When they got excessively tight under the pressure defence, Nicks were let out of their own and through the agility and finesse of guard, Bruce Collins.

As heeded, Collins turned on his ball handling ability and, even when doubled teamed slipped through openings down court.

Then he fed the ball under the hoop to centre Dale Wilson, who posted 14 big points, or Jeff Boyle, who despite cold cost most of the second half scored 20 points.

Collins turned in a sterling performance keying the Nicks offence and scored eight points along the way. His efforts did not go one way however. He and his teammates successfully foiled the Saints scoring attack with a tight 3-2 zone defence. They allowed Quinte to take outside sometimes distant shots, and then cleared the boards and came out with the two point margin of victory.

Mike Kirby topped local scorers with 13 points. Brian Bell was next with nine and Mitch Hannah, Geoff Wright and John Guthrie each checked in with eight.

Dan Colterman and Jim Kent popped 13 apiece for St. Pius and Terry Vander Hazenburg added eight.

A.N. MYER 104, STRATHROY 48

The Niagara Falls powerhouse proved very decisively why they are expected to win the Ontario AAA basketball championship. With an intimidating fast breaking offence, Myer jumped into a first half lead at the end of the first quarter.

Terry Rigg topped the onslaught with 29 points, Jay Tyanne, counted 19, Frank Roberto had 17, Ted Bishop 14 and Ron Myer added 11.

It was an effort in futility, but the Strathroy squad never threw in the towel. Possibly had the Kerry Myer squad been less 23 per cent from the floor during the first half they may have been close when the final buzzer sounded. Myer only outscored Strathroy by two points, 51-49, in the final two quarters.

Amedeo Pinhelro, although fouled out of the game early in the second half, scored 19 points for the losers. He was followed by Gary Nass with 11, Bill White with 11 and Dave James with 10.

BISHOP GIBBONS 73, STAMFORD 26

Carl Bankwhad, showing all the ball handling finesse of a five-foot-ten guard was top scorer for the team from Schenectady, New York. The six-six tower of power hooped 20 points. Mark Chyinski got 11 and Dennis Kelleher and Joe Izabella added six apiece.

Rob Garner had -12, Tom Lieft 11, John Lieft eight and John Nicol six for the defending AAA basketball championship. With an intimidating fast breaking offence, Myer jumped into a first half lead at the end of the first quarter.

Bulls Finally Snap Out of It

By The Associated Press

Chicago Bulls broke out of their nine-game losing streak with an 89-80 National Basketball Association victory Friday night over Milwaukee Bucks.

"I am certainly not beating the drums about winning any title," said coach Dick Motta. "Right now all I want to do is make the playoffs since we are in a hole so far."

In the other NBA games, Boston Celtics whipped Atlanta Hawks 114-107, Philadelphia 76ers defeated Seattle Supersonics 113-94, Kansas City-Omaha clipped New Orleans Jazz 96-87, Los Angeles Lakers turned back Buffalo Braves 125-106 and Phoenix Suns stymied Portland Trail Blazers 110-101.

In the American Basketball Association, New York Nets beat Virginia Squires 116-97, the Spirits of St. Louis topped Indiana Pacers 113-112 and Denver Nuggets defeated San Antonio Spurs 140-138.

Mickey Johnson grabbed a career high of 19 rebounds and Matt Goukas and Bob Love each clinched clutch fourth-quarter shots to help open a 7-point game and give Chicago its triumph over Milwaukee. It also snapped the fewest points ever scored against Chicago in 10 years.

John Havlicek scored 20 of his 36 points in the second half to lead Boston over Atlanta. Havlicek took an elbow in the eye early in the first quarter, but returned with five stitches to rally the Celtics with eight points in the third quarter and 12 in the final.

George McGinnis scored 36 points as Philadelphia surged back from a 16-point, second-quarter deficit to defeat Seattle.

Nate Archibald scored 31 points, but it took a basket by Sam Lacey and a pair of free throws by Jimmy Walker in the final 14 seconds to give Kansas City its victory over New Orleans.

Lucius Allen scored 28 points to lead Los Angeles in a blistering offensive show that buried Buffalo.

Paul Westphal scored 17 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter to lift Phoenix over Portland.

CHANGES PLANNED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mike Schmidt, Washington Capitals coach and general manager, said Thursday the National Hockey League team hopes to make key personnel changes in the coming years.

Schmidt declined to detail what changes were in the works, saying: "When you go as many games as we have without winning and you have a rather sad record, it's going to take more than one person to give us a shot in the arm," Schmidt said. The Capitals, with a record of three wins, 17 losses and two ties, acquired defenseman Bob Paradise from Pittsburgh Penguins on Wednesday for a second-round draft choice in the 1976 amateur draft.

ANDY CAPP

Hunsperger Sent to Jail

VANCOUVER (CP) — Garnet Hunsperger, former player with British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference, went to jail Friday after losing his appeal against a two-month jail sentence on a charge of assault causing bodily harm.

The sentence for two counts of assault was handed down April 3 by County Judge Stewart McMorran. Hunsperger now is a defensive tackle with Toronto Argonauts.

Judge McMorran said the 255-pound football player seemed to "have gone almost berserk" in an attack on acquitted footballer Robert Porter and bellboy Donald Amadeo on April 21, 1974, in Prince George, B.C.

The three-judge appeal court was unanimous in dismissing Hunsperger's appeal against the sentence imposed by Judge McMorran. Hunsperger's lawyer had sought a fine instead of a jail sentence.

CAR and DRIVER
APRIL 1975
"Whole populations of drivers will live for years with this car, strongly impressed by its generally nimble disposition, sensitive feel of the road through the steering wheel and brake pedal. It slips through city traffic like a bicycle and thrives on the parking space remnants most cars pass by. You can stuff enough groceries for a football team through the rear hatch, while the back seat folds and pushes forward out of the way. The only thing you'll need a trailer for is objects too heavy to boost across the high lift-over."

Esquire
APRIL 1975
THE MAGAZINE FOR MEN. AUGUST 1975
"VW's new Rabbit is significant because it is a complete departure for Volkswagen, and also because it is the specific type of car that Detroit will be building in the 1980's.
The statistics speak for themselves: accommodation for four, a seventy-horsepower engine, fuel consumption of thirty-eight mpg (U.S.) and a weight of under two thousand pounds.
What they came up with was a car that doesn't have an ounce of fat, one which provides excellent operating economy as well as performance and value. Personally, I think that VW's Rabbit is one very good idea ahead of its time."

ROAD & TRACK
MAY 1975
"The winner, and not by a flare, (sorry, couldn't resist). This car does it all; it's small, light, roomy and fast, with nimble and responsive steering, ride and handling. A modern and sophisticated car with a handsome European designed hatchback body. The Rabbit offers one of the most space-saving mechanical layouts we've seen yet: front-wheel drive, transverse engine and a unique, independent rear suspension featuring an integral anti-roll bar and using so little space it's remarkable. The Rabbit has a solid feel, and an ultramodern look about it.
Best of all it is almost sinfully enjoyable to drive."

Popular Mechanics
APRIL 1975
"The most important new import for 1975 is the VW Rabbit.
The 1800-pound Rabbit is a mechanical masterpiece. It gets up to 50 mph in about 12 seconds—giving it the edge on some V8 subcompacts. Its hatchback design provides 24.7 cubic feet of luggage capacity with the rear seat folded.
VW got the greatest possible amount of usable interior space into the smallest possible outer shell—and an exterior with some style."

Flyers Soar Over Terriers

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — League-leading Barrie Flyers trounced Orillia Terriers 12-3 in Friday's scheduled Ontario Hockey Association Senior A action.

Orville Bray, who took over as Terrier coach before the game, faced Orillia's 11th defeat in 15 starts.

Corby Adams led Barrie with four goals and Doug Acomb had three. Single goals went to Bill Abbot, Bob Baird, Daryl Sly, Jack Smith, Bob Mcaddith and Gary Lote.

Colin Gordon, Tim Snyder and Bob Kaza scored for the Terriers.

The Flyers held period leads of 5-2 and 9-3 and outshot Orillia 43-25 before a crowd of 600.

League play resumes tonight with Cambridge at Thunder Bay.

The same teams meet again Sunday and Whitby travels to Napanee.

Canada and U.S. Monopolize Semi's

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Canadian and two United States schools advanced to semi-final play today in the Concordia Women's Invitational basketball tournament with opening-round victories Friday night.

Laurentian University Voyageurs of Sudbury, Ont., got 30 points from Michelle Belanger to oust St. Mary's University Stallies of Halifax 74-58, while University of New Brunswick Red Bloomers, powered by Kim Hansen's 29 points, downed University of Guelph Gryphons 58-44.

Queen's College Knights of New York, with Sharon Manning scoring 18 points and Gail Mcmillan 16, bombed John Abbott College Islanders of Montreal, a junior college entry, 76-54.

Meanwhile, the host Concordia University Stingers failed again to make the final of their tournament, dropping a 55-39 decision to University of Southern Connecticut Owls of New Haven. The Owls were led by Marcie Dubyk's 21 points.

The winners fit today's semi-finals pitting Laurentian against Queen's and New Brunswick against Southern Connecticut tonight in the championship game. The Voyageurs are defending Canadian champions, while the Owls were third-ranked in the U.S. last year.

Eagleson Wants Soviets' Verification in Writing

TORONTO (CP) — Canada has set a deadline of Dec. 31 for in writing they will participate in a 1976 international hockey tournament.

Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson says he is confident the United States, Sweden, Finland and Czechoslovakia will confirm their participation, but he has some doubts about the Soviet Union.

"I will never be certain about the Russians until I have it in writing," Eagleson told a news conference Friday.

A one-month tournament is proposed for September, and while no sites have been set, Toronto and Montreal have been mentioned as possibilities.

Eagleson, appointed by the federal government to head a tournament organizing committee, had just returned from Stockholm where the six countries agreed in principal to the series which would include a team of National and World Hockey Association players.

"International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) rules will govern the series except that helmets will be discretionary and a one-referee two-linesmen system will be used," Eagleson said.

"Overtime will be played only in the final series, each team will be composed of a maximum of 25 players and 20 players will dress for each game including two goaltenders."

World Baseball Ready for Debut

SUDBURY, Mass. (AP) — The new World Baseball Association plans to make its debut this winter in a six-game exhibition series in Cuba, says league president Marvin Addison.

Dick Adelson, son of the league president and owner of a New England franchise in the WBA, said the league, which claims to have teams in the United States, Japan and Central America, will play a limited schedule in 1976.

The series in Cuba will pit "a team representative of the World Baseball Association" against clubs representing the various provinces of Cuba and the national championship team, Santiago de Cuba, he said.

Founded in 1974, the league has been slow to get off the ground. It is touting radical rules—including orange baseballs, allowing the use of five designated hitters and a time limit on pitchers and batters to promote a fast game pace.

The league president, an insurance executive, said the WBA requires prospective franchise holders to show they can absorb losses of up to $1.5 million over a five-year period. They also have to be able to pledge the use of a 25,000-to 30,000-seat stadium for the team.

Summerhays Keeps National Title

EDMONTON (CP) — Johnny Summerhays of Stratford, Ont., retained his Canadian light-weight boxing championship Friday night with a unanimous 15-round decision over former champion Al Ford of Edmonton.

Summerhays, who refused to allow Ford his knotted left hand, proved much stronger physically and won down the slim rival.

Summerhays said after the bout he knew he would have to stay close to Ford to nullify his reach advantage.

There were no knockdowns and most of the crowd of about 1,100 clapped rhythmically for the last seven rounds of the dull contest.

The champion's brother, Terry, lost a technical knockout to Tommy Howard of Seattle in a middleweight bout and Jimmy Burnett of Los Angeles, eighth-ranked light-heavyweight in the world, knocked out Danny Brewer of Paris, Calif., with three sharp right hands in the third round of another 10-rounder.

Ford, who reached fifth place in world lightweight rankings before his retirement two years ago, won three bouts easily in a comeback which started this summer but was no match for Summerhays in the last three rounds.

Summerhays, who defeated Danny Szabo for the title after Ford vacated it, defended the crown against Barry Sposaja of Glasgow, N.S., last spring in a fight almost as dull as this one.

Summerhays's manager, Frank Bricker, said he has no plans confirmed for another Canadian title fight.

Little Chance

Without Chris Clarke Canada appears to have little chance of capturing a gold medal at the International Boxing Competition in Montreal, Clarke did not travel with east coast team to the event and was since been suspended indefinitely by the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association, his replacement, Mike Nanaime from British Columbia bowed out of the tournament Friday to United States Jim Kenty, a Pan-American gold medalist, is prepared "to fight the CABA's decision. His quoted as saying, "They don't own me."

Still Produce Winners

Cubans Leave Their Best Boxers at Home

MONTREAL (CP) — The Cuban national team, already one of the best in the world, showed it has depth as well Friday night as two of its less-experienced fighters stole the show in quarter-final action at the Montreal International Competitors 1976 amateur boxing tournament.

Light middleweight Luis Feliipe Martinez and light heavyweight Ricardo Rojas both won decisive victories.

Martinez, 20, scored a unanimous decision over Ron Wilgaard of Holland, while Rojas, also 20, demonstrated awesome power, sending Fred Corrigan of River Charles, N.S., to the canvas twice in the second round before the referee stopped the fight.

The Cubans, who left four world champions at home, including heavyweight Teofilo Stevenson, received a strong performance Thursday from 19-year-old Bienvenido Leon in his quarter-final victory over Hungarian Andras Botos.

To other bouts Friday night in Class C Vancouver lost a unanimous hastanweight decision to Hiroshi Ishigaki of Japan, while James Kenty of the United States won a decision over Montreal's Pierre Corbeil in a middleweight battle, while Solomon Alaga of Nigeria used a devastating right hand repeatedly staggger and finally drop Hungarian Laszlo Pakodi in a meeting of heavyweights.

In a free-swinging lightweight bout, Carmen Rinke of Blairmore, Alta., pounded out a popular decision over Ernesto Resto of the U.S.

Earlier Friday, Ian Clyde of Montreal and Tim Taylor of Sarnia, Ont., scored victories. Clyde, fighting in what amounted to a semi-final bout because there are only four competitors in the flyweight division, scored a decision over another young Cuban, 18-year-old Hector Gonzalez.

The 24-year-old Taylor won a unanimous decision over Charlton Bent of Jamaica in the light middleweight class.

Taylor will be matched to see if today's semi-finals against Victor Savchenko of the Soviet Union, who won easily over Guyery when the referee ruled his U.S. opponent, Keith Broom, had taken too much punishment.

Clyde's victory earned the 19-year-old a berth in the fly-weight final Monday night and guaranteed the Canadian at least a silver medal.

FORWARDS TRADED

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Braves of the National Basketball Association traded forward Jack Marin to Chicago Bulls on Thursday in exchange for Chicago's first-round pick in the 1977 NBA draft.

In Memoriam

TAPP — In loving memory of a dear father Samuel Bert Tapp, who passed away November 29, 1974.
Days of sadness still come over us,
Tears in silence often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died nine months ago.
—Sadly missed by granddaughter Jane Gary Denton.

MARACLE — In loving memory of my dear mother, Alice Maracle, who passed away November 29, 1974.
You left behind an aching heart,
That loved you most sincere,
I never did, nor ever will,
Forget you, Mother dear.
—Sadly missed by daughter Bernice, Les and grandchildren Lorraine and Nicole.

MARACLE — In loving memory of my dear grandmother and great-grandmother, Alice Maracle, who passed away November 29, 1974.
Peacefully resting, safe at last,
The world's weary troubles and trials are past,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
—Sadly missed by granddaughter Jane Gary Denton and great-grandchildren Charmaine and Lindsay.

MARACLE — In loving memory of my dear mother who passed away one year ago, November 29, 1974.
From the depths of God to heavenly rest,
God took you home to be his guest,
Not when we wished but when he thought best,
And closed your eyes with tenderest care.
You did not suffer long,
I just watched you go to sleep,
God took you home, it was his will,
But oh! how hard to keep still.
So peacefully free from pain,
I could not wish you back again,
To suffer all that pain again,
Oh! dearest Mother, how we cried,
When Death took you from our side,
You will not know the heartache,
This you bore for many years,
—Sadly missed by daughter Francis and husband Ivan Maracle.

BANKEY — In loving memory of a dear wife, Stella Bankey, who passed away November 29, 1974.
Your memory is our guard upon one our each heart,
We'll farewells left unspoken, a you quietly slipped away,
You suffered much in silence, your pain we could not see,
You fought your battle with courage and will to the very end,
You tried so hard to stay with us, but your fighting was in vain,
God took you home to rest in heaven, And trusted you to care,
If you could have spoken before you died,
There are the words you would have said,
Thank you for all you've done for me past, I love you all to the very last,
Now you have found courage take,
And love one another for my sake,
—Sadly missed by husband Howard Bankey.

MARACLE — In loving memory of my mom, Alice Maracle, who passed away one year ago today, Nov. 29, 1974.
God saw you getting tired,
When a cure was not to be,
So he closed His arms around you,
And whispered, "Come to me."
You chose comfort and peace,
That you suffered for so long,
God's garden must be beautiful,
As he only takes the best,
—Sadly missed by daughter Joyce and daughter-in-law Clyde and grandson Mike Sandy and Lee Ann Maracle and family.

WILSON — In loving memory of my dear husband, Jack Wilson, who passed away Nov. 29, 1964.
Beautiful memories are wonderful things,
Dear Lord fill the longest day,
With memories of my dear husband Jack.
God can never be given away,
To some you may have forgotten,
But to me you are part of the day.
So fill me up with bread and tea,
Your memory will always last,
Deeply remembered by your daughter Mary and family.

TAPP — In loving memory of Samuel Burt who died on November 29, 1974.
The rolling progress of life flows on,
Its tide of joy and sorrow,
Recalls the past, the voice, the smile,
Of the one who died today.
—Lovingly remembered by grandchildren Jane Gary Denton and Lindsay.

Russian Jew Raises 54,000 Pigs a Year

KISHINEV, Soviet Moldavia (Reuter) — Alexander Vagabov sees it as a Moldavian Jew, one of some 100,000 in the Soviet Union's western Soviet republic. He is also the director of one of the country's largest pig farms.

With 54,000 animals in his care, his work is a key contribution to the heart of any orthodox Jew. But it symbolizes a striking change of attitude in what still is the most backward Jewish corner of the Soviet Union.

"Our faith and our traditions are dead," he said. "I am not allowed to visit the single remaining synagogue in the Moldavian capital of Kishinev. Our children, and their children, just aren't interested any more."

As the former capital of Bessarabia and one of the main cities of the old "pale of settlement" where in Tsarist times all Jews were confined by law, Kishinev is most ill-famed for its anti-Jewish pogrom of 1903, one of the worst of many that scarred the last days of the Imperial Russia.

But despite Czarist persecution that drove many abroad, and the holocaust of the Second World War, which ended 29 years of Romanian rule, so many Jews remained or returned that in 1970 one in every seven inhabitants of the city was Jewish.

Since then, some 115,000 Soviet Jews from all over the country have left for Israel, but just how much of the exodus has come from Moldavia is impossible to estimate. Local Jews denied permission to go put it as high as 10,000.

"But it's not everyone that wants to go," said the old man magnified here on the "Jewish question" where the authorities feel freer to act as they please.

Yuri Shekhtman, a 30-year-old engineer, has been waiting for 3½ years for permission to join his parents in Israel, where they left in 1970. Before that he was told he could not go with them in 1972.

"The authorities are tougher with us here and don't feel they have to explain why," he said, telling us to, "Be said, "It's very difficult for us. We are still waiting for permission."

His colleagues estimate that at least 80 Moldavian Jewish families have had visa applications turned down.

"Our problem now is that we're infected with the idea of emigration," said 27-year-old construction engineer Abram Vilenkin, one such refusenik visa. "Our souls are already in Israel and all our thoughts belong to that world."

Vitaly Gurfinkel, Shekhtman are working as laborers, having had to leave their engineering jobs. They have also had to face mounting personal attacks as "anti-Soviet renegades" from the press.

"Why do we want to go?" asked Shekhtman. "The Jews have lived in Russia for hundreds of years, but we've always been treated as second class citizens, foreigners. We always feel that we have to prove our loyalty."

The old man in the synagogue took a different view. "Things are much better now than they were under the Romanians," he said, alluding to the period from 1918 to 1940 when the left bank of the Dnestr River was ruled from Bucharest.

"Then we weren't even allowed to speak our own language. There were signs all over the shops and trains telling us to speak Romanian, although of course we spoke Yiddish in our children's home."

Passion for Egg Is No Problem

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have this passion for eggs and have enjoyed eating a soft-boiled egg almost every day since I was in 1 ass. I worry be. cause I continue to hear that eggs may create a cholesterol problem.

Presently, I am on a hypoglycemia diet on which there are other high-cholesterol foods. How dangerous is my egg-eating?—Mrs. K. T.

Unfortunately, a high-protein diet, which is usually recommended for control of hypoglycemia, may turn out to be unfather high in cholesterol, but there are ways to beat this.

I wouldn't call your egg-a-day habit a "passion," but it is a fat would boost the already high cholesterol content of your daily egg. As to your other foods such as meat, there are corners to be cut. With meat, you can cut off those heavy trimmings of fat before cooking. Look for meat that is well-marbled, but which will reduce the cholesterol-to-weight ratio, and still give you the good protein value you want for your diet.

I can't tell for sure, but I suspect your liver test may show you already have a high cholesterol reading. With hypoglycemia and cholesterol problems resulting together, it is well to investigate thyroid function. It contributes to each.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 17 years old, and I have developed a mild case of anorexia nervosa. I'm going through psychiatric treatment, and recently had a physical. My cholesterol is high and my thyroid is low. I have gained weight.

I would like to know the types of food to avoid, and what foods to eat. The doctor mentioned thyroid medication, then discarded the idea.—Miss L. A.

What you have is of appetite caused by emotional stress such as anger, fear, anxiety, and so forth.

It is encouraging that you have gained weight. This may be why your doctor has decided against a thyroid medication for you. In anorexia nervosa there is usually a lowered metabolism rate (low thyroid function) and a heightened cholesterol level in the blood. Thyroid medication may be necessary to control these problems.

In most cases of anorexia nervosa, thyroid and cholesterol food intake removes the thyroid problem.

Although psychological in origin, the condition can lead to serious physical problems if unchecked. It is most common in young, single females from puberty to the early 20's. I'm fortunate that your perceptive physician identified the condition and began treatment, psychiatric help, often the key to recovery. As to your diet, your doctor should prescribe, but generally you want foods high in protein and vitamins.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 68. About two years ago I developed overactive salivary glands. The uncomfortable and embarrassed from constantly chewing and swallowing saliva. At times I choke. I'm active and in good health. Is there anything to be done?—Mrs. A. M.

Ptyalism (TY-a-lism) gets its name from ptyalin, an enzyme present in saliva which begins the digestive process in the mouth with chewing. It breaks down starch particles, chiefly. The enzyme is present in the juices secreted into the mouth by three pairs of glands (parotid, submaxillary, and sublingual).

Hypersecretion can stem from drugs or poisons including tobacco and arsenic, or from local inflammation as in gingivitis. Nervous disorders such as migraine, motion sickness, tic douloureux, and others can cause excessive saliva also. Dentture material is often the irritant involved.

There are anti-secretory drugs that can help alleviate the salivation. Atropine is one, but it must be prescribed carefully and the patient supervised so that the opposite problem, undersecretion, does not occur. It is not used in diseases such as glaucoma.

An alkaline mouthwash can help, too.

Only Caretaker For Trailer Camp

EDMONTON (CP) — John Deren is the caretaker of what he believes is the only real estate trailer camp within a major Canadian city.

Rainbow Valley Trest and Trailer Park is located off Whitemud Drive in the southwestern portion of Edmonton on the edge of an affluest residential area. It takes up a good chunk of the 82 acres making up Whitemud Park.

"I have a lot of people come to who are surprised the camp is here," Mr. Deren said in an interview. "Other cities have a campsite on the city limits but none I can think of is within an urban limits."

Rainbow, owned by the city and supervised by the parks and recreation department, was built in 1960 in an area that was mostly bog rolling hills and pasture land at the time.

The campsite is in a valley, overlooked by a small city-owned ski hill.

"People like being this close to suburbia," said Mr. Deren, who operates with his wife in a permanent headquarters on the site. This way they're a mile from a shopping centre. Everything is handy. The downtown is close, yet people have the sensation of being in the wilderness."

The campsite is open to tourists all year.

"A lot of local people object," Mr. Deren said. "They say they should be allowed to camp at Rainbow because it's their park because that helped pay for it."

But unless campers can prove they're out-of-town residents they aren't allowed in.

"People come back here time and time again," Mr. Deren said. "They'll go miles out of their way to camp here."

The Psychic Hoax

The Amazing Randi-Dandy strikes again!

Randi (alias James Randall Zwinge) is a short, bespectacled magician from New Jersey who loudly proclaims that psychic feats are all fakes — and then duplicates them by standard conjuring tricks.

Or at least, he claims to duplicate them.

Randi recently scored a heady triumph indeed by hoaxing the world's biggest spiritualist newspaper, Psychic News of London.

Feeling as he does under his real name, James Zwinge, the magician concocted and encapsulogist (straight-jackph. Can't hold him) created the spiritualist weekly into acclaiming him as a genuine metal-bender. He named Uri Geller, who it said to have bent keys and spoons by his eyes.

The July 26 1975 issue of Psychic News beer-flicked: HIS MAKES METAL BEND WITH A ZWINGE.

The spiritualist writer, under the impression that he was being put on, told how a new bender had been referred to him by British scientist Dr. Hans Eysenck. The spiritualist paper was initially skeptical. Hanlon had difficulty in getting an interview with Randi, but confirmed after the latter's visit to England.

What, then, was he doing there? Was he just secretly showing off, claimed to be able to out-Geller Geller?

It felt someone might be doing a spoof. said the spiritualist.

However, his fears were allayed by a glowing report in the British magazine New Behavior confirmed that the metal-bender was for real.

"Yes," this journalist assured the Psychic News reporter, "Hanlon seems convinced that this man has amazing."

Thus reassured, the spiritualist periodical welcomed Randi to its editorial offices. The "47-year-old confirmed bachelor from Atlantic City," the paper described him, soon had the editors jumping with "psychic" feats.

"The exquisite gray-bearded extrovert with burning eyes seemed to radiate a magnetic aura," burbled Psychic News.

"As he stroked a teaspoon tightly, Zwinge told me he gets a sticky feeling. It's like running your finger over clear glass.

"I touched the spoon and as he stroked it. Suddenly it seemed to shudder. Then it broke cleanly in two."

Office workers pointed to other strange happenings: a letter-opener which had been straight-edge bent into a 45-degree angle; a spoon which had been used to stir tea a moment before was twisted; an office clock suddenly was running three-and-a-half hours fast.

"Zwinge had been under constant surveillance," Psychic News swore. "I was fully alert to any suggestion moves but he made none.

"At one stage he stroked a fork. He seemed unable to make any impression. But after he left I discovered it was twisted noticeably."

The account ended with a quote from the mysterious new psychic, James Zwinge: "I'm not a spiritualist. I was raised in the Anglican faith but I have no conviction one way or the other. If anything, I'm an agnostic."

This may have been the only one-liner Uriey Zwinge for the Amazing Randi-Dandy said to Psychic News.

His startling feats?

All trivially performed by misdirection ("the hand is quicker than the eye"). Make no mistake, Randi — a conjuror, not a psychic than a duck-billed platypus.

Now, who's going to break the news to England's leading spiritualist paper that he has been duped by a big, bad magician who still can't produce the experience-in a book to show that all believers in the psychic are credulous?

Animal Shelter Houses 500 Stray Dogs Here

LONDON (Reuter) — Behemoth murky columns of smoke billowing from Battersea power station. On the ground, a pack of 500 stray dogs bear witness to a remarkable British institution dedicated to animal welfare.

Since Dec. 1860, when it was first started in 1860 by philanthropist Mary Tealby in her own back yard, nearly 2½ million dogs have received food and shelter at Battersea, almost 5,000 last year alone.

Battersea Park was opened in October, giving all the dogs individual kennels under floodlighting and infra-red lamp treatment.

Battersea Dogs' Home is the last resort of wretched dog owners whose pets have gone missing within a 32-mile radius of central London.

If dogs are unclaimed after seven days they are sold, usually for about $15, depending on their health and breeding. If they are old and ill they are destroyed in the home's euthanasia unit.

"At first sight, the harsh exterior of the dogs' home, built under railway arches in a run-down area of south London suburb, has all the hallmarks of a Dickensian workhouse.

However, the devotion of the trained workers and visitors belies this.

Frank Heather, 39, joined the home as he left school.

"I adore the creatures," he said. "It would not have occurred to me to work anywhere else.

"When they arrive here they are often starving, thin and usually cruelly beaten about. We feed them up and nurse them back to health. That is a great reward for a job.

"Anyway, dogs don't answer back, do they?"

Stray dog on a London street is first taken to a police station. Every day Scotland Yard police send a letter to Battersea with details of all stations holding dogs.

Then at about 9 a.m., five specially fitted red vans set out to collect the dogs. They return to the home in early afternoon and unload the surprised and usually noisy dogs. Scotland Yard pays an annual fee for this service.

The unlucky dogs that stay any length of time at the home often catch the dreaded "Battersea cough," a curious disease whose cause is unknown, but which results in a cruel, runny nose, a whooping cough and general debility.

But with the new wing and its individual kennels it is hoped that almost all disease will be wiped out. There are three veterinary surgeons attached to the home to the public can bring their pets to a special outpatients' clinic for free treatment.

The dogs are exercised in parks behind the kennels and spend most of the time asleep in their cosy, warm kennels.

When visitors parade along the narrow concrete-floored corridors the dogs start barking in competition with each other to gain attention and fit endearing eyes on the admirer.

Monarchs are the most common inmates of Battersea, but many breeds have been represented, including such rare types as Kerry blue, Bedlington terrier, Tibetan spaniel, wolfhound, hound, Maltese terrier, Rottweiler, bloodhound, griffon and dandy Dinmont.

The home costs approximately $982,000 a year to run and relies entirely on voluntary bequests, legacies and contributions from the dog-loving British public.

Many schoolchildren send their pocket money to the home, while others take out newspaper ads to announce that they are sending money to Battersea instead of Christmas cards to their friends.

B.C. Logging Firm Plans Advisory Team

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — In an effort to safeguard ecological, esthetic and recreational values in every forest watershed under it's management on the British Columbia coast, a large logging company has established a seven-member under land-use planning advisory team.

The team, headed by wildlife biologist Ralph Keefer of Macmillan Bloedel, said his group, known by the acronym LUPAT, conducts total resource inventories on watersheds on the mainland coast, Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The idea, said Mr. Urban, is to make an inventory and assessment of the values in a watershed, not just its harvestable timber, so that they are in consultation with the B.C. Forest Service and provincial fish and wildlife branch, can prepare a logging plan which recognizes these values and makes allowance for their aesthetic, recreational and wildlife features.

"We look at things like fish cries, wildlife, soils, land form, geology, hydrology, water and recreational values," said the 36-year-old Nanaimo resident. "So we do an inventory of all of these things and then make recommendations to the loggers based on this inventory so that ecological balance can be minimized and areas of special significance would hopefully be protected."

Grant Ainscough, the company's chief forester and one of the policy makers, said the creation of LUPAT, said the team was established "in order that required data is available for planning purposes to meet the spirit and intent of MacMillan Bloedel's land-use policy."

Mr. Ainscough said LUPAT operates within the framework of the company's forest policy, in which the company recognizes its responsibility for "balance the requirements for resource development with the public desire for access to the forest and the need to maintain the quality of the environment."

"In the past, planning of this timber harvest was primarily related to the timber resource. With this new team of integrated resources management and use, knowledge of resource values other than timber is a requirement."

In addition to Mr. Urban, the team includes two soil specialists, two fisheries biologists, another wildlife biologist and a resource technician.

When LUPAT draws an assessment the first step is collection and correlation of all existing information on the area that is to be studied, in order to define important features, such as watershed study is 13 months in duration.

The first team members to go into the watershed are the soils specialist, they plot on a map that tells us basically what the physical characteristics of the watershed are—drainage patterns, rock formations, soil types, where the stable and unstable soils are located, slope gradients, things like that, Mr. Urban said.

When the soils people are finished, the wildlife people go in. They plot the use of the soils information in locating areas used by various species of animals. When these areas are identified, a detailed recommendation will be determine which species is utilizing the particular range."

Mr. Urban said his fisheries biologists are doing a relatively new approach that uses aircraft for low-altitude photographic reconnaissance supplemented by field check to provide the precise descriptions of streams, rivers, waterfalls and fish habitat.

"By using an aircraft and color photography we can cover a 10 to 40 square mile stream in a half-day of flying, and come up with information that may be as good

Sunday and Monday Horoscopes

By Bernice Bede Osol
Sunday, Nov. 24, 1974

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You have the innate ability today to inspire others to go forth and do things they know they should do, but for which they have previously lacked motivation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Review at the little flashes of brilliance that shine through an otherwise dull day. When you get a bright thought, follow through, don't belabor it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're better equipped for the short pull that long haul today. Stick to tasks that require quick bursts of energy, then rest.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A person you thought you knew well will exhibit a far deeper perception than you thought she possessed. You'll be intrigued with the discovery.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't bank too heavily on a quiet day at home today. Drop-ins are likely; but you'll relish playing host.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You are inclined to be restless today. Ease the tension by developing in on a friend for short visit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You are strangely attracted to work today. You can make a fine profit on something or that would be torn than two ways at once.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If something comes up on which you need to make a decision, decide yourself for reason is out. Others would only confuse you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You could feel pressed into a corner today, but don't fret. You'll work your way out in a manner that may amaze even you with its originality.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Concentrate on your newest interest today. Though it seems frivolous, it may, in the future, prove to be a first foundation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You will do something by impulse that could smear your friends and even yourself. After the surprise, reaction will be in your favor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Plan ahead today. Destiny is in your pounce upon it at the first blush, you can capitalize on luck today. If you hesitate, it is lost.

* * *

If today is Monday, Dec. 2, ARIES (March 21-April 19) Is business negotiations today, rather than the immediate one. Plan ahead for your interviews.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You have a good day to bring to the surface little problems that have caused you trouble with a co-worker. They can be ironed out amicably.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you approach your work in the proper frame of mind today your tasks will not be nearly as difficult as you imagined.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can't delegate the managerial role today,on a matter requiring your personal supervision. Don't trust anything.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be receptive to financial opportunities today. If the majority sees things a certain way, it could be they're right and you're wrong.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This can be a profitable day for you, businesswise if you're not afraid to bargain. Call the other guy's bluff if need be.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Give some thought today to better organizing your financial affairs. Returns will be greater if you handle them well now.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You needn't feel reluctant today about calling to one who is longing for your own good for a friendly chat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You have some information but that could give you additional leverage in dealing with a friend. Use it cautiously.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A friend may impose upon you today for a favor. Do what you can to help. You'll be sure you can to help. You'll be sure won't perceive.

Olympic Construction

Officials Deny Cover-up Charge

MONTREAL (CP) — Denials were flying Friday over accusations of a cover-up in an investigation of the construction of Olympic Village.

Recent published reports accused Guy Tourjin, security chief for the 1976 Olympic Games, of allegedly hindering a police investigation into alleged loss of fraud and corruption.

However Mr. Tourjin, also deputy director of the Montreal Urban Community (MUC) police, denied Friday the reports, which quoted unnamed police sources.

Mr. Tourjin admitted that the investigation was opened in June by two Montreal police officers checking a transaction involving the sale of seven mobile homes to the Les Terrasses Zurslega Inc. consortium, which is building the village.

He said the investigation was released several weeks later after the case was handed over to the RCMP on the advice of the MUC's legal department.

He said he took the file to the RCMP, who "felt it was deserving of more attention."

Earlier this week, Paul-Emile L'Esperer, MUC security council president, ordered an inquiry into the alleged police interference in the investigation.

He said he ordered the investigation after reading published reports that an unnamed high-ranking police official had told a person suspected of fraud and corruption in the Olympic Village deal.

Meanwhile, the RCMP and Quebec Provincial Police served about 45 search warrants during the week on several persons connected with Olympic Village transactions as investigations into the alleged fraud continued.

In Quebec City Friday, Solicitor-General Fernand Lalonde said "other warrants and seizures will probably be necessary to shed additional light on the investigation," adding that inquiries might extend to the construction of other Olympics facilities, such as the stadium and velodrome.

CP News Roundup

Toronto Bakers Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto baking firms were fined $10,000 each after they were convicted of charges laid under the federal Food and Drug Act, the health protection branch of the department of health and welfare announced Friday.

Open Window Bakery Ltd. was convicted of four charges arising from manufacturing under unsanitary conditions and the discovery of animal substances in the plant.

Canada Bread Co. Ltd., a division of Corporate Foods Ltd. of Toronto, was convicted of two charges under Section 7 of the act, which deals with unhearful manufacture for sale of food articles under unsanitary conditions.

More Bonds Bought

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will complete its 1975 borrowing with a new issue of $225 million in short-and long-term bonds Dec. 15, the finance department announced Friday.

The new borrowing will include three-year bonds, due Dec. 15, 1978, and paying 8¼ per cent interest. It will also include an issue maturing in 19 years, 9½ months, due Oct. 1, 1995, at 10 per cent interest.

Doctor Infects Patients

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Patricia Taylor told a Canadian Public Health Association meeting Thursday that a surgeon with hepatitis B infected a number of his patients and an apparently healthy dentist caused a recent outbreak of the disease.

Dr. Taylor of the Laboratory Centre for Disease Control told delegates that some health workers face a high risk of contracting the disease from patients and, conversely, patients from health workers.

Bail Hearing Adjourned

TORONTO (CP) — A bail hearing for one of eight persons charged in connection with the Aug. 3 seizure of 225 pounds of a chemical drug was adjourned Friday until Dec. 5.

The hearing for Alan George Templain, 35, of Wawa, Ont., was held over after Crown and defence lawyers argued whether a Supreme Court of Ontario justice has jurisdiction to hear the case. The Crown says he does not.

Montreal 'Godfather' Named During Crime Commission

MONTREAL (CP) — Paolo Violi has replaced Vincenzo Cotroni as the "godfather" of the Montreal underworld, an honorary witness told the Quebec Police Commission hearings into organized crime Friday.

The witness, who spoke from behind a canvas screen through a voice-distorting microphone, was described by police as "well-placed" in the underworld.

The rigid security measures were necessary to protect the witness, the inquiry was told.

"We can tell him what would happen if it was discovered who this man is," commission lawyer Pierre Paradis.

Cotroni, whom the witness said once headed organized crime in Montreal, now acts as an adviser to Violi.

"Paolo Violi is 1,000 men," the witness said. "a man feared and respected by gangsters who regard him as a god."

Cotroni appeared briefly at the inquiry Friday and was ordered to reappear Dec. 11 when a second appearance in two days after being granted a temporary suspension of his sentence for narcotics smuggling in New York earlier this year, was denied.

Paolo Violi was known to have conspired to kill Vincenzo Cotroni, the "godfather" of the Montreal underworld, the witness said.

The mystery witness testified about a series of inter-gang murders in the summer of 1973.

To stop the bloodletting, he said, Violi called a "summit meeting" of major Italian mobsters, including Cotroni, Santos (Frank) Cotroni, Carlo Arena, Antonio Mucci and Joe Maiolo, at a downtown hotel.

The order was given to stop a proposed "massacre of French-Canadians" planned by younger Italian underworld elements in avenge the slaying of two of their number and three policemen reluctantly compiled.

The witness explained that Violi was "money-hungry" and instead of delegating authority through his "lieutenants," dealt directly with his young clients."

He said Violi took over the operation of Leigi Greco, an underworld chief who died in a fire here in 1973, and then Greco's people reported directly to him since then.

Three Canadian Industries Halted by Strikes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Strikes continued this week to disrupt local service, the pulp-and-paper industry and schools in Canada.

Local delivery had resumed in some areas because a number of the 22,000 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers are back on the job but most of the inside postal workers are on strike for their 40th day.

About 1,100 workers at a newsprint mill in Cranbrook, B.C., voted this week to join thousands of other pulp-and-paper workers on strike in various contract demands. Some workers in the industry have been on strike since the summer.

Meanwhile, school teachers in the Montreal area continued separate work disruptions to protest the Quebec government's latest contract offer. The 8,000 secondary school teachers in Metropolitan Toronto who went on strike Nov. 12 were told Friday by the federal anti-inflation board that the latest offer to the teachers from their school board was in excess of what the anti-inflation board would consider appropriate.

Earlier in the week, the post office workers and the union's national executive met Friday to consider it. An official of the Saskatoon local said regional meetings will be held across the country Sunday to discuss the latest contract offer, of which details were given.

Contract negotiations continued in Vancouver for workers in the British Columbia pulp-and-paper industry who are on the job but a number of industry workers remained on strike in the East.

About 25,000 members of the Canadian Paperworkers Union in the Atlantic provinces, Quebec and Ontario are seeking a 32-an-hour this fall seeking a $2-an-hour wage increase to a base hourly rate of $4.85 and average hourly wage of $5.70.

In Ontario, where about 12,000 pulp-and-paper workers are on strike, the labor ministry has invited the presidents of mills affected by the strikes to a meeting sometime next week, a ministry spokesman said Friday.

In Tuesday, federal Labor Minister John Munro said he would ask presidents of pulp-and-paper companies to resume negotiations with striking workers.

Frank Cotroni, who was sentenced to 15 years for narcotics smuggling in New York earlier this year, was a "lieutenant" to Violi, he said. Among the members of Frank Cotroni's gang were Di Maulo, Arena, and Irving Goldstein, the witness testified.

Gillies Attacks Controls

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — The program of selective wage and price restraint introduced by the federal government has lost its punch, says James Gillies, MP for the Toronto riding of Don Valley and a candidate for the federal leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

Speaking Thursday night to the Nipissing Progressive Conservative Association, Mr. Gillies criticized the Liberal government for what he termed a lack of "real regard for the interests or needs of Canadians."

He said the restraint program has lost its initial impact because the government spent too much time "fooling around" in implementing restraint measures.

Details Needed

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Alan Hay, executive director of the Ontario Hospital Association, said Friday the provincial government should explain to hospitals and the public its plans for reductions in hospital services.

"We do know that the ministry (of health) has been giving serious thought to closing as many as 3,700 active treatment beds across the province," he told a service club meeting.

"That would be close to 10 per cent of the total," he said, and it might result in the loss of 4,000 jobs.

"Our association could not endorse the closure of so many beds at this time. There must be clearer evidence shared with the public and the hospitals that the government has an objective, well-considered program that it will pursue vigorously and fairly for all communities. A test of his speech was released prior to delivery.
